Terrific Battle Over London Ends With Flight from Area by Germans

Defenders Subject Invaders to Furious Attacks and only a Few Bombs Are Dropped

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 13 (Friday) — German raiders bucking terrific anti-aircraft fire stabbed at London repeatedly last night and early today, dropping high explosives and fire bombs, some of which crashed in the central area.

But the heavy barrage erected over the city apparently succeeded as on the previous night in blunting the main force of the attacks. Time and again mass formations of planes upon meeting the curtain of bursting shrapnel turned away from the city to loose their bombs on London's outskirts.

Just after 3 a. m., (EST) the most determined thrust of the night were made against mid-London. Showers of heavy bombs and incendiaries rained down in two directions, and the antiaircraft racket was deafening.

Raid Every 15 Minutes

With almost clock-like precision many of the raids came at fifteen minute intervals. The sound of planes nearing the city immediately brought the violent reaction of ground guns tossing tons of shells into the murky sky.

A hail of anti-aircraft sharpnel fell on rooftops and streets. Police and air raid wardens remained above ground during this inferno of firing to report fires and locate any delayed-action bombs that fell.

Now and then a house or building in some districts of the city collapsed like an aspirin tossed into a glass of water. The ground trembled both with German bombs and the slamming of the "Archie" defenders.

Some casualties were reported but the attacks were believed less damaging than any night since the heavy raiding began last Saturday.

After each German attack subsided the streets became ominously quiet and in the Fleet street area the hum of printing presses was heard. London newspapers had their first chance since Saturday to get editions out on time.

Sixth Straight Night Raid

The sixth straight night attack began at 9:11 p. m. (3:11 p. m. EST) and the first wave of Nazi planes smashed at the city in an assault lasting an hour and fifteen minutes before the sound of their motors died away as did the barrage. The alarm continued, however, through the night.

For fifteen minutes the city—lying under a sharp, squally early fall rain, was silent.

But then, the guns—which on Wednesday night had fired half a million rounds — thundered again, fighting a second wave. They, too, died shortly.

The streets were alight with gunfire; at one time the explosions of falling bombs could barely be heard above the rolling boom of the antiaircraft.

"Suicide Squad" Piling Sandbags On 500 Pound Nazi "Sleeper" Bomb

Huge Delayed Explosive Is Near Cathedral in Center of City

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP)—A "suicide squad" piled sandbags high tonight around a Nazi time bomb in the shadow of St. Paul's—England's greatest cathedral—while residents of the old "City of London," lying about the famous dome, waited nervously for it to explode.

While they waited, another time bomb, likewise pre-discovered, exploded with a thunderous roar in another central London thoroughfare. Property on both sides of the street was damaged severely and the roadway choked with debris.

Try to Protect Church

The sandbags at St. Paul's were put in position to break the force of the blast, if and when it comes, and to protect the historic church, where Nelson, Wellington and others of England's heroes are entombed.

Traffic was stopped on streets that circle the cathedral and the area of greatest danger was roped off.

Even through today's air raid alarm the "suicide squad" worked. Police acknowledged cautiously that "some apprehension" was felt about what might happen to the great church. One bobby said he understood the buried missile was a "500-pounder."

The dean left the cathedral and persons living nearby were warned to get out of their houses.

The delayed-action projectile is similar to the one which tore off a corner of Buckingham palace Tuesday. Persons nearby heard the scream of the falling bomb last night, but no explosion followed. The Buckingham palace bomb took two days to explode.

Other "Sleepers" Found

There have been a number of these "sleepers" in London, and there may be many more, buried in gardens and debris. Only yesterday, one of them killed five rescue workers near an East London school where hundreds were trapped by a direct hit.

When they are discovered picked "suicide squads," usually made up of men from the royal engineers, try to smother them with sandbags and earth.

The bombs contain no clock; the timing apparatus consists of an oxydized plate on which acid begins to eat when the bomb is released from a plane.

Conferees Give Final Approval To Draft Bill

Administration Now Confident It Will Become Law in Few Days

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP) — Senate-House conferees broadened a clause empowering the government to seize industrial units for defense purposes today and then gave the peace-time conscription bill their final approval.

The administration leadership was hopeful, meanwhile, that the measure could be on its way to the White House in a day or so. They believed the two intervening legislative processes—approval of the compromise version of the bill by the Senate and House might be completed tomorrow.

The joint army and navy Selective Service Committee, which has been making plans for conscription for fourteen years, stood by ready to put its carefuly worked-out arrangements into effect as soon as Congress votes funds.

Proclamation First Step

The first step, under the terms of the measure would be a proclamation by the president, and within two weeks after that the military and naval officials, planned to complete the registration of the men affected—all between twenty-one and thirty-five inclusive. Further, they expected to begin drafting men within a month thereafter.

Yesterday, the conference committee voted that the act should permit the conscription of industries, whose owners refuse to co-

Less Children in State of Virginia

Loss of 23,117 of School Age Since 1935, Report Shows

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 12. (AP)—A net loss since 1935 of 23,117 in the number of children of school age was reported today by the State Department of Education.

The 1940 census of those between the ages of seven and nineteen inclusive showed Virginia's declining birthrate of the past several years meant a smaller school population.

The drop, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, state superintendent of public instruction, pointed out, was recorded despite an increase in total state population, indicating that the population as a whole is growing "older."

The school census, carried out by the education officials showed a total of 712,081 persons within the 7-19 year bracket compared with the 735,198 tabulated in the last enumerated of 1935. The census has been taken every five years since 1910 in accord with provisions of state law and this is the first time the upward trend has been halted.

"The loss in school population definitely indicates the necessity of careful planning with reference to future school building construction," Dr. Hall declared.

The enumeration showed a gain in school population of 17,812 in 35 counties but a loss of 33,586 in the other 65 counties, or a net loss for the counties of 15,774. Among the cities, six showed gains totaling 1,895 while the other 18 had losses aggregating 9,238, making a net loss for the cities of 7,343.

Fascist Attempt To Cross Border Is Believed Near On a Wide Front

Firing Between Italian and British Units Indicates Start of Long Predicted Offensive

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 12 (AP)—Artillery fire rumbled on the Egypt-Libya border tonight with increasing intensity after fresh Italian troops moved up near the border and the British got set for the long-awaited Fascist offensive into Egypt.

The firing between British and Italian advance units echoed after British fliers returned from reconnaissance flights to report the new movement of Fascist forces into Bardia from the Libyan interior.

The Italians also were reported strengthening their lines on a triangular area between Azeiz, Bardia and Fort Capuzzo. The latter recently has been subjected to heavy shelling by British naval units operating off the coast.

Bolstering British units, Egyptian forces moved up near the Libyan border after having been withdrawn two months ago.

Egypt is an ally of Britain, but thus far has not declared war on the Axis powers. That declaration is expected, however, once the Italians slash into Egypt.

Many military observers believe the Italian invasion—when it comes—will be timed with Adolf Hitler's projected troop thrust against England.

(Unofficial reports circulated in Rome tonight that the Italians already had begun the attack on Egypt.)

A Fascist authority said he had heard such rumors but was unable to confirm them. It was indicated,

Merit System Changes Planned by Committee

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 12 (AP)—A subcommittee of the legislative council will report Oct. 16 on proposed changes in the merit system law.

Senator Philip Dorsey (D-St. Mary's), subcommittee chairman, said his group was considering the question of establishing a three-man merit system board and changes in the veterans' preference act.

Another proposal, made by Thomas Grogan, director of the Maryland classified employes' association, would include state laborers in the classified service.

Dorsey said the proposed three-man board would set policies and hear appeals. The present state employment commissioner would be retained as director.

Veterans' organizaitions, he asserted, favor abolishing credits given war veterans to help them pass examinations, but favor retention of the law which gives those veterans passing examinations preference over other candidates for state jobs.

The present law excludes from the classified service state employes making less than $650 a year. Grogan favors a reduction in this amount so that laborers would be included in the merit system.

Men Will Start Service in a Few Months, Governor Asserts

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12 (AP) — Governor O'Conor said in a Defender's day address today that the Maryland national guard would be called up for federal service "within the next several months."

"The war department has just informed me of the approximate date when the Maryland national guard will be called into federal service," the governor told the Kiwanis club.

"Because it is a part of the army training plans, the date can not be disclosed, but it will be within the next several months."

O'Conor also outlined plans for the formation of a home guard to take over the duties of the national guard and said he had suggested that World War veterans form the nucleus of the organization.

"I am advised today from Washington," he said, "that the pending federal legislation authorizing the formation of this guard under the direction of the state is moving toward final passage."

The governor's address was one of several Defender's day events marking the anniversary of the successful defense of Baltimore in the Battle of North Point in the war of 1812.

Germans Admit Severe Losses in Big Cities

But Claim Fires Are Mostly in the Residential Sections

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 12 — Germany sent more bombers back across the English channel today on their unending assignment of attrition against London, but here in Berlin the Nazis angrily doused new flames left by the raiding British.

Berlin, Bremen, Hamburg—all suffering in an early morning attack by the Royal Air Force which was acknowledged by the German high command to have brought "numerous fires and damages."

But this damage, it was declared, was confined to the residential quarters of these three major German cities. The dead were put at 14; the injured at 41.

For an hour and thirty-two minutes, the British bombers rode the

Miner Kills Girl Who Spurned Him

Calls Teacher Out of School and Shoots Her to Death

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP)—Slight improvement was reported tonight in the condition of a 35-year-old miner who, State Motor Patrolman Walter Heuer said, summoned an attractive young teacher from her classroom, shot her to death and then wounded himself in a rage of jealousy.

Heuer reported the miner, William Kuhns, was estranged from his wife and had been courting the 29-year-old teacher, Carolyn Dellamea, for several months. "Trouble started" between the two, the officer said, when Miss Dellamea learned he was married and told him she was "breaking off" their friendship.

The patrolman gave this version of the shooting yesterday:

Kuhns knocked at the door of Miss Dellamea's classroom in the Royal school, twelve miles from here, and called her into an entryway. They talked a few moments and then Miss Dellamea screamed: "Don't do that."

Two pistol shots sounded, frightening Miss Deddamea's pupils, some of whom leaped from windows of the building. Miss Dellamea slumped to the floor, with two bullet wounds in the chest. Kuhns turned the gun on himself, firing into his chest.

Heuer said charges against Kuhns would await the outcome of the miner's condition, which was still critical despite some improvement. Kuhns' wife was reported living in New York with her three children.

GOP Congressmen To Back Willkie, Rep. Martin Says

Chairman of Republican Committee Denies Party Is Divided

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 12 (AP) — Although acknowledging he had differed with Wendell L. Willkie over the proposed sixty-day postponement of conscription, Chairman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the Republican National Committee declared today that Congressional Republicans would would cooperate with Willkie "after he becomes president."

With Senator Charles L. McNary, Willkie's running mate, and Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, Willkie and Martin discussed campaign plans here. Much of the session, Martin said, was devoted to details of Willkie's western speaking tour, on which the nominee leaves tonight from Rushville, Ind.

Martin, talking with reporters after the conference, said that while some Republican Congressmen "may differ with Mr. Willkie" on postponing conscription, "the country wants Congress to do some thinking of its own."

Willkie recently expressed hope that a House-approved amendment postponing conscription would be eliminated by a joint Senate-House conference committee. The committee took that action yesterday.

Hercules Company Buildings Blown Off of the Map; Cause Is Unknown

Federal Bureau of Investigation Probing Possibility of Sabotage; Wide Area Rocked

KENVIL, N. J., Sept. 12. (AP)—Eight tons of powder exploded at the hercules powder company's plant here today, sending at least twenty-nine men to their deaths, injuring 125 others, many seriously, and making a shambles of plant buildings and surrounding woodland.

The powder blew up in two mighty blasts, followed by a succession of smaller explosions, rocking the countryside for miles around. The concussions were felt as far away as Danbury, Conn., 125 miles to the east. The plant was virtually wiped off the map.

Fire swept through the ruins and trees, hampering rescue efforts by scores of state police, firemen and residents of Kenvil and nearby Dover. The flames for a time threatened magazines containing explosives.

Several hours after the last frightful detonation the smouldering ruins were too hot to permit digging in some sections of the plant for the mangled bodies of the dead.

Slightly injured employes and others who escaped bodily injury were so dazed by the force of the explosion that it was several hours before they could even talk coherently and give descriptions of what happened inside the plant grounds.

Many Women Hysterical

Relatives of workers rushed to the plant gate after the first explosions. Many women became hysterical as the magnitude of the disaster dawned upon them.

As workers who were able to make their way to safety emerged many could be heard asking in hushed, anguished voices:

"Did you see Joe?"

"What about Bill?"

To some the answers brought smiles of relief, to others taut lips, drawn faces and tears.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, superintendent of state police, said that "by tomorrow there will be between forty-five and fifty dead."

Several of the injured "will probably die," he added.

William C. Hunt, of Wilmington, Del., in charge of the company's explosives department, said that twenty-nine men were killed—nineteen of them twisted and burned beyond recognition. He said about twenty-five others could not be accounted for.

Damage over Wide Area

Brick and concrete walls of nearly a score of structures crumpled like cardboard and windows were shattered and furniture damaged in buildings miles away. Trees were denuded of foliage and bark. Some snapped off like matchsticks. All around the explosion area was a scene of burned, blackened and smoking desolation.

Mrs. Angie Washer, operator of the Morris plains fire tower, twelve miles from the scene, was credited by state police with giving the first

Frantic Relatives Seek To Find And Identify Explosion Missing

KENVIL, N. J., Sept. 12 (AP)—The grounds surrounding Dover general hospital were a bedlam of frantic relatives tonight, all seeking information regarding members of their families employed at the Hercules Powder Company plant.

Inside doctors and nurses worked at top-speed carrying for the dying and those injured in the plant blast today. In the operating room Drs. William F. Costello and A. L. Baker, members of the hospital staff, had performed nearly fifty emergency operations by 7 p. m.

A short distance away a building occupied by the St. Mary's Athletic Association was turned into an emergency hospital and more than a score of badly hurt men lay there as doctors and nurses sought to ease their pains. Others were taken to hospitals in nearby Morristown.

Ambulances, private cars bearing doctors, Red Cross workers and hundreds of the curious clogged the roads leading here and state police estimated unofficially that more than 10,000 cars were parked or moving in the area.

Believes Many Buried

Dr. C. A. Plume of Succasunna, a physician at the plant, declared that "a lot of men must be buried in the ruins."

"I was getting into my car to drive to the plant," he said, "when I heard a big bang. A solid column of smoke went into the air—probably 200 feet. That was the heaviest blast. It was followed by another big

U. S.-Japanese War Looms, Kokumin Says

Japanese Newspaper Declares Relations Are at Danger Point; Asserts U. S. Is Unfriendly

TOKYO, Sept. 13 (Friday) (AP)—The newspaper Kokumin, close to the army, declared today that relations between Japan and the United States were "fraught with the danger of war" and that the Japanese government therefore was making special efforts to reach a rapprochement with Soviet Russia to guard its rear.

"This dangerous and gloomy situation is all of America's making," said Kokumin, asserting that the United States was offering Japan severe strategic, economic and political opposition.

"So far as Japan is concerned there is nothing the United States has done or is contemplating doing that is friendly or reasonable," the paper declared. "Everything is provocative and over-bearing."

Willkie Scores LaGuardia after Latter Comes Out for Roosevelt

By The Associated Press

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York city came out last night (Thursday) for a third term for President Roosevelt.

"I prefer (President) Roosevelt with his known faults to Mr. Willkie with his unknown virtues," the mayor said in a broadcast address. He announced that Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska Independent, would serve ah honorary chairman of "an independent committee for Roosevelt." His radio time vas paid for by the Democratic National Committee.

LaGuardia has been elected to Congress as both a Republican and a Socialist. He said in his radio address that he belonged to no party.

Scores New Deal

The Republican nominee said these leaders were Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City—"that great lover of civil liberties"—and Mayor Edward Kelly of Chicago—"that boss of the sewer gang."

Among other of the day's political developments was on acknowledgement by Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican national chairman, that there were differences of opinion between some party members in Congress and Willkie over conscription.

"Suicide Squad" Piling Sandbags On 500 Pound Nazi "Sleeper" Bomb

Huge Delayed Explosive Is Near Cathedral in Center of City

O'Conor Says Md. Guard Call Will Be Given Soon

Men Will Start Service in a Few Months, Governor Asserts

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12 (AP) — Governor O'Conor said in a Defender's day address today that the Maryland national guard would be called up for federal service "within the next several months."

"The war department has just informed me of the approximate date when the Maryland national guard will be called into federal service," the governor told the Kiwanis club.

"Because it is a part of the army training plans, the date can not be disclosed, but it will be within the next several months."

O'Conor also outlined plans for the formation of a home guard to take over the duties of the national guard and said he had suggested that World War veterans form the nucleus of the organization.

"I am advised today from Washington," he said, "that the pending federal legislation authorizing the formation of this guard under the direction of the state is moving toward final passage."

The governor's address was one of several Defender's day events marking the anniversary of the successful defense of Baltimore in the Battle of North Point in the war of 1812.

Germans Admit Severe Losses in Big Cities

But Claim Fires Are Mostly in the Residential Sections

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 12 — Germany sent more bombers back across the English channel today on their unending assignment of attrition against London, but here in Berlin the Nazis angrily doused new flames left by the raiding British.

Berlin, Bremen, Hamburg—all suffering in an early morning attack by the Royal Air Force which was acknowledged by the German high command to have brought "numerous fires and damages."

But this damage, it was declared, was confined to the residential quarters of these three major German cities. The dead were put at 14; the injured at 41.

For an hour and thirty-two minutes, the British bombers rode the

Calls Teacher Out of School and Shoots Her to Death

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP)—Slight improvement was reported tonight in the condition of a 35-year-old miner who, State Motor Patrolman Walter Heuer said, summoned an attractive young teacher from her classroom, shot her to death and then wounded himself in a rage of jealousy.

Heuer reported the miner, William Kuhns, was estranged from his wife and had been courting the 29-year-old teacher, Carolyn Dellamea, for several months. "Trouble started" between the two, the officer said, when Miss Dellamea learned he was married and told him she was "breaking off" their friendship.

The patrolman gave this version of the shooting yesterday:

Kuhns knocked at the door of Miss Dellamea's classroom in the Royal school, twelve miles from here, and called her into an entryway. They talked a few moments and then Miss Dellamea screamed:

"Don't do that."

Two pistol shots sounded, frightening Miss Deddamea's pupils, some of whom leaped from windows of the building. Miss Dellamea slumped to the floor, with two bullet wounds in the chest. Kuhns turned the gun on himself, firing into his chest.

Heuer said charges against Kuhns would await the outcome of the miner's condition, which was still critical despite some improvement. Kuhns' wife was reported living in New York with her three children.

GOP Congressmen To Back Willkie, Rep. Martin Says

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 12 (AP) — Although acknowledging he had differed with Wendell L. Willkie over the proposed sixty-day postponement of conscription, Chairman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the Republican National Committee declared today that Congressional Republicans would would cooperate with Willkie "after he becomes president."

With Senator Charles L. McNary, Willkie's running mate, and Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, Willkie and Martin discussed campaign plans here. Much of the session, Martin said, was devoted to details of Willkie's western speaking tour, on which the nominee leaves tonight from Rushville, Ind.

Martin, talking with reporters after the conference, said that while some Republican Congressmen "may differ with Mr. Willkie" on postponing conscription, "the country wants Congress to do some thinking of its own."

Willkie recently expressed hope that a House-approved amendment postponing conscription would be eliminated by a joint Senate-House conference committee. The committee took that action yesterday.

Frantic Relatives Seek To Find And Identify Explosion Missing

KENVIL, N. J., Sept. 12 (AP)—The grounds surrounding Dover general hospital were a bedlam of frantic relatives tonight, all seeking information regarding members of their families employed at the Hercules Powder Company plant.

Inside doctors and nurses worked at top-speed carrying for the dying and those injured in the plant blast today. In the operating room Drs. William F. Costello and A. L. Baker, members of the hospital staff, had performed nearly fifty emergency operations by 7 p. m.

A short distance away a building occupied by the St. Mary's Athletic Association was turned into an emergency hospital and more than a score of badly hurt men lay there as doctors and nurses sought to ease their pains. Others were taken to hospitals in nearby Morristown.

Ambulances, private cars bearing doctors, Red Cross workers and hundreds of the curious clogged the roads leading here and state police estimated unofficially that more than 10,000 cars were parked or moving in the area.

Believes Many Buried

Dr. C. A. Plume of Succasunna, a physician at the plant, declared that "a lot of men must be buried in the ruins."

"I was getting into my car to drive to the plant," he said, "when I heard a big bang. A solid column of smoke went into the air—probably 200 feet. That was the heaviest blast. It was followed by another big

U. S.-Japanese War Looms, Kokumin Says

Japanese Newspaper Declares Relations Are at Danger Point; Asserts U. S. Is Unfriendly

TOKYO, Sept. 13 (Friday) (AP)—The newspaper Kokumin, close to the army, declared today that relations between Japan and the United States were "fraught with the danger of war" and that the Japanese government therefore was making special efforts to reach a rapprochement with Soviet Russia to guard its rear.

"This dangerous and gloomy situation is all of America's making," said Kokumin, asserting that the United States was offering Japan severe strategic, economic and political opposition.

"So far as Japan is concerned there is nothing the United States has done or is contemplating doing that is friendly or reasonable," the paper declared. "Everything is provocative and over-bearing."

Willkie Scores LaGuardia after Latter Comes Out for Roosevelt

By The Associated Press

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York city came out last night (Thursday) for a third term for President Roosevelt.

"I prefer (President) Roosevelt with his known faults to Mr. Willkie with his unknown virtues," the mayor said in a broadcast address. He announced that Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska Independent, would serve ah honorary chairman of "an independent committee for Roosevelt." His radio time vas paid for by the Democratic National Committee.

LaGuardia has been elected to Congress as both a Republican and a Socialist. He said in his radio address that he belonged to no party.

Scores New Deal

The Republican nominee said these leaders were Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City—"that great lover of civil liberties"—and Mayor Edward Kelly of Chicago—"that boss of the sewer gang."

Among other of the day's political developments was on acknowledgement by Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican national chairman, that there were differences of opinion between some party members in Congress and Willkie over conscription.

Bremen Blazing, British Aviator Says after Raid

"And What a Fire", He Reports upon His Return to London

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP)—"Bremen is on fire—and what a fire," was the first remark of a British bomber pilot returning from a raid over Germany today.

Said another:

"Fires are blazing all over the place, making a solid triangle of flame. It looked bad enough from 10,000 feet. On the ground it must have been an inferno."

Bremen Bombed Two Hours

Pilots said Bremen was bombed for two hours. They also said bombs dropped on the railway yards at Coblenz caused numerous fires and started a series of sharp explosions as though an ammunition train was hit.

At Cologne, they reported, bombs burst on a railway line and straddled a bridge across the Rhine, causing fires and explosions.

Reports from pilots compiled by the air ministry news service told of British bombers pounding German docks and "invasion bases," railheads and airdromes for hours on end. The raids extended from the channel coast to the Baltic Sea and included inland towns as well.

The German-occupied ports of Calais, Boulogne and Flushing and Germany's own Hamburg, Bremen, Bremerhaven and Wilhelmshaven had the contents of British bomb racks emptied on them, the British reports declared.

German Barges Attacked

Docks at Flushing, The Netherlands, where a large number of barges were moored were bombed persistently for an hour and a concentration of barges higher up the coast were hit and damaged, these reports said.

More barges were reported hit and damaged at Ostend, Belgium, where during a four-hour raid bombs were dropped on docks and basins. Here fires were reported raging in all parts of the harbor.

BRITISH "WRENS" REST AS BOMBERS STRAFE CITY

sky over the center of Berlin.

Railway Station Bombed

British official announcements said the Auhalter railway station and the big Temple of airdrome in the city had been bombarded, but correspondents who visited these places failed to find any evidence of damage.

The Germans said there was no important military damage.

For their part—even as they made the announcement that "more planes have departed to strike retaliatory blows" — the Germans claimed a growing success for their campaign to break Britain and British resistance by ceaseless attack from the skies.

33 Fires in London

Pilots returning tonight said they counted thirty-three fires in London and declared some dock and industrial district had been bombed out of all recognition.

During last night and early today, they said, they turned heavy bomb fire on British dock and harbor facilities, utilities plants, airplane hangars, oil tanks—every sort of concentration vital to the British defense.

Damage Arsenal

Among the targets heavily hit, it was declared, was Britain's Woolwich arsenal, in the region of the lower Thames. Above that munitions center, the Germans said, fire leaped several hundred yards into the air.

A British destroyer and four merchant ships were declared to have been set afire in a dive bombing attack upon a convoy at the mouth of the Thames, and two other convoyed vessels hit by bombs.

Expect Nightly Bombings

At home, the Nazis indirectly disclosed that almost nightly British raids on Berlin are now expected; they put under way a campaign to have the people go to bed early, and thus to get all the sleep possible before the sirens shriek.

A new "example of British unfairness" was offered: authorized German sources asserted that the British fliers, seeking to cut Germany's food supplies at the root, were throwing bags of "Colorado potato bugs" into the potato fields in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium with the notion of letting nature take its course to reduce the yield of that crop.

(Authoritative British circles in London denied the charge.)

German raiders returning late last night from England reported bombing west and central London, including the vicinity of Waterloo bridge, and said they observed a chain of fires stretching from the southeast coast all the way to London.

The fires, they said, marked spots where the vanguards of the night raiders had dived on British objectives.

No Raids on Berlin

While Berliners slept without interruption by air-raid alarms, informed quarters said "retaliation" flights to England would continue without abatement; that, in fact, yesterday's British bombings of Hamburg and Bremen with fourteen killed, called for more "retaliation."

It was stated that besides the Thursday night raids on London, the Nazi planes also visited Liverpool, Birkenhead, Cardiff, Bristol and other places.

A spokesman said that although Berlin remained quiet, British planes had crossed into Germany during the night. He said they either were turned back or had objectives other than the capital.

one and then several smaller ones. I don't know just how many.

"When I got to the plant hospital debris was falling all around. The clock had stopped at 1:30 p. m. I guess that's the time of the first explosion. Every window in the place was smashed and the walls buckled. The only one in there was Miss Grace Heckmann, a nurse. She was not even scratched. It was a miracle."

Identification Difficult

The business of identifying the dead and the maimed proceeded slowly. Every man employed there—there were no women workers in the plant—wore an identification number but these were often obliterated or blown completely away.

Three men who died after arrival at the hospital were burned almost beyond recognition. They were Ray Gulick, of Wharton, Jess Bennett, address unknown, and R. Turks, address also unknown.

Clergymen of all faiths came to Dover hospital to seek out members of their flocks among the injured.

"I saw hell in France but it was nothing like this," was the comment of one of them, The Rev. E. Glenn Van Tilburg, of St. John's Methodist Church, Wharton. He was a U. S. army chaplain in the World War.

Another minister, The Rev. L. E. Wright, of the First Methodist church, Succasunna, helped carry the injured into the hospital. Standing on the hospital steps later he read off a partial list of the injured and asked the crowd to be patient while the slow process of identification continued.

"I know," he told one mother who begged for news of her son, "you are not the only mother who has to stand here and wait."

Cool-headed teachers averted panic at the Rockaway township high and grammar schools a half a mile from the plant. The blasts rocked the buildings and shattered windows while 450 high school and about 600 grammar school pupils were in their classrooms.

The teachers, after sounding fire alarms, organized the pupils into orderly files and marched them out of the building.

Hubert Champney, board of education member, said windows were broken and two chandeliers fell on the side of the grammar school building nearest the powder plant. A few children were slightly hurt by flying glass, he added.

The Dover hospital could not accommodate the rush of victims in its surgical rooms. Many were treated in hallways. Dover residents contributed blankets.

Bar Association Refuses To Commit Itself on Third Term

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12. (AP)—The American Bar Association sidestepped the presidential third term controversy at a spirited session of its sixty-third annual convention today and refused to commit itself on President Roosevelt's ambitions for another four years in the White House.

By a vote of 217 to 126, the association tabled all resolutions dealing with presidential terms, including a recommendation for a single six-year term.

alarm and probably saving many lives.

She heard the blasts, saw the great columns of smoke shooting skyward, and sent a report over her two-way radio to all forest service points. They in turn promptly relayed the news to state authorities who ordered ambulances, doctors and nurses to the plant.

An official of the company, who would not permit use of his name, issued a statement in which he said:

"The total casualty list cannot exceed 200 as that was the total employed in the affected area.

"Reports that it had been easy to gain access to the plant are absurd because the company has an elaborate guard system and elaborate pass system. Every employe came under rigid supervision and their past records had been carefully studied before they were employed."

Hunt estimated the damage totaled "at least $1,000,000." He described the blast as follows:

"Apparently a fire started which was followed by a series of explosions which spread to adjoining buildings, fifteen or twenty of which were demolished over a half-mile square area."

He added that the fire apparently started in the oslvent recovery tanks "where 16,000 pounds of smokeless powder were being processed."

75 Working In Area

"There were probably seventy-five men working in the area where the major explosions occurred," he added. He said he was unable to estimate the number of men at work in the building where the gre started.

"The company," Hunt continued, "is at a loss to explain the cause of the fire and the explosions. The buildings in which the powder was located were separated by substantial brick walls and there was a sprinkled system in all of them.

"We thought all safeguards possible to prevent such an occurrence had been taken. We have no suspicions of any sabotage."

Hunt said the company would not be able to publish the names of the dead until all had been identified. He estimated that about 50,000 pounds of powder were destroyed.

Building Nearly New

The building in which disaster struck was built only recently to handle national defense contracts. The plant sprawls over 2,000 acres about a mile off Route Six. It was established in 1876. No women were employed there.

Polyice Chief Harry Jenkins quoted County Phycician Raymond Mutchler that the tentative death toll was twenty. Other estimates ran as high as fifty the number of persons at work in the plant at the time of the explosions could not be immediately ascertained.

The 400 acre smokeless powder manufacturing plant had received $40,000,000 in contracts from the federal government in the last three months.

FBI Starts Probe

The Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Newark sent agents to the scene and naval officials at New York said an investigation would be launched because a naval ammunition depot at at Lake Denmark, seven miles away. Picatinny army arsenal is eight miles away.

Most of the injured were taken to the Dover hospital at Dover, five miles away. Hospital attaches said they received 130 victims.

At least three of the injured died at the hospital.

The institution could not accommodate the rush of victims in its surgical rooms. Many were treated in hallways. Dover residents contributed blankets.

Many Homes Damaged

The terrific force of the concussions shattered windows and damaged furniture in homes of Kenvil, Dover and other nearby communities.

Early estimates set the plant damage at $2,000,000.

State officials and company officials cleared all persons from the huge plant enclosure as the inferno raged. They said "more explosions are expected at any minute."

The plant is thirty miles northwest of New York city Metropolitan area in a rural area. Kelvil's population is 900.

The blasts were so severe that they registered on the seismograph of Fordham University, New York. Poughkeepsie, N. Y., officials said the concussions were felt throughout Dutchess county, where President Roosevelt's home it, and Danbury, Conn., residents flooded police with queries of "where was the earthquake."

State Police Captain William Nicheol reported eleven bodies were found before the property was cleared.

No Cause Fixed

Col. Mary O. Kimberling, superintendent of state police, said no cause had been fixed for the explosions, which started in the solvent recovery house, and that it was "too early" to consider the possibility of sabotage.

Chief Jenkins described the scene inside as "horrible." He reported seeing arms and legs torn from bodies. He extinguished a man's burning body with a hand extinguisher.

A. S. Boyd, of the Boonton ambulance squad, said he saw "about fifteen bodies in the first aid building."

"The ruins were so hot rescuers were unable to search for bodies," he explained.

Cort Baker, 21, Teaneck, employed in the plant laundry about 1,500 feet from the solvent recovery house, said the blasts blew the roof off the laundry and shattered a wall.

Blown 20 Feet

"I was blown about twenty feet," he said. "I was cut by flying glass. I made my way into the clear and all I saw was a scene of desolation."

Sam Olivo, 46, of Netcong, an employe in the dehydrating building, was "lifted five feet off the ground and before I knew it I was buried under debris.

"I dug my way out," he added, "and started running."

Like many others treated at Dover hospital, which was quickly filled with the wounded, was William Lewis, 22, of Wharton, who suffered from the concussion.

A state council of defense and resources is operating to concentrate efforts in various fields;

Preparations are underway for a home defense force to replace the national guard;

Sixty-six local boards will be set up in Maryland to handle conscription.

O'Conor said the three members of each board would be unpaid, but that a paid clerk, a medical officer and a government appeal agent would be assigned to each. There also will be section appeals, medical and registration advisory boards.

No Politics Involved

"Just as in the formation of the state council of defense, it must be the policy not to allow politics or outside considerations to govern the selection of these officials," O'Conor said.

"If men are to be required to leave their homes and give up their work and change the entire course of their life, they have the right to know that no favoritism has been played.

"It would be unjust and unworthy of the state's effort to have any other policy govern this selection than one of square dealing, impartiality and a single determination to do that which is best for the country and for the state."

Fascist Attempt

however, that some announcement might come tomorrow.

Air attacks upon Egypt, a British ally, and the Sudan have been intensified in the past few days.

Giovanni Ansaldo, an authoritative editor, spoke cryptically today of a telegram from Alexandria which would be a greater bombshell to Britain than a German bomb. What that telegram might contain, he said, "we will not say but you will guess it."

Terrific Battle

the long terror that had come from aloft in five preceding days of almost endless air attacks—attacks which through Wednesday were declared officially to have killed 1,175 and wounded some 4,720.

Bombs were dropped during the day, however, upon one town in the northeast and upon several in southern England, destroynig an undetermined number of homes and causing casualties.

Whatver the reason—whether it was vastly broadened scope of British anti-aircraft fire or simply that the Nazis were resting momentarily from the long strain of the assault—the city up to night fall had but a single alarm.

That came at 4:39 p. m. and was over an hour and two minutes later—at 5:41.

Nazis Driven Away

The Nazis came in very high; the anti-aircraft opened up at once Soon the sky was clear again of raiders and as the welcome all clear was heard not a bomb had been dropped save in the open fields outlying the city.

But the people, welcoming as they did these hours of relative freedom from the fear of death, nevertheless made their customary plans tonight for new assaults.

It was the offensive, and not the defensive, air arm of Britain that was most active today.

The air ministry, cooperating with the silent and undiscussed operations of the fleet in the campaign to smash before it could be started any Nazi plan to try to cross the channel with troops, announced that mighty new blows had been struck by the Royal Air Force.

German Convoy Attacked

Some of the results reported were: German convoy attacked in the channel off Dunkerque, France; a German supply ship sunk; German convoy attacked off Cape Gris Nez; another German supply ship left burning; two Nazi E-boats—torpedo carriers—machine gunned from low altitude; three German planes shot down in the struggle; barge concentrations, docks and shipping bombed at Ostend, Flushing, Calais and Boulogne.

Off Calais, the air ministry reported, 4,000 pounds of bombs were dropped on three convoyed ships. One was left burning, it was added, and another badly damaged, while the German torpedo boats acting as escort were machine-gunned from 500 feet.

All this—in which the loss of a total of six British planes was acknowledged—was aside from other attacks in which railway stations, supply yards, docks, shipyards, oil plants, armament factories were bombed in raids over Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, Wilhelmshaven, Frankfurt, Cologne, Coblenz, Mannheim.

In the Berlin attack, hits by explosives and fire bombs on the great Tempelhof airdrome were claimed, (but denied in Berlin) and it was said that anti-aircraft batteries in Berlin's Tiergarten park had been silenced.

This was one of the greatest coordinated assaults ever made by the British on German territory.

It was good news for London's people, and so was the suggestion of some informed sources that the augmented anti-aircraft batteries here had "severely limited" the effectiveness of German raids.

It was disclosed that German raiders had wrought damage near the Bank of England, to the church of St. John the Evangelist and in Regent street.

Madame Tussaud's museum, where millions have gaped at the wax figures of world celebrities, also was damaged.

Among the objects hit Wednesday night was a 15,000 gallon water tank in the Fleet street publishing area; two hospitals, many houses and small factories.

Many persons believed the earth was round 4000 years before the birth of Christompher Columbus.

There may be as many as 30,000 seeds in one pod of the poppy plant.

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Anti-aircraft gunners erected a massive protective barrage against Nazi raiders over London last (Thursday) night while in Egypt British artillerymen fought a sharp duel with Italian Libyan forces and the long expected Fascist onslaught on Egypt seemed at hand.

Unofficial reports circulated in Rome that the Italians already had begun their invasion of Egypt, which is linked to Britain in a defensive military alliance.

Egyptian forces moved up to the Libyan frontier. Artillery fire grew in intensity and British aerial scouts reported Marshal Graziani, the Italian commander, had moved fresh forces within striking distance of the border.

Earlier in the day an authoritative Italian editor, Giovanni Ansaldo, had hinted the Italian offensive on Egypt might be imminent. Many Britons consider the strike will be timed with Adolf Hitler's projected invasion of Britain.

It was the sixth straight heavy nightly assault on London by Nazi raiders. As on the previous night, they bucked the terrific "Archie" screen lifted by British gunners.

Drop Bombs in Fields

Alarm-driven residents had a comparatively long rest during the day when only one alarm had sounded to dusk. Prompt and violent anti-aircraft reaction was credited with driving off the attaking planes some of which dropped their cargoes in open fields outside the capital. It largely was a repetition of tactics which the night before blunted the mass German attack after four night of wholesale death and destruction.

Instead of trying to spot individual raiders, the anti-aircraft gunners apparently now have instructions to fill the skies with explosives as fast as they can load and fire. British civilian casualties totalled 1,175 dead and 4,720 injured up to yesterday in the full-scale raids that began last Saturday.

An official communique said 125 were killed and 250 injured Wednesday afternoon and forty killed and 170 injured Wednesday night.

Bomb Causes Alarm

But added to the constant terror of new raids were delayed-action bombs intermittently exploding in the capital. Two exploded killing rescue workers, and another buried near historic St. Paul's cathedral caused authorities to remove people from their homes nearby.

A "suicide squad" worked in desperate haste to pile sandbags high around the shrine to try to save the building.

British offensive forces were busy early yesterday raiding and wrecking areas in Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, and Nazi invasion bases on the coast of France. The navy cooperated with low-diving British bombers in attacks which cost the British six planes, but were termed highly successful in breaking up Nazi concentrations for the expected push across the channel.

German Ship Sunk

A German supply ship was sunk, others left burning, and bomb hits scored on docks and shipping at Ostend, Flushing, Calais and Boulogne. Diving British planes machine-gunned the crews of Nazi torpedo boats. Off Calais, 4,000 pounds of bombs were dumped on German shipping.

Nazi spokesmen admitting "numerous fires and damages" were caused by British raids on Berlin and other big German cities, said fourteen persons were killed, forty-one injured. They denied however British claims that Tempelhof Airdrome in Berlin was struck.

The Germans accused the British of "insect raids"—the dumping of bags of potato bugs in German fields to destroy Nazi crops. The British denied this.

Deposed King Carol offered asylum in Portugal reached Barcelona, Spain, last night with his exiled friend, Magda Lupescu as Rumania's new military dictator General Antonescu announced Mme. Lupescu had failed to persuade Carol's son and successor, Mihai, to flee with them.

First Bill Changed

Today the language was revised to provide that if an industry refused to supply defense materials, and they were unobtainable elsewhere, the industry could be taken over by the government upon a declaration that "the public necessity is immediate and the emergency in the public service is imperative." The owner would be entitled to rental payments.

"The committee felt the language was too extreme, requiring too much of an emergency to enable him to take over plants," Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) of the Senate conferees explained.

Asked whether it was the intention of the committee to make the new language conform to the existing situation so that the president could act without further heightening of the emergency, Sheppard replied in the affirmative.

Early Passage Predicted

Although the submission of the conference report was expected to produce some discussion in both houses, Senate leaders were confident that this would not be of a prolonged nature in their branch of Congress, and House leaders pointed to a rule limiting debate on conference reports to one hour.

During the day, John B. Kelly, Philadelphia city democratic chairman, presented to President Roosevelt a tentative plan under which men whose physical condition has grown soft could harden up through organized calisthenics, and walking and hiking under the auspices of such civilian agencies as community centers and clubs. Kelly called it "physical preparedness.' Mr. Roosevelt asked him to go ahead and draft suggestions in detail.

ternoon's conference, Willkie gave out a statement at Rushville saying that President Roosevelt "apparently has become disturbed by his own clumsy handling of foreign affairs."

The statement, issued in response to requests for comment on Mr. Roosevelt's radio address last night, said:

"If the American people have any sense of the realism of the condition of the world in which they are living they will reject overwhelmingly a president who preaches such class conscious and economic sabotage doctrines as was preached last night.

"The United States can not but fail in the present world struggle under such leadership—it is the same doctrine which Blum (former premier) of France taught."

Camacho Becomes President Elect In Mexico Fight

But Almazan Also Claims Election and Trouble Seems Certain

By The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 12—Gen. Avila Camacho was proclaimed president-elect of Mexico today by the Chamber of Deputies upon the basis of an electoral commission report saying he beat Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan by 2,476,641 to 151,101 votes in the disputed July 7 election.

Mexico now has two presidents-elect, each backed by his own congress, and in this impasse lie the seeds of civil conflict.

The quarrel between the two generals over who is to succeed Lazaro Cardenas for the six-year term starting Dec. 1 moved a step nearer a showdown—to the uproarious applause of deputies and the gallery for Avila Camacho and catcalls for three Almazanista deputies who voted to reject the electoral commission's report.

"Throw them out," the gallery shouted.

Deputy Alejandro Carrillo, editor of the labor newspaper El Popular, apparently referring to the talk of revolution implicit in the dispute, emphasized in an oration that "the army and all other sectors are loyal and solidly behind Camacho.

Almazan is now visiting in Baltimore, Md. A congress of his own followers, who insist they are Mexico's legally elected legislators, has proclaimed him president-elect.

ed belief that "the country wants Congress to do some thinking of its own."

The Republicans, Martin said, would cooperate with Willkie "after he becomes president."

Democrats had made much of the fact that Martin and many other Republican House members voted for a sixty-day delay of conscription while Willkie favored immediate compulsory training.

Hold Strategy Conference

Preparing to begin his first extensive campaign trip, Willkie held a strategy conference with Martin, Senator Charles L. McNary, the Republican vice presidential nominee, and Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota at Indianapolis. His first speech is to be delivered at Chicago today.

President Roosevelt, who made his first formally designated "political speech" of the campaign Wednesday night, canvassed Democratic prospects in the middle west with Senator Scott Lucas, his regional manager for thirteen states in that area. Lucas said he told Mr. Roosevelt that the Democrats were in as good position as they were "four years ago at this time."

Other developments bearing on politics included an announcement from the senate campaign expenditures committee that it would inquire into an "independent fund" being raised by two New Yorkers to promote Willkie's candidacy.

Mr. Roosevelt's Wednesday address, directed particularly to labor, was followed Thursday by formal endorsement of his candidacy by the Pattern Makers League (AFL).

Bremen Blazing, British Aviator Says after Raid

"And What a Fire", He Reports upon His Return to London

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP)—"Bremen is on fire—and what a fire," was the first remark of a British bomber pilot returning from a raid over Germany today.

Said another:

"Fires are blazing all over the place, making a solid triangle of flame. It looked bad enough from 10,000 feet. On the ground it must have been an inferno."

Bremen Bombed Two Hours

Pilots said Bremen was bombed for two hours. They also said bombs dropped on the railway yards at Coblenz caused numerous fires and started a series of sharp explosions as though an ammunition train was hit.

At Cologne, they reported, bombs burst on a railway line and straddled a bridge across the Rhine, causing fires and explosions.

Reports from pilots compiled by the air ministry news service told of British bombers pounding German docks and "invasion bases," railheads and airdromes for hours on end. The raids extended from the channel coast to the Baltic Sea and included inland towns as well.

The German-occupied ports of Calais, Boulogne and Flushing and Germany's own Hamburg, Bremen, Bremerhaven and Wilhelmshaven had the contents of British bomb racks emptied on them, the British reports declared.

German Barges Attacked

Docks at Flushing, The Netherlands, where a large number of barges were moored were bombed persistently for an hour and a concentration of barges higher up the coast were hit and damaged, these reports said.

More barges were reported hit and damaged at Ostend, Belgium, where during a four-hour raid bombs were dropped on docks and basins. Here fires were reported raging in all parts of the harbor.

Frantic Relatives

one and then several smaller ones. I don't know just how many.

"When I got to the plant hospital debris was falling all around. The clock had stopped at 1:30 p. m. I guess that's the time of the first explosion. Every window in the place was smashed and the walls buckled. The only one in there was Miss Grace Heckmann, a nurse. She was not even scratched. It was a miracle."

Identification Difficult

The business of identifying the dead and the maimed proceeded slowly. Every man employed there—there were no women workers in the plant—wore an identification number but those were often obliterated or blown completely away.

Three men who died after arrival at the hospital were burned almost beyond recognition. They were Ray Gullick, of Wharton, Jess Bennett, address unknown, and R. Turks, address also unknown.

Clergymen of all faiths came to Dover hospital to seek out members of their flocks among the injured.

"I saw hell in France but it was nothing like this," was the comment of one of them, The Rev. E. Glenn Van Tilburg, of St. John's Methodist Church, Wharton. He was a U. S. army chaplain in the World War.

Another minister, The Rev. L. E. Wright, of the First Methodist church, Succasunna, helped carry the injured into the hospital. Standing on the hospital steps later he read off a partial list of the injured and asked the crowd to be patient while the slow process of identification continued.

"I know," he told one mother who begged for news of her son, "you are not the only mother who has to stand here and wait."

Cool-headed teachers averted panic at the Rockaway township high and grammar schools a half a mile from the plant. The blasts rocked the buildings and shattered windows while 450 high school and about 600 grammar school pupils were in their classrooms.

The teachers, after sounding fire alarms, organized the pupils into orderly files and marched them out of the building.

Hubert Champney, board of education member, said windows were broken and two chandeliers fell on the side of the grammar school building nearest the powder plant. A few children were slightly hurt by flying glass, he added.

The Dover hospital could not accommodate the rush of victims in its surgical rooms. Many were treated in hallways. Dover residents contributed blankets.

Bar Association Refuses To Commit Itself on Third Term

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12, (AP)—The American Bar Association sidestepped the presidential third term controversy at a spirited session of its sixty-third annual convention today and refused to commit itself on President Roosevelt's ambitions for another four years in the White House.

By a vote of 217 to 126, the association tabled all resolutions dealing with presidential terms, including a recommendation for a single six-year term.

BRITISH "WRENS" REST AS BOMBERS STRAFE CITY

sky over the center of Berlin.

Railway Station Bombed

British official announcements said the Anhalter railway station and the big Temple of airdrome in the city had been bombarded, but correspondents who visited these places failed to find any evidence of damage.

The Germans said there was no important military damage.

For their part—even as they made the announcement that "more planes have departed to strike retaliatory blows" — the Germans claimed a growing success for their campaign to break Britain and British resistance by ceaseless attack from the skies.

33 Fires in London

Pilots returning tonight said they counted thirty-three fires in London and declared some dock and industrial district had been bombed out of all recognition.

During last night and early today, they said, they turned heavy bomb fire on British dock and harbor facilities, utilities plants, airplane hangars, oil tanks—every sort of concentration vital to the British defense.

Damage Arsenal

Among the targets heavily hit, it was declared, was Britain's Woolwich arsenal, in the region of the lower Thames. Above that munitions center, the Germans said, fire leaped several hundred yards into the air.

A British destroyer and four merchant ships were declared to have been set afire in a dive bombing attack upon a convoy at the mouth of the Thames, and two other convoyed vessels hit by bombs.

Expect Nightly Bombings

At home, the Nazis indirectly disclosed that almost nightly British raids on Berlin are now expected: they put under way a campaign to have the people go to bed early, and thus to get all the sleep possible before the sirens shriek.

A new "example of British unfairness" was offered: authorized German sources asserted that the British fliers, seeking to cut Germany's food supplies at the root, were throwing bags of "Colorado potato bugs" into the potato fields in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium with the notion of letting nature take its course to reduce the yield of that crop.

(Authoritative British circles in London denied the charge.)

German raiders returning late last night from England reported bombing west and central London, including the vicinity of Waterloo bridge, and said they observed a chain of fires stretching from the southeast coast all the way to London.

The fires, they said, marked spots where the vanguards of the night raiders had dived on British objectives.

No Raids on Berlin

While Berliners slept without interruption by air-raid alarms, informed quarters said "retaliation" flights to England would continue without abatement; that, in fact, yesterday's British bombings of Hamburg and Bremen with fourteen killed, called for more "retaliation."

It was stated that besides the Thursday night raids on London, the Nazi planes also visited Liverpool, Birkenhead, Cardiff, Bristol and other places.

A spokesman said that although Berlin remained quiet, British planes had crossed into Germany during the night. He said they either were turned back or had objectives other than the capital.

upon for such problems as sabotage, espionage, handling of aliens, and safeguarding vital industries and essential facilities;

A state council of defense and resources is operating to concentrate efforts in various fields;

Preparations are underway for a home defense force to replace the national guard;

Sixty-six local boards will be set up in Maryland to handle conscription.

O'Conor said the three members of each board would be unpaid, but that a paid clerk, a medical officer and a government appeal agent would be assigned to each. There also will be section appeals, medical and registration advisory boards.

No Politics Involved

"Just as in the formation of the state council of defense, it must be the policy not to allow politics or outside considerations to govern the selection of these officials," O'Conor said.

"If men are to be required to leave their homes and give up their work and change the entire course of their life, they have the right to know that no favoritism has been played.

"It would be unjust and unworthy of the state's effort to have any other policy govern this selection than one of square dealing, impartiality and a single determination to do that which is best for the country and for the state."

29 Known Dead, 125 Injured, in Hercules Powder Company Blast

alarm and probably saving many lives.

She heard the blasts, saw the great columns of smoke shooting skyward, and sent a report over her two-way radio to all forest service points. They in turn promptly relayed the news to state authorities who ordered ambulances, doctors and nurses to the plant.

An official of the company, who would not permit use of his name, issued a statement in which he said:

"The total casualty list cannot exceed 200 as that was the total employed in the affected area.

"Reports that it had been easy to gain access to the plant are absurd because the company has an elaborate guard system and elaborate pass system. Every employe came under rigid supervision and their past records had been carefully studied before they were employed."

Hunt estimated the damage totaled "at least $1,000,000." He described the blast as follows:

"Apparently a fire started which was followed by a series of explosions which spread to adjoining buildings, fifteen or twenty of which were demolished over a half-mile square area."

He added that the fire apparently started in the oslvent recovery tanks "where 16,000 pounds of smokeless powder were being processed."

75 Working In Area

"There were probably seventy-five men working in the area where the major explosions occurred," he added. He said he was unable to estimate the number of men at work in the building where the gre started.

"The company," Hunt continued, "is at a loss to explain the cause of the fire and the explosions. The buildings in which the powder was located were separated by substantial brick walls and there was a sprinkled system in all of them.

"We thought all safeguards possible to prevent such an occurrence had been taken. We have no suspicions of any sabotage."

Hunt said the company would not be able to publish the names of the dead until all had been identified. He estimated that about 50,000 pounds of powder were destroyed.

Building Nearly New

The building in which disaster struck was built only recently to handle national defense contracts. The plant sprawls over 2,000 acres about a mile off Route Six. It was established in 1876. No women were employed there.

Polyice Chief Harry Jenkins quoted County Phycician Raymond Mutchler that the tentative death toll was twenty. Other estimates ran as high as fifty the number of persons at work in the plant at the time of the explosions could not be immediately ascertained.

The 400 acre smokeless powder manufacturing plant had received $40,000,000 in contracts from the federal government in the last three months.

FBI Starts Probe

The Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Newark sent agents to the scene and naval officials at New York said an investigation would be launched because a naval ammunition depot at at Lake Denmark, seven miles away. Picatinny army arsenal is eight miles away.

Most of the injured were taken to the Dover hospital at Dover, five miles away. Hospital attaches said they received 130 victims.

At least three of the injured died at the hospital.

The institution could not accommodate the rush of victims in its surgical rooms. Many were treated in hallways. Dover residents contributed blankets.

Many Homes Damaged

The terrific force of the concussions shattered windows and damaged furniture in homes of Kenvil, Dover and other nearby communities.

Early estimates set the plant damage at $2,000,000.

State officials and company officials cleared all persons from the huge plant enclosure as the inferno raged. They said "more explosions are expected at any minute."

The plant is thirty miles northwest of New York city Metropolitan area in a rural area. Kelvil's population is 900.

The blasts were so severe that they registered on the seismograph of Fordham University, New York. Poughkeepsie, N. Y., officials said the concussions were felt throughout Dutchess county, where President Roosevelt's home it, and Danbury, Conn., residents flooded police with queries of "where was the earthquake."

State Police Captain William Nicheol reported eleven bodies were found before the property was cleared.

No Cause Fixed

Col. Mary O. Kimberling, superintendent of state police, said no cause had been fixed for the explosions, which started in the solvent recovery house, and that it was "too early" to consider the possibility of sabotage.

Chief Jenkins described the scene inside as "horrible." He reported seeing arms and legs torn from bodies. He extinguished a man's burning body with a hand extinguisher.

A. S. Boyd, of the Boonton ambulance squad, said he saw "about fifteen bodies in the first aid building."

"The ruins were so hot rescuers were unable to search for bodies," he explained.

Cort Baker, 21, Teaneck, employed in the plant laundry about 1,500 feet from the solvent recovery house, said the blasts blew the roof off the laundry and shattered a wall.

Blown 20 Feet

"I was blown about twenty feet," he said. "I was cut by flying glass. I made my way into the clear and all I saw was a scene of desolation."

Sam Olivo, 46, of Netcong, an employe in the dehydrating building, was "lifted five feet off the ground and before I knew it I was buried under debris.

"I dug my way out," he added, "and started running."

however, that some announcement might come tomorrow.

Air attacks upon Egypt, a British ally, and the Sudan have been intensified in the past few days.

Giovanni Ansaldo, an authoritative editor, spoke cryptically today of a telegram from Alexandria which would be a greater bombshell to Britain than a German bomb. What that telegram might contain, he said, "we will not say but you will guess it."

Terrific Battle

the long terror that had come from aloft in five preceding days of almost endless air attacks—attacks which through Wednesday were declared officially to have killed 1,175 and wounded some 4,720.

Bombs were dropped during the day, however, upon one town in the northeast and upon several in southern England, destroynig an undetermined number of homes and causing casualties.

Whatver the reason—whether it was vastly broadened scope of British anti-aircraft fire or simply that the Nazis were resting momentarily from the long strain of the assault—the city up to night fall had but a single alarm.

That came at 4:39 p. m. and was over an hour and two minutes later—at 5:41.

Nazis Driven Away

The Nazis came in very high; the anti-aircraft opened up at once. Soon the sky was clear again of raiders and as the welcome all clear was heard not a bomb had been dropped save in the open fields outlying the city.

But the people, welcoming as they did these hours of relative freedom from the fear of death, nevertheless made their customary plans tonight for new assaults.

It was the offensive, and not the defensive, air arm of Britain that was most active today.

The air ministry, cooperating with the silent and undiscussed operations of the fleet in the campaign to smash before it could be started any Nazi plan to try to cross the channel with troops, announced that mighty new blows had been struck by the Royal Air Force.

German Convoy Attacked

Some of the results reported were: German convoy attacked in the channel off Dunkerque, France; a German supply ship sunk; German convoy attacked off Cape Gris Nez; another German supply ship left burning; two Nazi E-boats—torpedo carriers—machine gunned from low altitude; three German planes shot down in the struggle; barge concentrations, docks and shipping bombed at Ostend, Flushing, Calais and Boulogne.

Off Calais, the air ministry reported, 4,000 pounds of bombs were dropped on three convoyed ships. One was left burning, it was added, and another badly damaged, while the German torpedo boats acting as escort were machine-gunned from 500 feet.

All this—in which the loss of a total of six British planes was acknowledged—was aside from other attacks in which railway stations, supply yards, docks, shipyards, oil plants, armament factories were bombed in raids over Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, Wilhelmshaven, Frankfurt, Cologne, Coblenz, Mannheim.

In the Berlin attack, hits by explosives and fire bombs on the great Tempelhof airdrome were claimed, (but denied in Berlin) and it was said that anti-aircraft batteries in Berlin's Tiergarten park had been silenced.

This was one of the greatest coordinated assaults ever made by the British on German territory.

It was good news for London's people, and so was the suggestion of some informed sources that the augmented anti-aircraft batteries here had "severely limited" the effectiveness of German raids.

It was disclosed that German raiders had wrought damage near the Bank of England, to the church of St. John the Evangelist and in Regent street.

Madame Tussaud's museum, where millions have gaped at the wax figures of world celebrities, also was damaged.

Among the objects hit Wednesday night was a 15,000 gallon water tank in the Fleet street publishing area; two hospitals, many houses and small factories.

Many persons believed the earth was round 4000 years before the birth of Christompher Columbus.

There may be as many as 30,000 seeds in one pod of the poppy plant.

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Anti-aircraft gunners erected a massive protective barrage against Nazi raiders over London last (Thursday) night while in Egypt British artillerymen fought a sharp duel with Italian Libyan forces and the long expected Fascist onslaught on Egypt seemed at hand.

Unofficial reports circulated in Rome that the Italians already had begun their invasion of Egypt, which is linked to Britain in a defensive military alliance.

Egyptian forces moved up to the Libyan frontier. Artillery fire grew in intensity and British aerial scouts reported Marshal Graziani, the Italian commander, had moved fresh forces within striking distance of the border.

Earlier in the day an authoritative Italian editor, Giovanni Ansaldo, had hinted the Italian offensive on Egypt might be imminent. Many Britons consider the strike will be timed with Adolf Hitler's projected invasion of Britain.

It was the sixth straight heavy nightly assault on London by Nazi raiders. As on the previous night, they bucked the terrific "Archie" screen lifted by British gunners.

Drop Bombs in Fields

Alarm-driven residents had a comparatively long rest during the day when only one alarm had sounded to dusk. Prompt and violent anti-aircraft reaction was credited with driving off the attaking planes some of which dropped their cargoes in open fields outside the capital. It largely was a repetition of tactics which the night before blunted the mass German attack after four night of wholesale death and destruction.

Instead of trying to spot individual raiders, the anti-aircraft gunners apparently now have instructions to fill the skies with explosives as fast as they can load and fire. British civilian casualties totalled 1,175 dead and 4,720 injured up to yesterday in the full-scale raids that began last Saturday.

An official communique said 125 were killed and 250 injured Wednesday afternoon and forty killed and 170 injured Wednesday night.

Bomb Causes Alarm

But added to the constant terror of new raids were delayed-action bombs intermittently exploding in the capital. Two exploded killing rescue workers, and another buried near historic St. Paul's cathedral caused authorities to remove people from their homes nearby.

A "suicide squad" worked in desperate haste to pile sandbags high around the shrine to try to save the building.

British offensive forces were busy early yesterday raiding and wrecking areas in Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, and Nazi invasion bases on the coast of France. The navy cooperated with low-diving British bombers in attacks which cost the British six planes, but were termed highly successful in breaking up Nazi concentrations for the expected push across the channel.

German Ship Sunk

A German supply ship was sunk, others left burning, and bomb hits scored on docks and shipping at Ostend, Flushing, Calais and Boulogne. Diving British planes machine-gunned the crews of Nazi torpedo boats. Off Calais, 4,000 pounds of bombs were dumped on German shipping.

Nazi spokesmen admitting "numerous fires and damages" were caused by British raids on Berlin and other big German cities, said fourteen persons were killed, forty-one injured. They denied however British claims that Tempelhof Airdrome in Berlin was struck.

The Germans accused the British of "insect raids"—the dumping of bags of potato bugs in German fields to destroy Nazi crops. The British denied this.

Deposed King Carol offered asylum in Portugal reached Barcelona, Spain, last night with his exiled friend, Magda Lupescu as Rumania's new military dictator General Antonescu announced Mme. Lupescu had failed to persuade Carol's son and successor, Mihai, to flee with them.

ternoon's conference, Willkie gave out a statement at Rushville saying that President Roosevelt "apparently has become disturbed by his own clumsy handling of foreign affairs."

The statement, issued in response to requests for comment on Mr. Roosevelt's radio address last night, said:

"If the American people have any sense of the realism of the condition of the world in which they are living they will reject overwhelmingly a president who preaches such class conscious and economic sabotage doctrines as was preached last night.

"The United States can not but fall in the present world struggle under such leadership—it is the same doctrine which Blum (former premier) of France taught."

Conferees Give

operate with them, only after the president had declared a state of "imminent emergency" and "danger" to exist making such action necessary.

First Bill Changed

Today the language was revised to provide that if an industry refused to supply defense materials, and they were unobtainable elsewhere, the industry could be taken over by the government upon a declaration that "the public necessity is immediate and the emergency in the public service is imperative." The owner would be entitled to rental payments.

"The committee felt the language was too extreme, requiring too much of an emergency to enable him to take over plants," Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) of the Senate conferees explained.

Asked whether it was the intention of the committee to make the new language conform to the existing situation so that the president could act without further heightening of the emergency, Sheppard replied in the affirmative.

Early Passage Predicted

Although the submission of the conference report was expected to produce some discussion in both houses, Senate leaders were confident that this would not be of a prolonged nature in their branch of Congress, and House leaders pointed to a rule limiting debate on conference reports to one hour.

During the day, John B. Kelly, Philadelphia city democratic chairman, presented to President Roosevelt a tentative plan under which men whose physical condition has grown soft could harden up through organized calisthenics, and walking and hiking under the auspices of such civilian agencies as community centers and clubs. Kelly called it "physical preparedness." Mr. Roosevelt asked him to go ahead and draft suggestions in detail.

Camacho Becomes President Elect In Mexico Fight

But Almazan Also Claims Election and Trouble Seems Certain

By The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 12—Gen. Avila Camacho was proclaimed president-elect of Mexico today by the Chamber of Deputies upon the basis of an electoral commission report saying he beat Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan by 2,476,641 to 151,101 votes in the disputed July 7 election.

Mexico now has two presidents-elect, each backed by his own congress, and in this impasse lie the seeds of civil conflict.

The quarrel between the two generals over who is to succeed Lazaro Cardenas for the six-year term starting Dec. 1 moved a step nearer a showdown—to the uproarious applause of deputies and the gallery for Avila Camacho and catcalls for three Almazanista deputies who voted to reject the electoral commission's report.

"Throw them out," the gallery shouted.

Deputy Alejandro Carrillo, editor of the labor newspaper El Popular, apparently referring to the talk of revolution implicit in the dispute, emphasized in an oration that "the army and all other sectors are loyal and solidly behind Camacho.

Almazan is now visiting in Baltimore, Md. A congress of his own followers, who insist they are Mexico's legally elected legislators, has proclaimed him president-elect.

Willkie Scores

ed belief that "the country wants Congress to do some thinking of its own."

The Republicans, Martin said, would cooperate with Willkie "after he becomes president."

Democrats had made much of the fact that Martin and many other Republican House members voted for a sixty-day delay of conscription while Willkie favored immediate compulsory training.

Hold Strategy Conference

Preparing to begin his first extensive campaign trip, Willkie held a strategy conference with Martin, Senator Charles L. McNary, the Republican vice presidential nominee, and Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota at Indianapolis. His first speech is to be delivered at Chicago today.

President Roosevelt, who made his first formally designated "political speech" of the campaign Wednesday night, canvassed Democratic prospects in the middle west with Senator Scott Lucas, his regional manager for thirteen states in that area. Lucas said he told Mr. Roosevelt that the Democrats were in as good position as they were "four years ago at this time."

Other developments bearing on politics included an announcement from the senate campaign expenditures committee that it would inquire into an "independent fund" being raised by two New Yorkers to promote Willkie's candidacy.

Mr. Roosevelt's Wednesday address, directed particularly to labor, was followed Thursday by formal endorsement of his candidacy by the Pattern Makers League (AFL).

Instructors Are Needed For Air Corps Schools

In connection with the national defense program there is an urgent demand for instructors in the air corps technical school of the War department. An insufficient number of eligibles resulted from an examination for filling these positions which closed August 15. The United States Civil Service Commission has therefore reannounced an examination to fill the following positions:

Instructor, air corps technical school, $3,800 a year; also associate instructor, $3,200; assistant instructor, $2,600; and junior instructor, $2,000 a year. The salaries are subject to a retirement deduction of 3 1-2 per cent.

Applicants will be rated as received at the Washington office of the United States Civil Service Commission until further notice, and certification made as the needs of the service require.

Separate lists of eligibles will be established in the following optional branches of instruction in the aircraft field: Carburetion systems, engines, hydraulic systems, instruments, mechanics, propellers, fabric work, sheet-metal work, welder, heat treating, parachutes, and Air Corps fundamentals. Employment in these positions is under the Army Air Corps, and vacancies will be filled at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill.; Scott Field, Belleville, Ill.; and Lowry Field, Denver, Colo.

Full information as to the requirements for these examinations, and application forms, may be obtained from Frank Storm, secretary of the board of United States Service Examiners, at the post office in this city.

Straw Man Gets a Good Slugging

MR. ROOSEVELT said at the outset of his radio talk before the Teamsters' union at Washington that he was in doubt whether his talk was a political speech, or merely an incursion into American history. It was soon apparent, however, that it was a political speech, pure and simple. In fact, that was so obvious that the radio people were quite on safe ground in requiring that the Democratic National Committee pay for the radio time.

But Mr. Roosevelt had a pretty good time crooning for votes with a rigamarole of platitudes and beating around a straw man. The latter consisted of an imaginary terrible opposition that is seeking to destroy all the worthy objectives of the "social gains" made under the New Deal. That, of course, is sheer nonsense. There is no bogey man of this kind, even of straw. Nobody wants to sacrifice any gains that have actually been made either in this or any other period of American history. Mr. Roosevelt's opponent has clearly stated that.

But there is considerable doubt that many things devised and attempted by the New Deal have been in the nature of gains, social and otherwise, while anybody in the possession of his wits knows that methods of seeking the same objectives can be clumsy, ineffectual and costly, on the one hand, or expeditious, safe and far-sighted, on the other hand. The reason Mr. Roosevelt has to indulge in political generalities, twaddle so many commonplaces and slug around straw men is that it has become obvious to so many persons that his plans and methods fall within the former category, as actual results—or lack of them—have proved.

Government Control and Influence of the Radio

NO THREAT of government-controlled radio can be seen in this nation, such as exists in other countries, by the committee on Communications of the American Bar Association in a report to its annual convention in Philadelphia.

But the committee significantly added that government regulatory boards are "under constant and powerful pressure" to follow the policies of the president.

"Since the president must act as head of a party as well as the head of a nation," the committee said in the report, "this means that to some extent the governmental groups themselves will be influenced by the president's partisan aim that his party shall succeed at the polls."

Wherefore any who may erroneously suppose there should be more governmental regulation of this form of communication might well consider the restraints already existing and look to modification of them rather than increasing them.

But, what can be done to offset the disadvantage now presented? The association committee says the "disinterested public" should be constantly reminded "that it must depend largely on its own direct and continuous efforts to get the kinds of programs it needs." That seems to be about all that can be done in this campaign so long as the executive thus holds this whip handle over radio.

The Bombardment Of London

HITLER'S ASSERTION that Germany can defeat Britain in an air war is based upon numbers of bombing planes and distance of air bases from bombing objectives.

Germany had an undoubted superiority in numbers of bombing planes. What the ratio is now is unknown but it was once estimated to be twelve to one. As far distance, the Germans have but a few miles to fly to London. It takes British flyers three and one-half hours to reach Berlin.

Unquestionably these are Nazi advantages but Britain has some to match them. Britain can concentrate more on defense in its limited area. Germany can not defend its far-flung zone in the intensive way that Britons defend theirs. Consequently Germans lose more planes and pilots, which helps to narrow the gap in numbers. America as a rapidly developing source of supply also helps to build Britain up.

Despite the destruction now being caused by German raids on London, experts still hold to the belief that Hitler can never defeat Britain in an air war alone. Of course if his air armada can do sufficient damage, it may make it possible for his armies to invade England, and Britain seems to be well prepared for that.

Gains Come from Adversity

"IT SHOULD BE REMEMBERED that America's greatest strength and its greatest contributions to mankind have come from its days of adversity, not its days of prosperity. Religious liberty came out of the bleakness of a Rhode Island winter. Political liberty was born in the snows of Valley Forge. Personal liberty for all Americans is a heritage of the dark night of the Civil war. Not until the trying days of the great depression did we gain as a nation an economic and social consciousness."

These words, spoken by the Rev. Dr. Hillyer Straton, of New York City, son of the late Dr. John Roach Straton, should bring considerable encouragement to those who look with fear upon the future, particularly at the huge defense job facing the United States with its attendant hardships and sacrifices. The subject of Dr. Straton's sermon was "Why Should God Bless America?" in which he treated of the song now so widely sung.

"Too many Americans have felt that God is with us because of our fatness—our vast material resources, Dr. Straton said, "Our use of the resources with which we have been blessed will determine whether God will be with us. As never before in her history America needs a return to personal, national and international righteousness. Our whole 130,000,000 people can sing 'God Bless America' until they are hoarse, but God will only bless us as we are willing to make the proper use of our blessings.

A few good thoughts to remember when Irving Berlin's song is sung.

A Veritable Miracle Occurs in Minnesota

MINNESOTA is entitled to three cheers for keeping faith with its motorists by allowing an "emergency" gasoline tax to terminate the first of this month.

There is an old saying that miracles never happen, but this is one exception to the rule, as generally new taxes once imposed are kept on the books; and in order to excuse a new tax it is usually labelled as an emergency tax. On many occasions if there is no emergency one is easily invented, although in recent years we have had them by the jugful.

The action of Minnesota is receiving the plaudits of the automobile clubs. The Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland, declares that it is refreshing "to learn that one state has recognized its obligations to a group of citizens carrying the heaviest burden of taxation by actually keeping its pledge to end a tax at the termination of the 'emergency' for which it was levied."

The club hopes the example set by Minnesota will be followed generally throughout the United States so far as motorists are concerned. It is a hope all citizens can entertain with regard to all added emergency taxation, but it rests upon a pretty slippery spot in view of the terrible bills that have been piled up for the taxpayers to meet. The Minnesota case will probably stand as a unique exception.

Knowledge and Liberty

IT WAS ADAM SMITH, famed economist, who once declared, that the people of England are very jealous of their liberties, but unfortunately do not understand in what their true liberties consist.

Can the same thing be said of the people of the United States? Scarcely. Citizens of the United States, schooled in the Bill of Rights and the fundamental principles of republican government, have a rather lively understanding of precisely what it means to live in a land of freedom.

This may be due to the fact that America, in contrast with Britain, has a written constitution wherein are to be found definite expressions of Liberty's ideals and specific curbs on the exercise of autocratic authority.

However, Adam Smith's comment is a good reminder of the Socratic dictum that knowledge is virtue—especially so in connection with popular appreciation and comprehension of the affairs of government. It is always in times of crisis that a free people's liberties are menaced from within by those who would scrap freedom for compulsion.

Although several more governors have announced that Thanksgiving Day will be observed on the traditional fourth Thursday in November, President Roosevelt is said to be stubbornly holding out for his New Deal Thanksgiving. After the election returns are in, he probably won't feel like celebrating it at all.

Is Candidate Roosevelt, as irreverently suggested by one anti-New Dealer, spending most of his time at his mother's estate at Hyde Park so that he can gaze upon the monument he erected to himself?

Japan, the home of jiu jitsu wrestling, appears to have such a good grip on China it cannot let go.

Are You a Character Judge?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Almost anybody can play a practical joke on me. . . . I never seem able to develop the proper amount of skepticism. It must be my trusting nature.

Accuse me of having no sense of humor and I might admit the truth of your accusation. . . . Say I'm a poor judge of character and it will be my firm opinion that you are mistaken.

Marshall Maslin

Charles Dickens said that nothing is truer than judging character by physiognomy "taken in connection with manner." . . . He would not judge a man entirely by the shape of his nose or the size of his chin, but also by his conduct.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, once mistook a philosopher for a highwayman. . . . He had done more research on the subject than any man of his day and yet in his application he made a mistake. . . . Any pickpocket or confidence man would know better.

It is said, and some believe, that babies instinctively know what you are like, and this fable has humiliated many kindhearted men and women. . . . Babies, to be sure, are more singleminded than grown-ups because they haven't so much on their minds. But they aren't so much as judges of character, or they wouldn't have chosen some of the parents they did.

* * *

A baby and a puppy playing joyfully together make a pleasant sight, but they seem to be about the same age mentally.

Dogs, too, are supposed to know at once whether you like them, hate them, or fear them. . . . I think it's a matter of smell, and there may be something in the theory that human beings when afraid or angry exude a definitely recognizable odor.

But after all there IS this to be said: After a man has lived with himself for a considerable number of years, his inner traits have imprinted themselves on his outer appearance so clearly that almost anybody can make a good guess as to his true character.

Profits Tax Is A Monstrosity, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 — The federal excess profits tax as it is likely to pass, is a monstrosity. It might well be entitled "A Bill To Prevent New Enterprise and Destroy Small Businesses."

Hugh Johnson

I know a company that was organized in 1928 with a capital of about $3,000,000 — just in time to get the full effect of the 1929 avalanche and what came after. It was to make a completely new product. The long, lean hard years ate much of its capital away. Its stockholders have never had a cent out of it. But they stuck and it struggled miraculously and lived.

Two years ago it began to click as a result of a long hopeless struggle for sales and improvement of product.

Would Get Hard Blow

Under this tax bill it will be taxed up to forty per cent on its excess earnings for its fiscal year 1940 over the average of the preceding four years, during which its earnings were slight or minus plus a normal tax of approximately twenty per cent. That will take easily thirty-three and one-third per cent of its earnings.

This company's business will gain nothing by the armament program. On the contrary, it will be hurt by that. Such a large yearly cash outlay from its meager quick assets will seriously embarrass its operations and prevent any normal expansion of its business. Its only chance to recoup its years losses, perfect the original factory equipment on which it was planned, and provide reasonable margins of safety was out of earnings. Now that chance will be impaired, if not destroyed.

Ratio is High

It gains nothing by its permissable alternative of choosing a basis of graduated tax on the ration of earnings to invested capital, because that capital has been so whittled away by its years of losses that this ratio is necessarily high.

Stockholders whose investment has been sterile and declining for most of twelve years and who had just begun to hope for some recovery, will have to abandon their hope and may begin to fear for the company's survival.

This is just another case among thousands of similar ones that could be cited. Another class is that of recently organized service companies with small capital and no record of earnings. This tax law will be a practical barrier to any progress or prospect of success for them.

Easier on Big Companies

A large and heavly capitalized company that has had reasonably good returns for the last four years will be affected to no such murderous degree. Indeed, in view of this terrific load in new or small competing industry, such a company could well afford to lower both price and profit to keep its earnings below any "excess" at all and thus destroy and monopolize the business of all its small cometitors.

This tendency in this legislation is so blatant and so marked that one is tempted to question whether it is not a deliberate attempt to Nazify all business by driving it into great units and there by regulation and other encroachment convert it to Hitler's National Socialism or Musolini's corporative state. No wonder small business and the great middle class are almost 100 per cent against this Administration.

Strong Industry Needed

What this New Deal doesn't seem to understand, is that strength for war depends upon a far stronger and more efficient industry than we have ever had. That can't be accomplished if the first step is a drastic taxation policy that practically destroys the profit motive. That motive is the gas that makes our industrial engine go, The only known economic substitution for the hope or reward—the American system—is the fear of punishment—the system of Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler. There is no middle way. We can't go that way without industrial paralysis.

Very few if any business managers want to profiteer in this emergency, but very few are willing to default on the trusteeships and ruin the investment of their stockholders by accepting inordinate risks and unbearable burdens. — Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE OLD OPEN DOOR

Aid of the British Fleet in American Defense Is Seen Now as a Certainty

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 — Increased intensity of German attack upon England brings the United States to another stage of its own course about the war. What our next stage will be is not a matter of conscious calculation by us. We can predict it in part—but we can only predict what the United States will do by first predicting what will happen in Europe. Our whole course about the war i not a course which we choose. It is not a course forced upon us. Successive stages of the battling in Europe force upon us successive stages of necessity. To realize this, follow events of the past five months:

Mark Sullivan

April 9, Germany seized Denmark. That meant, Germany got rights—"rights" or whatever you call it—to Denmark's American colony, Greenland. At once we realized the war was brought nearer to us—Germany, if in possession of Greenland, could descend upon Canada and upon us. We were mildly concerned, but did nothing. We did nothing because we still complacently assumed that Germany would be beaten by Britain and France. Then Germany would be ousted from Denmark. We would not need to worry about Greenland.

Closer in Holland

Then, May 10,, came Germany's next step in conquest—and our next step in awakening. In early May, Germany entered and conquered Holland. By that, Germany got rights to Holland's colonies in the Caribbean. That came closer home to us—for these Holland possessions were close to our Panama canal. We stirred in our sleep, but did not completely wake up.

So far, all that Germany had got was a conqueror's rights to the Danish and Holland colonies in the Western Hemisphere. She could not exercise those rights, could not take physical possession of these colonies, until she conquered the British fleet. And we continued to assume that Germany would not conquer the British fleet. Britain and France, we thought, would defeat or successfully resist Germany. The British fleet would continue to keep Germany away from the American hemisphere. We continued to drowse.

France Next

Our next step in emergence from somnolence came about mid-June. Germany conquered France. Alarmingly it occurred to us, Germany might now conquer England. If Germany, by conquering England, got possession of the British fleet, we would stand naked to Hitler's sword. It would be the same if the British fleet were destroyed or scuttled as an incident of the final fighting.

In that event, Germany, with her own fleet, and with what she might get of the British fleet, and with the control she already had of the French fleet, and with the Italian fleet, and with command of all the shipbuilding facilities in Europe — Germany, thus equipped, could come and take possession of all the British, French and Dutch colonies near our shores. Further than that, Germany thus equipped, might if she chose, make an immediate attack upon the United States, directly or by way of Canada or Latin America.

Woke Us Up

Comprehension of that woke us up. Comprehension of that led to the alarmed hurry of preparedness which we began in June, including conscription, the mutual defense pact with Canada, and other steps not yet fully developed.

Comprehension of that possibility —that the British fleet might be captured or destroyed or scuttled—was the genesis of the arrangement we recently concluded with Britain. The more specific features of that arrangement are generally understood, the fifty destroyers and the naval bases.

Another feature was not included in the formal agreement, because this was not a contract but only a voluntary undertaking by Britain, a declaration of policy by her. It was first made by Prime Minister Churchill, June 4. It read:

> "If, during the course of this present war . . . the water surrounding the British Isles should become untenable for British ships of war, the British fleet would in no event be surrendered or sunk, but would be sent overseas for the defense of other parts of the Empire."

Settled Policy

Subsequently, Secretary of State Hull formally inquired if this statement "represents the settled policy of the British government." British Ambassador Lord Lothian replied that it "certainly did . . ."

That is a pregnant declaration. Almost certainly it is to Canada that the British fleet, or most of it, would be sent. And Canada has neither ports to harbor all the fleet, nor financial capacity to support it. Quite likely the fleet would come to United States ports. Already, on June 17, before the situation became acute, present Secretary of War Stimson recommended that our ports be thrown open to the British fleet.

In the possibility—which is a possibility only but which prudence must take into account—of the island of England being conquered, it seems probable the British fleet and our own would co-operate, in defense of us, and of the remaining parts of the British empire. And the co-operation would probably be more than merely naval.

Fingerprinting Gets New Uses

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Fingerprints are now being used in a number of novel ways to prevent crime as well as to apprehend evildoers after crimes have been committed. Identification by the fingerprint methods helps to prevent persons with criminal records from engaging in occupations where they might be tempted to utilize their extra-legal talents.

An order just issued by Police Commissioner Valentine of New York City is expected to drive the criminal element from the city's night clubs made famous as hotbeds of crime by the movies. The order requires the fingerprinting of all persons having a hand in the operations of "cabarets," practically all of their employes and regular entertainers. Police define "cabarets" as any place where music and entertainment is provided for the patrons.

In the case of operation by partnership or corporation, all the partners or officers are required to submit to fingerprinting. As to employes, all those who come in contact with the general public must submit.

An ordinance enacted in Indianapolis a year ago, and upheld by the Indiana Supreme Court, provides for the fingerprinting of patrons of pawn shops and a number of other cities are using the fingerprint method of protecting the public in various ways. Both Buffalo and Indianapolis issue identification cards to their police officers. These cards carry the fingerprints, photographs and signature of the officer. They offer protection for the general public and for other police departments against impersonation of officers. There would appear no good reason why other cities should not adopt this plan.

In this connection, it is suggested that businessmen, when asked to cash checks for persons not well known to them, request a thumbprint of the person cashing the check. Few bad check passers would risk leaving this tell-tale mark.

Some Are Going Back to Farms

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

The "back to the farm" movement has gone past a mere fad and become a definite population trend. During the past 10 years about two million people have returned to rural living, and the 1940 farm population is estimated at 32,245,000, the highest in twenty-four years and very close to the all-time high reached in 1916.

Part of this increase is due to the excess of births over deaths among farm people, which is higher than in the cities. Urban unemployment also has decreased the urge to leave the farm to go and "make good in the city."

But another factor is the increasing attractiveness of farm life. Under modern conditions, with good roads, electrification, and labor-saving machinery, there is less and less difference between the living standard in the country and in the city. We are on the way toward a new kind of living which will combine as never before the best things of both country and city life.

Autobiography Of Jack Dempsey Is Commended

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

Writing and fighting is not a common blend of talents. We have the classic instance of Benvenuto Cellini, of course, and then I remember the amazing Sam Berger of San Francisco, who was amateur heavy weight champion and Bob Fitzsimmons manager and sparring partner. Sam was the town wit, burlesquing elegance and sophistication but with a wrist as limber in writing as it was tough in the ring. He used to contribute some sprightly pieces, all of his own devising, to the old New York Sun, along with his spoofing partners, those incredible Mizners.

This is by way of introducing Jack Dempsey's autobiography, "Round by Round," just out today, published by Whittlesey House. It weighs in at about two pounds, has a long reach and packs the punch of good narrative covering an exciting stretch of years.

Does a Good Job

Jack's "collaborator" is put down as Myron M. Stearns. He does a good job of collaborating, as Jack weaves his way in from his early Utah and Colorado boyhood, without any literary trimmings and with a suggestion of easy colloquial speech which gives one the idea that Jack just talked off the book and Mr. Stearns, the wordsmith, was just his amanuensis.

It's a story that might start any little 40-year-old bookkeeper feeling his muscle and practicing the slipping left jab, the snap-away and the right cross so attractively pictured and described in the back of the book.

Of special interest, not only to boxing fans but to all who remember one of the most exciting episodes of ring history, is Jack's chivalrous account of the "battle of the long count." He tells of dropping Tunney in the seventh round of that memorable Chicago mix-up of Sept. 22, 1927. "Then and there I thought I had regained the championship," he writes. "Gene Tunney was sprawled before me. It didn't seem possible that he could get up inside the count. If he did, I would be waiting to finish him.

Ready To Leap

"But the very thing that in the past had enabled me to win many a fight now stood in my way. Throughout this account, I have emphasized the amount of time I put in learning to make many of my ring actions as nearly automatic as possible. That training enabled me to hold up my end and win a decision from Gunboat Smith in San Francisco, after I had been almost knocked out in a battle that can be checked as one of the turning points in my career. But this time my training was against me.

"I had always, in the ring, held myself ready to leap toward any antagonist the moment he was again on his feet, to take every advantage of the knockdown and finish him off as quickly as possible.

Ordered Away

"Although it had been clearly agreed upon before this fight, that in the event of a knockdown, the other boxer was to go at once to a neutral corner, I kept close to my fallen opponent, as had been customary in the old days. As the referee, Dave Barry, started to count over Tunney, he noticed this and ordered me to go to a corner farther away. After I had reluctantly and somewhat bewildered, gone to the corner he ordered, he came back and took up the count over Tunney.

"This is where the much disputed 'long count,' which reverberated around the boxing world for years, occurred. Instead of picking up the count from the timekeeper at the point it had already reached—a number of seconds on which there is much disagreement—Barry started the count over again at 'One.'"

Drubbed Five Years

I never knew before that Jack Dempsey took a full five years drubbing before he hit the up-trail—mauled by second-raters, slipping back every time he got a toe-hold, with little to encourage him until he dumped the none too impressive Gunboat Smith, in San Francisco. It was not only will and staying power which made him one of the greatest heavyweight champions, but there was a lot of headwork, too.

Along the way, he stopped to figure everything out. He warns youngsters that they can't mix boxing and loose habits. It is a highly moral book, this prizefighter's life story, extolling courage and discipline and revealing the importance of making the most of whatever natural "savvy" you may have. —Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Straw Man Gets a Good Slugging

MR. ROOSEVELT said at the outset of his radio talk before the Teamsters' union at Washington that he was in doubt whether his talk was a political speech, or merely an incursion into American history. It was soon apparent, however, that it was a political speech, pure and simple. In fact, that was so obvious that the radio people were quite on safe ground in requiring that the Democratic National Committee pay for the radio time.

But Mr. Roosevelt had a pretty good time crooning for votes with a rigamarole of platitudes and beating around a straw man. The latter consisted of an imaginary terrible opposition that is seeking to destroy all the worthy objectives of the "social gains" made under the New Deal. That, of course, is sheer nonsense. There is no bogey man of this kind, even of straw. Nobody wants to sacrifice any gains that have actually been made either in this or any other period of American history. Mr. Roosevelt's opponent has clearly stated that.

But there is considerable doubt that many things devised and attempted by the New Deal have been in the nature of gains, social and otherwise, while anybody in the possession of his wits knows that methods of seeking the same objectives can be clumsy, ineffectual and costly, on the one hand, or expeditious, safe and far-sighted, on the other hand. The reason Mr. Roosevelt has to indulge in political generalities, twaddle so many commonplaces and slug around straw men is that it has become obvious to so many persons that his plans and methods fall within the former category, as actual results—or lack of them—have proved.

Government Control and Influence of the Radio

NO THREAT of government-controlled radio can be seen in this nation, such as exists in other countries, by the committee on Communications of the American Bar Association in a report to its annual convention in Philadelphia.

But the committee significantly added that government regulatory boards are "under constant and powerful pressure" to follow the policies of the president.

"Since the president must act as head of a party as well as the head of a nation," the committee said in the report, "this means that to some extent the governmental groups themselves will be influenced by the president's partisan aim that his party shall succeed at the polls."

Wherefore any who may erroneously suppose there should be more governmental regulation of this form of communication might well consider the restraints already existing and look to modification of them rather than increasing them.

But, what can be done to offset the disadvantage now presented? The association committee says the "disinterested public" should be constantly reminded "that it must depend largely on its own direct and continuous efforts to get the kinds of programs it needs." That seems to be about all that can be done in this campaign so long as the executive thus holds this whip handle over radio.

The Bombardment Of London

HITLER'S ASSERTION that Germany can defeat Britain in an air war is based upon numbers of bombing planes and distance of air bases from bombing objectives.

Germany had an undoubted superiority in numbers of bombing planes. What the ratio is now is unknown but it was once estimated to be twelve to one. As far distance, the Germans have but a few miles to fly to London. It takes British flyers three and one-half hours to reach Berlin.

Unquestionably these are Nazi advantages but Britain has some to match them. Britain can concentrate more on defense in its limited area. Germany can not defend its far-flung zone in the intensive way that Britons defend theirs. Consequently Germans lose more planes and pilots, which helps to narrow the gap in numbers. America as a rapidly developing source of supply also helps to build Britain up.

Despite the destruction now being caused by German raids on London, experts still hold to the belief that Hitler can never defeat Britain in an air war alone. Of course if his air armada can do sufficient damage, it may make it possible for his armies to invade England, and Britain seems to be well prepared for that.

Gains Come from Adversity

"IT SHOULD BE REMEMBERED that America's greatest strength and its greatest contributions to mankind have come from its days of adversity, not its days of prosperity. Religious liberty came out of the bleakness of a Rhode Island winter. Political liberty was born in the snows of Valley Forge. Personal liberty for all Americans is a heritage of the dark night of the Civil war. Not until the trying days of the great depression did we gain as a nation an economic and social consciousness."

These words, spoken by the Rev. Dr. Hillyer Straton, of New York City, son of the late Dr. John Roach Straton, should bring considerable encouragement to those who look with fear upon the future, particularly at the huge defense job facing the United States with its attendant hardships and sacrifices. The subject of Dr. Straton's sermon was "Why Should God Bless America?" in which he treated of the song now so widely sung.

"Too many Americans have felt that God is with us because of our fatness—our vast material resources, Dr. Straton said, "Our use of the resources with which we have been blessed will determine whether God will be with us. As never before in her history America needs a return to personal, national and international righteousness. Our whole 130,000,000 people can sing 'God Bless America' until they are hoarse, but God will only bless us as we are willing to make the proper use of our blessings.

A few good thoughts to remember when Irving Berlin's song is sung.

A Veritable Miracle Occurs in Minnesota

MINNESOTA is entitled to three cheers for keeping faith with its motorists by allowing an "emergency" gasoline tax to terminate the first of this month.

There is an old saying that miracles never happen, but this is one exception to the rule, as generally new taxes once imposed are kept on the books; and in order to excuse a new tax it is usually labelled as an emergency tax. On many occasions if there is no emergency one is easily invented, although in recent years we have had them by the jugful.

The action of Minnesota is receiving the plaudits of the automobile clubs. The Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland, declares that it is refreshing "to learn that one state has recognized its obligations to a group of citizens carrying the heaviest burden of taxation by actually keeping its pledge to end a tax at the termination of the 'emergency' for which it was levied."

The club hopes the example set by Minnesota will be followed generally throughout the United States so far as motorists are concerned. It is a hope all citizens can entertain with regard to all added emergency taxation, but it rests upon a pretty slippery spot in view of the terrible bills that have been piled up for the taxpayers to meet. The Minnesota case will probably stand as a unique exception.

Knowledge and Liberty

IT WAS ADAM SMITH, famed economist, who once declared that the people of England are very jealous of their liberties, but unfortunately do not understand in what their true liberties consist.

Can the same thing be said of the people of the United States? Scarcely. Citizens of the United States, schooled in the Bill of Rights and the fundamental principles of republican government, have a rather lively understanding of precisely what it means to live in a land of freedom.

This may be due to the fact that America, in contrast with Britain, has a written constitution wherein are to be found definite expressions of Liberty's ideals and specific curbs on the exercise of autocratic authority.

However, Adam Smith's comment is a good reminder of the Socratic dictum that knowledge is virtue—especially so in connection with popular appreciation and comprehension of the affairs of government. It is always in times of crisis that a free people's liberties are menaced from within by those who would scrap freedom for compulsion.

Although several more governors have announced that Thanksgiving Day will be observed on the traditional fourth Thursday in November, President Roosevelt is said to be stubbornly holding out for his New Deal Thanksgiving. After the election returns are in, he probably won't feel like celebrating it at all.

Is Candidate Roosevelt, as irreverently suggested by one anti-New Dealer, spending most of his time at his mother's estate at Hyde Park so that he can gaze upon the monument he erected to himself?

Japan, the home of jiu jitsu wrestling, appears to have such a good grip on China it cannot let go.

Are You a Character Judge?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Almost anybody can play a practical joke on me. . . . I never seem able to develop the proper amount of skepticism. It must be my trusting nature.

Accuse me of having no sense of humor and I might admit the truth of your accusation. . . . Say I'm a poor judge of character and it will be my firm opinion that you are mistaken.

Marshall Maslin

Charles Dickens said that nothing is truer than judging character by physiognomy "taken in connection with manner." . . . He would not judge a man entirely by the shape of his nose or the size of his chin, but also by his conduct.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, once mistook a philosopher for a highwayman. . . . He had done more research on the subject than any man of his day and yet in his application he made a mistake. . . . Any pickpocket or confidence man would know better.

It is said, and some believe, that babies instinctively know what you are like, and this fable has humiliated many kindhearted men and women. . . . Babies, to be sure, are more singleminded than grown-ups because they haven't so much on their minds. But they aren't so much as judges of character, or they wouldn't have chosen some of the parents they did.

A baby and a puppy playing joyfully together make a pleasant sight, but they seem to be about the same age mentally.

Dogs, too, are supposed to know at once whether you like them, hate them, or fear them. . . . I think it's a matter of smell, and there may be something in the theory that human beings when afraid or angry exude a definitely recognizable odor.

But after all there IS this to be said: After a man has lived with himself for a considerable number of years, his inner traits have imprinted themselves on his outer appearance so clearly that almost anybody can make a good guess as to his true character.

Profits Tax Is A Monstrosity, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 — The federal excess profits tax as it is likely to pass, is a monstrosity. It might well be entitled "A Bill To Prevent New Enterprise and Destroy Small Businesses."

I know a company that was organized in 1928 with a capital of about $3,000,000 — just in time to get the full effect of the 1929 avalanche and what came after. It was to make a completely new product. The long, lean hard years ate much of its capital away. Its stockholders have never had a cent out of it. But they stuck and it struggled miraculously and lived.

Two years ago it began to click as a result of a long hopeless struggle for sales and improvement of product.

Would Get Hard Blow

Under this tax bill it will be taxed up to forty per cent on its excess earnings for its fiscal year 1940 over the average of the preceding four years, during which its earnings were slight or minus plus a normal tax of approximately twenty per cent. That will take easily thirty-three and one-third per cent of its earnings.

This company's business will gain nothing by the armament program. On the contrary, it will be hurt by that. Such a large yearly cash outlay from its meager quick assets will seriously embarrass its operations and prevent any normal expansion of its business. Its only chance to recoup its years losses, perfect the original factory equipment on which it was planned, and provide reasonable margins of safety was out of earnings. Now that chance will be impaired, if not destroyed.

Ratio is High

It gains nothing by its permissable alternative of choosing a basis of graduated tax on the ration of earnings to invested capital, because that capital has been so whittled away by its years of losses that this ratio is necessarily high.

Stockholders whose investment has been sterile and declining for most of twelve years and who had just begun to hope for some recovery, will have to abandon their hope and may begin to fear for the company's survival.

This is just another case among thousands of similar ones that could be cited. Another class is that of recently organized service companies with small capital and no record of earnings. This tax law will be a practical barrier to any progress or prospect of success for them.

Easier on Big Companies

A large and heavily capitalized company that has had reasonably good returns for the last four years will be affected to no such murderous degree. Indeed, in view of this terrific load in new or small competing industry, such a company could well afford to lower both price and profit to keep its earnings below any "excess" at all and thus destroy and monopolize the business of all its small cometitors.

This tendency in this legislation is so blatant and so marked that one is tempted to question whether it is not a deliberate attempt to Nazify all business by driving it into great units and there by regulation and other encroachment convert it to Hitler's National Socialism or Musolini's corporative state. No wonder small business and the great middle class are almost 100 per cent against this Administration.

Strong Industry Needed

What this New Deal doesn't seem to understand, is that strength for war depends upon a far stronger and more efficient industry than we have ever had. That can't be accomplished if the first step is a drastic taxation policy that practically destroys the profit motive. That motive is the gas that makes our industrial engine go. The only known economic substitution for the hope or reward—the American system—is the fear of punishment—the system of Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler. There is no middle way. We can't go that way without industrial paralysis.

Very few if any business managers want to profiteer in this emergency, but very few are willing to default on the trusteeships and ruin the investment of their stockholders by accepting inordinate risks and unbearable burdens. — Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE OLD OPEN DOOR

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 — Increased intensity of German attack upon England brings the United States to another stage of its own course about the war. What our next stage will be is not a matter of conscious calculation by us. We can predict it in part—but we can only predict what the United States will do by first predicting what will happen in Europe. Our whole course about the war is not a course which we choose. It is not a course forced upon us. Successive stages of the battling in Europe force upon us successive stages of necessity. To realize this, follow events of the past five months:

Mark Sullivan

April 9, Germany seized Denmark. That meant, Germany got rights—"rights" or whatever you call it—to Denmark's American colony, Greenland. At once we realized the war was brought nearer to us—Germany, if in possession of Greenland, could descend upon Canada and upon us. We were mildly concerned, but did nothing. We did nothing because we still complacently assumed that Germany would be beaten by Britain and France. Then Germany would be ousted from Denmark. We would not need to worry about Greenland.

Closer in Holland

Then, May 10,, came Germany's next step in conquest—and our next step in awakening. In early May, Germany entered and conquered Holland. By that, Germany got rights to Holland's colonies in the Caribbean. That came closer home to us—for these Holland possessions were close to our Panama canal. We stirred in our sleep, but did not completely wake up.

So far, all that Germany had got was a conqueror's rights to the Danish and Holland colonies in the Western Hemisphere. She could not exercise those rights, could not take physical possession of these colonies, until she conquered the British fleet. And we continued to assume that Germany would not conquer the British fleet. Britain and France, we thought, would defeat or successfully resist Germany. The British fleet would continue to keep Germany away from the American hemisphere. We continued to drowse.

France Next

Our next step in emergence from somnolence came about mid-June. Germany conquered France. Alarmingly it occurred to us, Germany might now conquer England. If Germany, by conquering England, got possession of the British fleet, we would stand naked to Hitler's sword. It would be the same if the British fleet were destroyed or scuttled as an incident of the final fighting.

In that event, Germany, with her own fleet, and with what she might get of the British fleet, and with the control she already had of the French fleet, and with the Italian fleet, and with command of all the shipbuilding facilities in Europe — Germany, thus equipped, could come and take possession of all the British, French and Dutch colonies near our shores. Further than that, Germany thus equipped, might if she chose, make an immediate attack upon the United States, directly or by way of Canada or Latin America.

Woke Us Up

Comprehension of that woke us up. Comprehension of that led to the alarmed hurry of preparedness which we began in June, including conscription, the mutual defense pact with Canada, and other steps not yet fully developed.

Comprehension of that possibility —that the British fleet might be captured or destroyed or scuttled—was the genesis of the arrangement we recently concluded with Britain. The more specific features of that arrangement are generally understood, the fifty destroyers and the naval bases.

Another feature was not included in the formal agreement, because this was not a contract but only a voluntary undertaking by Britain, a declaration of policy by her. It was first made by Prime Minister Churchill, June 4. It read:

> "If, during the course of this present war . . . the water surrounding the British Isles should become untenable for British ships of war, the British fleet would in no event be surrendered or sunk, but would be sent overseas for the defense of other parts of the Empire."

Settled Policy

Subsequently, Secretary of State Hull formally inquired if this statement "represents the settled policy of the British government." British Ambassador Lord Lothian replied that it "certainly did . . ."

That is a pregnant declaration. Almost certainly it is to Canada that the British fleet, or most of it, would be sent. And Canada has neither ports to harbor all the fleet, nor financial capacity to support it. Quite likely the fleet would come to United States ports. Already, on June 17, before the situation became acute, present Secretary of War Stimson recommended that our ports be thrown open to the British fleet.

In the possibility—which is a possibility only but which prudence must take into account—of the island of England being conquered, it seems probable the British fleet and our own would co-operate, in defense of us, and of the remaining parts of the British empire. And the co-operation would probably be more than merely naval.

Fingerprinting Gets New Uses

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Fingerprints are now being used in a number of novel ways to prevent crime as well as to apprehend evildoers after crimes have been committed. Identification by the fingerprint methods helps to prevent persons with criminal records from engaging in occupations where they might be tempted to utilize their extra-legal talents.

An order just issued by Police Commissioner Valentine of New York City is expected to drive the criminal element from the city's night clubs made famous as hotbeds of crime by the movies. The order requires the fingerprinting of all persons having a hand in the operations of "cabarets," practically all of their employes and regular entertainers. Police define "cabarets" as any place where music and entertainment is provided for the patrons.

In the case of operation by partnership or corporation, all the partners or officers are required to submit to fingerprinting. As to employes, all those who come in contact with the general public must submit.

An ordinance enacted in Indianapolis a year ago, and upheld by the Indiana Supreme Court, provides for the fingerprinting of patrons of pawn shops and a number of other cities are using the fingerprint method of protecting the public in various ways. Both Buffalo and Indianapolis issue identification cards to their police officers. These cards carry the fingerprints, photographs and signature of the officer. They offer protection for the general public and for other police departments against impersonation of officers. There would appear no good reason why other cities should not adopt this plan.

In this connection, it is suggested that businessmen, when asked to cash checks for persons not well known to them, request a thumbprint of the person cashing the check. Few bad check passers would risk leaving this tell-tale mark.

Some Are Going Back to Farms

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

The "back to the farm" movement has gone past a mere fad and become a definite population trend. During the past 10 years about two million people have returned to rural living, and the 1940 farm population is estimated at 32,245,000, the highest in twenty-four years and very close to the all-time high reached in 1916.

Part of this increase is due to the excess of births over deaths among farm people, which is higher than in the cities. Urban unemployment also has decreased the urge to leave the farm to go and "make good in the city."

But another factor is the increasing attractiveness of farm life. Under modern conditions, with good roads, electrification, and labor-saving machinery, there is less and less difference between the living standard in the country and in the city. We are on the way toward a new kind of living which will combine as never before the best things of both country and city life.

THE DAILY STORY

THE PACIFIST

She Knew the Meaning of Sacrifice and Sorrow, for All Her Life She Had Lived Two Lives Instead of One

By FRAN KEITH

She was afraid now. And as she prayed she remembered how afraid she had been before he was born. "He doesn't need to be a beautiful baby," had been her prayer; "just let him be whole in mind and body!"

He was beautiful when he came, as well as perfect. God had been better than she deserved, she thought.

There had come other times when she was afraid. When he was a fat chubby baby, those long fearful nights when he had the croup, and it seemed that every breath would be his last. And when he was 6 and the bigger boys who were playing ball told him to get out of the way and he had climbed to the top of a tall poplar tree. They carried him home bruised and unconscious, and she thought he was dead.

He Had Let Her Call a Doctor.

When he started to school her thoughts were with him all day long. Thinking about him made light work of washing or scrubbing or hoeing in the blazing sun. When he got home from school they did things together. She helped him with the milking and he set the supper table and helped her with the dishes and sometimes after supper when they weren't too tired they'd walk on sweet smelling summer nights, or on the cold crisp snow of winter to see a neighbor, or sometimes just to watch the moonrise on their lake. Those were good times.

But he grew up too fast. And soon he was tearing around the roads at night and going to dances and to call on girls. And she was afraid because they drove so fast and because the girls somehow seemed so much older than their years. She never told him that she lay awake at night until she heard the car turn into their lane. Sometimes she did fall into restless sleep and often then she'd have some horrible dream in which he came to evil. But after an eternity of waiting the car always drove into the yard and he was safe, and she knew herself a foolish mother full of foolish fears.

He was such a handsome boy. Always grinning and looking for fun, untying her apron strings when she was up to her elbows in suds, or singing "Oh Johnny" to her with gestures while she kneaded the dough for an apple pie.

And now he lay in a room close by, white and quiet, and she was afraid. He had come in from the field a week ago with a pain in his side. When it became unbearable he had let her call the doctor, and when the doctor came he said, "Appendicitis—we'll have to get him to the hospital at once."

The 25 miles they had to drive over a dirt road were an agony. And now she waited, in agony. She was alone in the waiting room.

Her lips didn't form the words, but her heart kept pounding out, "I'll spend my whole life making payment, God, if You'll just let him stay with me."

They had been gone an hour now. The doctor said it would take about three quarters of an hour. Why didn't they bring him back? Something must have happened, gone wrong. What if they'd got him here too late? Why didn't they tell her why it was taking so long? Why did they just let her sit here alone?

"He's going to be all right," the pretty fair-haired nurse had told her before they wheeled him away. "You've got one of the finest surgeons in the world." Would that be enough? The tall gray-haired doctor. Did he hold her boy's life in his hands? And what was he doing so long? Why didn't they come out?

And then she heard the rubber-tired wagon go by the door. As she saw his long body covered with a sheet, his face as white as death, she began to cry. The doctor came a few minutes later. "You mustn't cry so," he said, "He's going to be all right. He's going to be fine. Why, in a month he'll be back on a plow! Now you go out and get yourself a good cup of coffee and we'll take care of him. Then you'll feel better and you can come back and sit with him."

"Thank you," she tried to smile.

At the head of the stairs a Madonna stood upon a pedestal. And again her heart pounded out her prayer, "I'll do anything, God, anything!"

She took hold of the stair-rail, but as she went to make a step her knees buckled up under her. Her legs seemed turned to rubber and as she clung to the rail a black-robed nun passed by and saw her there. Quickly she came to help her down and dry her tears.

"I'm going to be all right," she said. "I'll have a cup of coffee and I'll be all right."

The nun smiled kindly as she took her to the door.

Outside the world was bright with sun and green with grass and trees.

Down the street a newsboy shouted the tidings of a new war declared. Tomorrow, she knew, she would be afraid again. But today there was room in her heart for nothing but happiness.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

THE DAILY STORY

THE PACIFIST

She Knew the Meaning of Sacrifice and Sorrow, for All Her Life She Had Lived Two Lives Instead of One

By FRAN KEITH

She was afraid now. And as she prayed she remembered how afraid she had been before he was born. "He doesn't need to be a beautiful baby," had been her prayer; "just let him be whole in mind and body!"

He was beautiful when he came, as well as perfect. God had been better than she deserved, she thought.

There had come other times when she was afraid. When he was a fat chubby baby, those long fearful nights when he had the croup, and it seemed that every breath would be his last. And when he was 6 and the bigger boys who were playing ball told him to get out of the way and he had climbed to the top of a tall poplar tree. They carried him home bruised and unconscious, and she thought he was dead.

When he started to school her thoughts were with him all day long. Thinking about him made light work of washing or scrubbing or hoeing in the blazing sun. When he got home from school they did things together. She helped him with the milking and he set the supper table and helped her with the dishes and sometimes after supper when they weren't too tired they'd walk on sweet smelling summer nights, or on the cold crisp snow of winter to see a neighbor, or sometimes just to watch the moonrise on their lake. Those were good times.

But he grew up too fast. And soon he was tearing around the roads at night and going to dances and to call on girls. And she was afraid because they drove so fast and because the girls somehow seemed so much older than their years. She never told him that she lay awake at night until she heard the car turn into their lane. Sometimes she did fall into restless sleep and often then she'd have some horrible dream in which he came to evil. But after an eternity of waiting the car always drove into the yard and he was safe, and she knew herself a foolish mother full of foolish fears.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TAKING DISCARDS FIRST

IF THE declarer at a suit contract sees more losers in his hand than he can afford, which can be picked off by the defenders as soon as they get the lead, his job is to get rid of some of them before they have the lead. In such circumstances, if the trump suit is one in which they are either sure or likely to win a trick before all of the trumps are out, he should endeavor to shed the losers before tackling trumps. An ideal way is to discard them on the winners of some other suit, if he is fortunate enough to possess one in his own hand or the dummy.

1. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A K Q ♣ 10 6
2. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A K J ♣ 10 6
3. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A Q J 10 ♣ 10
4. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A 7 6 3 ♣ K

South's Hand

♠ K Q J 9 6 ♥ A 6 4 3 ♦ 9 ♣ A 8 5

With the heart K led against South's 4-Spades, and any of the four numbered hands as dummy, the declarer must get discards promptly before leading trumps, or risk being defeated.

When No. 1 is dummy, he counts one loser in spades and three immediate ones in hearts, if he leads trumps. But he can make his contract, after winning with the heart A, by taking dummy's three high diamonds, discarding two hearts on them, and then leading his A and another club, before leading trumps. He will thus cut his losers to one in spades, one in hearts and one in clubs, ruffing his own third club when next in the lead.

When No. 2 is dummy, he plays exactly the same, except that he must try the diamond finesse first, as otherwise he has no reasonable chance to make contract unless he can luckily drop a doubleton diamond queen.

If No. 3 is the dummy, the best play, after winning the heart A, is to lead to the diamond A, then lead the diamond Q. If it is covered by the K, ruff and lead the club A, ruff a club and on the diamond Q and J discard hearts. If the diamond Q is not covered, discard a heart and hope East is holding up the A; if the hope is realized, continue leading diamonds for heart discards except when the K covers, then ruff.

With No. 4 for dummy, win the heart A, club K, diamond A, ruff a diamond, discard one of dummy's hearts on the club A, ruff a club, and lead a heart. Later ruff one heart high in dummy, and so lose only two tricks in hearts and one in spades.

History of City Water Is Related To Kiwanis Club

Present System Was Established Twenty-seven Years Ago

Cumberland Kiwanians learned yesterday that they drink "as fine water as can be obtained anywhere in the United States," but it wasn't always so.

Establishment of the city's present system was accomplished twenty-seven years ago only after a terrific battle at the polls, President William M. Somerville recalled.

Before Cumberland began getting its water from Lake Gordon and Lake Koon in nearby Pennsylvania, the water was pumped directly into homes from the polluted Potomac, without any purification treatments of any kind.

True, few people were foolish enough to drink it, but they used it for nearly all other purposes. Drinking water, brought from nearby springs, was sold at a nice price.

As a result of such a system, Cumberland had a terrifically high typhoid rate, 200 per 100,000 of population.

Despite the dangers of the old water system, if it could be called a system, it was long uphill struggle to persuade the voters to approve a bond issue for establishment of a modern system. The measure just squeaked through by a majority of less than 100, Somerville stated.

It's been a long time since there's been any typhoid here traceable to drinking water, the club president declared in hailing the present water system.

Somerville's talk was preceded by a brief address by Water Commissioner William J. Edwards, who also told how pure the city's water is, and showing of a colored moving picture, "Behind the Water Tap," produced by the industrial chemical sales division of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company. A commentary on the film was furnished by Charles J. Bruce, superintendent of the city-owned Evitts Creek Water Company.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

TAKING DISCARDS FIRST

IF THE declarer at a suit contract sees more losers in his hand than he can afford, which can be picked off by the defenders as soon as they get the lead, his job is to get rid of some of them before they have the lead. In such circumstances, if the trump suit is one in which they are either sure or likely to win a trick before all of the trumps are out, he should endeavor to shed the losers before tackling trumps. An ideal way is to discard them on the winners of some other suit, if he is fortunate enough to possess one in his own hand or the dummy.

1. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A K Q ♣ 10 6
2. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A K J ♣ 10 6
3. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A Q J 10 ♣ 10
4. ♠ 10 8 5 3 ♥ 8 7 5 2 ♦ A 7 6 3 ♣ K

South's Hand

♠ K Q J 9 6 ♥ A 6 4 3 ♦ 9 ♣ A 8 5

With the heart K led against South's 4-Spades, and any of the four numbered hands as dummy, the declarer must get discards promptly before leading trumps, or risk being defeated.

When No. 1 is dummy, he counts one loser in spades and three immediate ones in hearts, if he leads trumps. But he can make his contract, after winning with the heart A, by taking dummy's three high diamonds, discarding two hearts on them, and then leading his A and another club, before leading trumps. He will thus cut his losers to one in spades, one in hearts and one in clubs, ruffing his own third club when next in the lead.

When No. 2 is dummy, he plays exactly the same, except that he must try the diamond finesse first, as otherwise he has no reasonable chance to make contract unless he can luckily drop a doubleton diamond queen.

If No. 3 is the dummy, the best play, after winning the heart A, is to lead to the diamond A, then lead the diamond Q. If it is covered by the K, ruff and lead the club A, ruff a club and on the diamond Q and J discard hearts. If the diamond Q is not covered, discard a heart and hope East is holding up the A; if the hope is realized, continue leading diamonds for heart discards except when the K covers, then ruff.

With No. 4 for dummy, win the heart A, club K, diamond A, ruff a diamond, discard one of dummy's hearts on the club A, ruff a club, and lead a heart. Later ruff one heart high in dummy, and so lose only two tricks in hearts and one in spades.

Senate Approves Loans to South American Nations

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP) — The Senate has approved legislation to provide $500,000,000 of loans through the Export-Import Bank to bolster South American economy against Nazi influence.

The loans, proposed by President Roosevelt in a message to Congress July 22, are designed to assist in "orderly marketing" of Latin America's surplus products in the war-disrupted European markets, promote United States trede with the republics to the South and develop sources in this hemisphere for critical minerals such as tin and rubber.

The Senate defeated, 41 to 25, an amendment by Senator Taft (R-Ohio) to restrrct the loans to the latter function and voted down, 46 to 22, another amendment by Senator Danaher (R?Conn) to place a $50,000,000 light on future loans to one nation, and then passed the bill 43 to 27.

The measure now goes back to the House, which previously had passed it in a different form. The House version increased the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by $1,500,000,000—one-third for the Export-Import Bank and the remainder for loans to domestic defense industries. This $1,000,000,000 domestic lending authority was not contained in the Senate bill.

The Senate added a provision, not contained in the House measure, to insure that no loans would be made in violation of the neutrality laws or the Johnson Act.

According to automobile mileage the Lincoln highway is 3,323 miles long.

Short-Cut to Paradise For Wyoming Anglers

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP)—Boylan fish hatchery officials, wanting to empty the ponds, discovered nets stirred up so much silt the fish were in danger of suffocation.

So James Simon, state fish warden, called for anglers to cast their flies into ponds "teeming with trout from 8 to 25 inches long and so hungry they're rarin' to strike at anything that moves."

Did he get volunteers? People who were there said it was only luck that he wasn't trampled in the rush.

It's a Sour Hobby But It Fills His Cup

A Diplomat Does The Unorthodox

BERLIN (AP)—American diplomats are seen just as often balancing a tea cup and sporting striped pants at a reception as any other group of diplomats.

But diplomatic dignity took a bow here recently.

An American secretary (often seen in a silk topper) appeared one morning amid the mass of eight-cylinder cars parked in front of the United States embassy, riding a bicycle—an elegant one, but mind you, a regular bicycle.

Gayly jumping off, and swishing a knickerbockered leg at the astonished line of German chauffeurs, he sedately climbed the stairs to his office.

It has nothing to do with the war or lack of gasoline. Exercise is the idea, exercise.

Here's How To Be an Appetizing Waitress

INDEPENDENCE, Kas., (AP) — When appetites sour in a restaurant, it may be the waitress's fault, says John B. O'Meara, who trains hotel employes.

"Don't ever shout 'dogs in the grass' to the chef when the customer wants frankfurters and sauerkraut," O'Meara advises waitresses.

"Furthermore don't call the customer 'butch' or 'dearies' and don't have brightly painted finger nails.

What Flavor, Please?

Feather-Motif Fabrics Tickle Homemaker's Fancy

By MARGARET KERNODLE
AP Feature Service Writer

Yes, you're looking at feathers —Indian feathers designed for cotton and rayon faille.

What's the idea?

This fall, department stores are showing home furnishing merchandise planned the American Way.

No one will be more pleased than the homemakers who've had a hard time buying modern things on budgets, or matching what they already had.

This American Way is the first comprehensive effort by industrial designers, artists, craftsmen, manufacturers and retailers to coordinate and speed up the art-in-industry movement.

Designers like Scott Wilson are planning textiles and wallpaper with Indian feathers. You'll find that Aubrey Butler's morning glory and John Steuart Curry's Osage orange are interesting prints to go with other American Way products that will suit your fancy and pocketbook.

Before long you'll be able to go into a story and say: "I'd like to see Gilbert Rhode's mahogany tables, Russel Wright's tumblers, Raymond Loewy's hammered aluminum buffet accessories, and Joseph Platt's bedspreads."

Feathers on the wall.

High Andes Studied For Historical Secrets

LOS ANGELES (AP)—What went in the western hemisphere before the days of the Incas and Aztecs may be better known as the result of an expedition now under way.

Sponsored by the School of American Research at Santa Fe and the University of Southern California, the party will seek traces of aboriginal Americans in the high Andes.

A Case of Needless Fear

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Charged with stealing a $4 alarm clock, a male prisoner was surprised — and apprehensive — when he learned he would have the distinction of being tried by Montana's first justice court jury composed entirely of women.

After three-quarters of an hour of deliberation the jury, all married women, returned a verdict of innocent.

Native camel owners lead their camels with as much as 1,400 pounds of freight and drive them as far as 80 miles a day. If they survive this treatment they are given a week's rest in pasture to recuperate.

Better than Rabbits Out of His Hat

SCHAFFHAUSEN, Switzerland (AP) —Schaffhausen taxpayers are reported to be starting a move to nominate their own cantonal treasurer for the Swiss ha.. of fame.

He obtained Parliament's approval in January, 1939, of a cantonal budget providing for a deficit of 433,000 Swiss francs (about $100,000) and turned up in January, 1940, to report a 23,635 franc (about $5,400) profit.

Some of the profit is now going into showing treasurers of other cantons how he did it.

Roll Out the Beefsteak

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., (AP) — happened in a tavern. A wom was placing nickles in the mu machine. Twice she played "Be Barrel Polka," dropped in anot nickle for the same tune. Anot woman swung what witnesses scribed as a "haymaker" and g the music lover "a beautiful shin The music stopped.

UNCORK YOUR CORN! with BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

A Diplomat Does The Unorthodox

BERLIN (AP)—American diplomats are seen just as often balancing a tea cup and sporting striped pants at a reception as any other group of diplomats.

But diplomatic dignity took a bow here recently.

An American secretary (often seen in a silk topper) appeared one morning amid the mass of eight-cylinder cars parked in front of the United States embassy, riding a bicycle—an elegant one, but mind you, a regular bicycle.

Gayly jumping off, and swishing a knickerbockered leg at the astonished line of German chauffeurs, he sedately climbed the stairs to his office.

It has nothing to do with the war or lack of gasoline. Exercise is the idea, exercise.

Here's How To Be an Appetizing Waitress

INDEPENDENCE, Kas., (AP) — When appetites sour in a restaurant, it may be the waitress's fault, says John B. O'Meara, who trains hotel employes.

"Don't ever shout 'dogs in the grass' to the chef when the customer wants frankfurters and sauerkraut," O'Meara advises waitresses.

"Furthermore don't call the customer 'butch' or 'dearies' and don't have brightly painted finger nails.

What Flavor, Please?

Feather-Motif Fabrics Tickle Homemaker's Fancy

By MARGARET KERNODLE
AP Feature Service Writer

Yes, you're looking at feathers—Indian feathers designed for cotton and rayon faille.

What's the idea?

This fall, department stores are showing home furnishing merchandise planned the American Way.

No one will be more pleased than the homemakers who've had a hard time buying modern things on budgets, or matching what they already had.

This American Way is the first comprehensive effort by industrial designers, artists, craftsmen, manufacturers and retailers to coordinate and speed up the art-in-industry movement.

Designers like Scott Wilson are planning textiles and wallpaper with Indian feathers. You'll find that Aubrey Butler's morning glory and John Steuart Curry's Osage orange are interesting prints to go with other American Way products that will suit your fancy and pocketbook.

Before long you'll be able to go into a story and say: "I'd like to see Gilbert Rhode's mahogany tables, Russel Wright's tumblers, Raymond Loewy's hammered aluminum buffet accessories, and Joseph Platt's bedspreads."

Feathers on the wall.

High Andes Studied For Historical Secrets

LOS ANGELES (AP)—What went in the western hemisphere before the days of the Incas and Aztecs may be better known as the result of an expedition now under way.

Sponsored by the School of American Research at Santa Fe and the University of Southern California, the party will seek traces of aboriginal Americans in the high Andes.

A Case of Needless Fear

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Charged with stealing a $4 alarm clock, a male prisoner was surprised — and apprehensive — when he learned he would have the distinction of being tried by Montana's first justice court jury composed entirely of women.

After three-quarters of an hour of deliberation the jury, all married women, returned a verdict of innocent.

Native camel owners lead their camels with as much as 1,400 pounds of freight and drive them as far as 80 miles a day. If they survive this treatment they are given a week's rest in pasture to recuperate.

Better than Rabbits Out of His Hat

SCHAFFHAUSEN, Switzerland (AP) —Schaffhausen taxpayers are reported to be starting a move to nominate their own cantonal treasurer for the Swiss ha.. of fame.

He obtained Parliament's approval in January, 1939, of a cantonal budget providing for a deficit of 433,000 Swiss francs (about $100,000) and turned up in January, 1940, to report a 22,635 franc (about $5,400) profit.

Some of the profit is now going into showing treasurers of other cantons how he did it.

Roll Out the Beefsteak

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., (AP) — It happened in a tavern. A woman was placing nickles in the music machine. Twice she played "Beer Barrel Polka," dropped in another nickle for the same tune. Another woman swung what witnesses described as a "haymaker" and gave the music lover "a beautiful shiner." The music stopped.

Heart Ills Are Easy to Detect, Doctors Say

Modern Medicine Has Many Efficient Methods for an Examination

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

For the examination of the heart, modern medicine has many efficient methods. In fact, it may be said that except for the diseases of the eye, the modern physician is better equipped to form an exact and mathematical concept of the heart than of any other organ in the body.

This examination consists of first getting the patient's history, finding out what infections he has had, and whether on any particular occasion of sudden strain or exertion the heart failed to respond to the demands put upon it—its failure being exhibited either by pain or shortness of breath.

The instrumental examination with the stethoscope, the x-ray and the blood pressure apparatus will give the alert physician a very clear conception of whether there is any organic change in the heart or circulatory system—any enlargement of the heart, any valvular incompetency or obstruction, any hardening of the arteries which impose an extra burden on the heart's action.

Recording Changes

Then, with the instrument known as the electrocardiograph, a record can be made of the electrical changes in the heart muscle during contraction which give an indication of the smoothness with which the muscular action of the heart is being carried on. The heart is nothing but a hollow muscle, designed to do work. It does very hard work, as much in a day as many engines or machines, and in order to do it, the muscular action must coordinate in a certain way. When this coordination is disrupted, either from irritation by poisons or nervous stimulation, or because of excessive strain or weakness of the muscle itself, more or less serious consequences may follow. All these things the electrocardiograph can detect and often safeguard.

One feature of the heart examination, however, we would like to know about but as yet have no very good method of determining. This is the functional capacity of the heart.

How Much Will It Stand?

Suppose you examine a heart and find it apparently all right — no enlargement, no anatomic defect, no obvious disorder of the musculature. Still you may want to know—how much work will that heart do? How much will it stand? These questions may be very important before long when the examination of the conscript troops for the army occurs. How much can this fellow's heart do, is the question. Will it sustain him when he has to carry so many pounds of equipment through so many days of hard fighting?

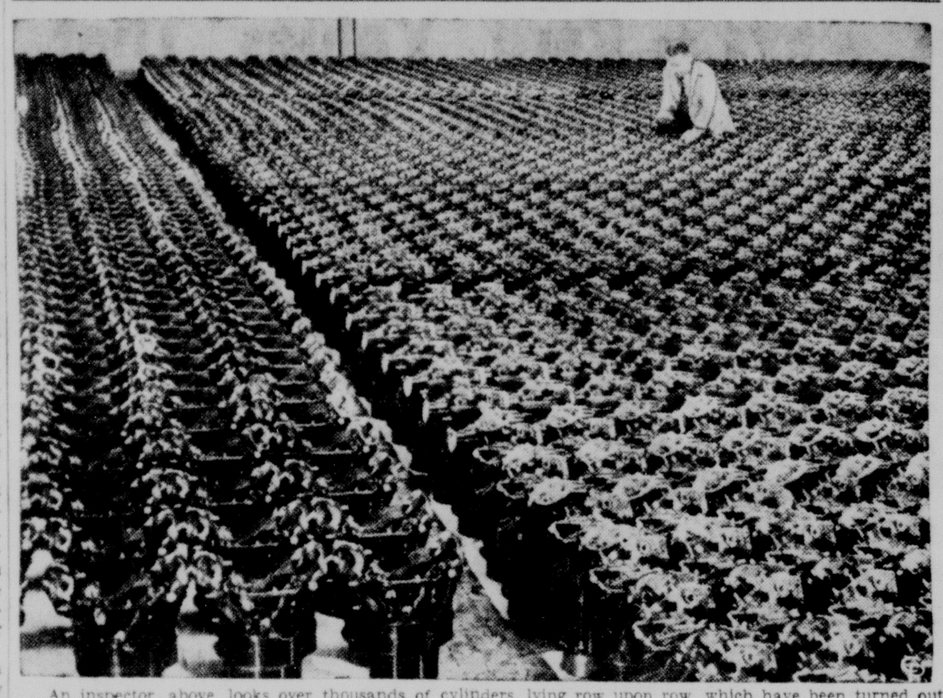
About the best test we have for the functional capacity of the heart is observation of the pulse and blood pressure before and after doing a measured amount of work—say a rapid ascent of 20 steps or 30 lifts of twenty-pound weights. If the elevation of pulse rate is less than 50 per cent and returns to normal in three minutes, this is considered a good functional response. But this sort of test is not very dependable. More so are observations of the electrocardiogram before and after a shot of adrenalin (which is considered the same as exercise). The electrical response gives an idea of the integrity of the heart muscle.

Questions and Answers

H. S. T.—"Are cattle ever affected with lues venerea, and can it be transmitted to human beings through milk?"

Answer—No.

A BIG CROP OF CYLINDERS FOR U. S. WAR PLANES



An inspector, above, looks over thousands of cylinders, lying row upon row, which have been turned out by the Pratt and Whitney plant in Hartford, Conn. Operating night and day, the plant is working to manufacture $27,000,000 worth of airplane engines contracted for by the United States government to be used in the new fighting planes.

You Can't Collect On Shell-shocked Hens

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Whether or not it sets a precedent, the state board of control has ruled that the Army is not responsible for shell-shock suffered by chickens.

The board found that Joe Mikulich, farmer, was entitled to $21 damages because National Guard maneuvers had sent a 37 mm. shell through his chicken house and killed several hens.

But when Mikulich put in a claim for five cases of unmarketable eggs, alleging his laying hens had been shell-shocked, the board drew the line.

Shoplifting Dog

KINGSTON, N. C. (AP)—Policeman H. D. Hall reports that a dog entered a variety store and took a package of razor blades. Hall believes that the dog may have been trained as a sneak thief.

Farm Was Going to the Dogs, So Family Made It a Town

AP Feature Service

DELLVILLE, N. C. — Stray dogs with a taste for chicken are responsible for this incorporated town — perhaps the smallest in the United States.

In 1925 the three Dellinger brothers, operating a large chicken farm, were bothered by dogs. The dogs, because of lack of enforcement of county laws, played havoc with the fowls.

Davis P. Dellinger, another brother and a lawyer in nearby Cherryville and a part owner of the farm, came to the rescue.

He conceived and carried out the idea of incorporating the farm as a town, by legislative enactment. Town ordinances against dogs running at large were passed and the farming Dellingers were made town officers, armed with shot guns.

Ten years ago fire destroyed the chicken business. The farm was put back in crops, but Dellview remained a town with a population of eight—ill Dellingers.

The Old Spanish Trunk Racket Still Bags Unwary American Dollars

UVALDE, Tex.,—After it has been operated for 40 years and has been given widespread newspaper publicity, the public should be getting wise to the old Spanish "trunk racket" trick.

But the public hasn't, and Harry P. Hornsby, U. S. customs collector, cites the case of an American citizen who only recently was swindled of $50,000.

In case you haven't already heard about it, here's how the trick is worked.

An American citizen, usually wealthy, receives a letter from Mexico that says the writer is in a Mexican prison and has a trunk stored in a U. S. customs house containing vast sums.

The American is urged to go to Mexico to assist in having the trunk released, for which he is to receive one-third to one-half the contents. The trunks, when released, usually contain bundles of waste paper. Meanwhile the victim has been persuaded to send the Mexican "prisoner" a substantial sum to help get him out of prison, or to bribe officials.

Penny Foolish, Pound Wise

PUEBLO, Col., (AP)—Frank Carrol, street car conductor, tells one about a fellow who accosted him on the street.

"He begged for a penny," says Frank. "Said he hadn't eaten for three days. So I wanted to know what good a penny would do."

"'Oh, says he, 'it's not food I'm wanting. I want to weigh myself to see how much a fellow loses on a three-day fast.'"

Of Mules and Mushrooms

WICHITA, Kans. (AP)—Paul Shenk disputes the claim that a mule, recently deceased at the age of 36, was the "world's oldest."

"Our Jenny is at least 36 and still going," says Shenk.

Jenny belongs to Hesston, Kans., College and Bible School and hauls a milk cart. Shenk, who drives her, said the college bought her in 1908.

Salem, Ore. (AP)—Lester Pearmine, Salem high school youth, thinks he can claim some sort of puffball record—an edible specimen measuring 11 by 19 inches in circumference and weighing thirty pounds, eight ounces.

Lester found the delicacy on his grandfather's farm at a spot where ten and twelve-pound puffballs often grow.

Long Range Shell

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)—A French seventy-five shell, the kind the French now use to stop Nazi tanks, has arrived at its American destination—twenty-five years late.

Made into a cigaret ash receptacle for Dr. J. C. Bunten, when he was an AEF physician, it was lost in transit to America. Michael Angelo, Brooklyn, N. Y., antique dealer, bought the object at an auction; found Dr. Bunten's name on it, and got the physician's address from the war department.

I SHOW WOMEN HOW THE NEW "ANTI-SNEEZE" RINSO HELPS PREVENT SNEEZING CAUSED BY "SOAP-DUST"... AND HOW DAZZLING WHITE RINSO SOAKS CLOTHES

Modern Medicine Has Many Efficient Methods for an Examination

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

For the examination of the heart, modern medicine has many efficient methods. In fact, it may be said that except for the diseases of the eye, the modern physician is better equipped to form an exact and mathematical concept of the heart than of any other organ in the body.

This examination consists of first getting the patient's history, finding out what infections he has had, and whether on any particular occasion of sudden strain or exertion the heart failed to respond to the demands put upon it—its failure being exhibited either by pain or shortness of breath.

The instrumental examination with the stethoscope, the x-ray and the blood pressure apparatus will give the alert physician a very clear conception of whether there is any organic change in the heart or circulatory system—any enlargement of the heart, any valvular incompetency or obstruction, any hardening of the arteries which impose an extra burden on the heart's action.

Recording Changes

Then, with the instrument known as the electrocardiograph, a record can be made of the electrical changes in the heart muscle during contraction which give an indication of the smoothness with which the muscular action of the heart is being carried on. The heart is nothing but a hollow muscle, designed to do work. It does very hard work, as much in a day as many engines or machines, and in order to do it, the muscular action must coordinate in a certain way. When this coordination is disrupted, either from irritation by poisons or nervous stimulation, or because of excessive strain or weakness of the muscle itself, more or less serious consequences may follow. All these things the electrocardiograph can detect and often safeguard.

One feature of the heart examination, however, we would like to know about but as yet have no very good method of determining. This is the functional capacity of the heart.

How Much Will It Stand?

Suppose you examine a heart and find it apparently all right — no enlargement, no anatomic defect, no obvious disorder of the musculature. Still you may want to know—how much work will that heart do? How much will it stand? These questions may be very important before long when the examination of the conscript troops for the army occurs. How much can this fellow's heart do, is the question. Will it sustain him when he has to carry so many pounds of equipment through so many days of hard fighting?

About the best test we have for the functional capacity of the heart is observation of the pulse and blood pressure before and after doing a measured amount of work—say a rapid ascent of 20 steps or 30 lifts of twenty-pound weights. If the elevation of pulse rate is less than 50 per cent and returns to normal in three minutes, this is considered a good functional response. But this sort of test is not very dependable. More so are observations of the electrocardiogram before and after a shot of adrenalin (which is considered the same as exercise). The electrical response gives an idea of the integrity of the heart muscle.

Questions and Answers

H. S. T.—"Are cattle ever affected with lues venerea, and can it be transmitted to human beings through milk?"

Answer—No.

A BIG CROP OF CYLINDERS FOR U. S. WAR PLANES

An inspector, above, looks over thousands of cylinders, lying row upon row, which have been turned out by the Pratt and Whitney plant in Hartford, Conn. Operating night and day, the plant is working to manufacture $27,000,000 worth of airplane engines contracted for by the United States government to be used in the new fighting planes.

You Can't Collect On Shell-shocked Hens

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Whether or not it sets a precedent, the state board of control has ruled that the Army is not responsible for shell-shock suffered by chickens.

The board found that Joe Mikulich, farmer, was entitled to $21 damages because National Guard maneuvers had sent a 37 mm. shell through his chicken house and killed several hens.

But when Mikulich put in a claim for five cases of unmarketable eggs, alleging his laying hens had been shell-shocked, the board drew the line.

Shoplifting Dog

KINGSTON, N. C. (AP)—Policeman H. D. Hall reports that a dog entered a variety store and took a package of razor blades. Hall believes that the dog may have been trained as a sneak thief.

Farm Was Going to the Dogs, So Family Made It a Town

AP Feature Service

DELLVILLE, N. C. — Stray dogs with a taste for chicken are responsible for this incorporated town — perhaps the smallest in the United States.

In 1925 the three Dellinger brothers, operating a large chicken farm, were bothered by dogs. The dogs, because of lack of enforcement of county laws, played havoc with the fowls.

Davis P. Dellinger, another brother and a lawyer in nearby Cherryville and a part owner of the farm, came to the rescue.

He conceived and carried out the idea of incorporating the farm as a town, by legislative enactment. Town ordinances against dogs running at large were passed and the farming Dellingers were made town officers, armed with shot guns.

Ten years ago fire destroyed the chicken business. The farm was put back in crops, but Dellview remained a town with a population of eight—ill Dellingers.

The Old Spanish Trunk Racket Still Bags Unwary American Dollars

UVALDE, Tex.—After it has been operated for 40 years and has been given widespread newspaper publicity, the public should be getting wise to the old Spanish "trunk racket" trick.

But the public hasn't, and Harry P. Hornsby, U. S. customs collector, cites the case of an American citizen who only recently was swindled of $50,000.

In case you haven't already heard about it, here's how the trick is worked.

An American citizen, usually wealthy, receives a letter from Mexico that says the writer is in a Mexican prison and has a trunk stored in a U. S. customs house containing vast sums.

The American is urged to go to Mexico to assist in having the trunk released, for which he is to receive one-third to one-half the contents. The trunks, when released, usually contain bundles of waste paper. Meanwhile the victim has been persuaded to send the Mexican "prisoner" a substantial sum to help get him out of prison, or to bribe officials.

Penny Foolish, Pound Wise

PUEBLO, Col., (AP)—Frank Carrol, street car conductor, tells one about a fellow who accosted him on the street.

"He begged for a penny," says Frank. "Said he hadn't eaten for three days. So I wanted to know what good a penny would do."

"'Oh, says he, 'it's not food I'm wanting. I want to weigh myself to see how much a fellow loses on a three-day fast.'"

Of Mules and Mushrooms

WICHITA, Kans. (AP)—Paul Shenk disputes the claim that a mule, recently deceased at the age of 36, was the "world's oldest."

"Our Jenny is at least 36 and still going," says Shenk.

Jenny belongs to Hesston, Kans., College and Bible School and hauls a milk cart. Shenk, who drives her, said the college bought her in 1908.

Salem, Ore. (AP)—Lester Pearmine, Salem high school youth, thinks he can claim some sort of puffball record—an edible specimen measuring 11 by 19 inches in circumference and weighing thirty pounds, eight ounces.

Lester found the delicacy on his grandfather's farm at a spot where ten and twelve-pound puffballs often grow.

Draft Prospect Prompts Many To Get Married

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Girls who have been worrying about bringing dilatory suitors to the point need worry no longer—the draft is attending to that.

Next winter, after Jan. 1, I expect to get fewer wails concerning the chair-warmer in his accustomed place in the most comfortable armchair whiling away the winter evenings. Either he will be out drilling and being toughened by his Uncle Sam, innured to long marches and discipline, or as a married man he will have succeeded in obtaining exemptions from the provisions of the Burke-Wadsworth bill for compulsory selective military training.

The average young man who does not lust after the glories of war feels that his chances of escaping conscription are better as a benedict than as a dyed-in-the-wool bachelor. At any rate, marriage license bureaus all over these United States are doing a land-office business, keeping open extra hours and closing the doors on long queues of people waiting patiently, sometimes in the rain. In Brooklyn, a day or two ago, the first couple arrived at the license bureau at six-thirty a. m., though the office did not open until nine. And 350 couples were waiting in line when the six clerks went into action.

In Washington, D. C., the number of licenses granted has doubled in the month of August 1940 as compared to August of last year.

Officials Puzzled

Officials throughout the country are genuinely puzzled at the rush because, as frequently stated, the Burke-Wadsworth selected service bill would not necessarily exempt newly married men. Throughout Virginia and other Southern states where a Wasserman test is demanded for all persons desiring to marry, the duties of the Bureau Clerk have been tremendously complicated. Still, in spite of the complications and the extra expense involved for the three days' grace, marriages have gone forward.

Some of the applicants for licenses were very frank in admitting that they were obtaining marriage licenses in the hope of evading conscription. Several prudent ones interviewed in Maryland admitted they were holding their licenses for a while to see whether or not the draft bill would be passed.

Others registering their intentions to marry at various municipal bureaus admitted they were jobless and that they were in no better position to take a wife than they had been for the past three or four years. But they thought a license was a good thing to have on hand.

Amusing Letter

The most amusing letter which has come to this column since everybody has been talking about the draft reads:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"The nerve of that doughnut-dunker whom I have refused weekly for the past year, and am not speaking to at the present time. To my knowledge he has been chronically unemployed, in spite of which he is the most arrogant, know-it-all I've ever met.

"To save his precious skin, he has taken out a marriage license and has had the audacity to use my name, and has actually bragged about it. I wanted to insert a notice in the paper stating the license had been taken out without my knowledge or consent, but my mother said that would only give me more unwelcome publicity. Do you think I'd better let the matter rest, or insert the notice in the paper?

FURIOUS."

Much better to pay no attention to the marriage license taken out without your concent. Your denial to friends of having any part in this arrangement is enough to acquit you.

Portable Substation Eases Farm Labor

McMINNVILLE, Ore. (AP)—U. S. Alderman, confronted with the necessity of getting power to irrigation pumps at widely separated points on his 1,600-acre farm, conceived the idea of a portable substation to step down electric current for his needs.

Engineers built the station to step down the 11,000-volt current to 480 volts. Now Aldermen drives up to the nearest high-tension wire, hooks on his substation, and irrigates. The innovation makes one set of transformers do the work of several.

A Melting Story of an Errant Ice Man

DENVER (AP)—A truck driver, charged with careless driving, said he would have to serve time in jail because he couldn't pay his $20 fine.

Sullenly he snapped his fingers.

"Judge, I plumb forgot about my ice truck. It's setting down in the street with a half ton of ice loaded on it."

"There won't be much left of the ice, setting there in this hot sun, by the time you get out of jail," the judge observed. "Maybe you'd better go peddle it and raise money to pay the fine."

"Not a bad idea," said the ice man, already half way out of the courtroom.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.

Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such a one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Draft Prospect Prompts Many To Get Married

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Girls who have been worrying about bringing dilatory suitors to the point need worry no longer—the draft is attending to that.

Next winter, after Jan. 1, I expect to get fewer wails concerning the chair-warmer in his accustomed place in the most comfortable armchair whiling away the winter evenings. Either he will be out drilling and being toughened by his Uncle Sam, innured to long marches and discipline, or as a married man he will have succeeded in obtaining exemptions from the provisions of the Burke-Wadsworth bill for compulsory selective military training.

The average young man who does not lust after the glories of war feels that his chances of escaping conscription are better as a benedict than as a dyed-in-the-wool bachelor. At any rate, marriage license bureaus all over these United States are doing a land-office business, keeping open extra hours and closing the doors on long queues of people waiting patiently, sometimes in the rain. In Brooklyn, a day or two ago, the first couple arrived at the license bureau at six-thirty a. m., though the office did not open until nine. And 350 couples were waiting in line when the six clerks went into action.

In Washington, D. C., the number of licenses granted has doubled in the month of August 1940 as compared to August of last year.

Officials Puzzled

Officials throughout the country are genuinely puzzled at the rush because, as frequently stated, the Burke-Wadsworth selected service bill would not necessarily exempt newly married men. Throughout Virginia and other Southern states where a Wasserman test is demanded for all persons desiring to marry, the duties of the Bureau Clerk have been tremendously complicated. Still, in spite of the complications and the extra expense involved for the three days' grace, marriages have gone forward.

Some of the applicants for licenses were very frank in admitting that they were obtaining marriage licenses in the hope of evading conscription. Several prudent ones interviewed in Maryland admitted they were holding their licenses for a while to see whether or not the draft bill would be passed.

Others registering their intentions to marry at various municipal bureaus admitted they were jobless and that they were in no better position to take a wife than they had been for the past three or four years. But they thought a license was a good thing to have on hand.

Amusing Letter

The most amusing letter which has come to this column since everybody has been talking about the draft reads:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"The nerve of that doughnut-dunker whom I have refused weekly for the past year, and am not speaking to at the present time. To my knowledge he has been chronically unemployed, in spite of which he is the most arrogant, know-it-all I've ever met.

"To save his precious skin, he has taken out a marriage license and has had the audacity to use my name, and has actually bragged about it. I wanted to insert a notice in the paper stating the license had been taken out without my knowledge or consent, but my mother said that would only give me more unwelcome publicity. Do you think I'd better let the matter rest, or insert the notice in the paper?

FURIOUS."

Much better to pay no attention to the marriage license taken out without your concent. Your denial to friends of having any part in this arrangement is enough to acquit you.

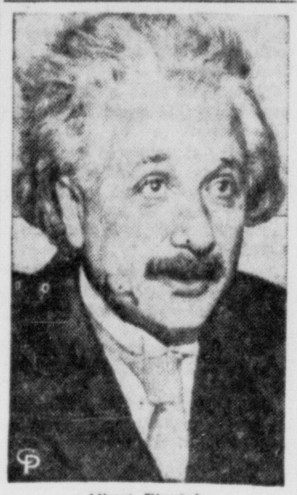
NO GOD--EINSTEIN



Albert Einstein.

Professor Albert Einstein, above, German refugee scientist, has called upon religious leaders to "give up the doctrine of a personal God" and thus, according to Einstein, "give up the source of fear and hope which in the past has placed such vast power in the hands of priests."

Portable Substation Eases Farm Labor

McMINNVILLE, Ore. (AP)—U. S. Alderman, confronted with the necessity of getting power to irrigation pumps at widely separated points on his 1,600-acre farm, conceived the idea of a portable substation to step down electric current for his needs.

Engineers built the station to step down the 11,000-volt current to 480 volts. Now Aldermen drives up to the nearest high-tension wire, hooks on his substation, and irrigates. The innovation makes one set of transformers do the work of several.

A Melting Story of an Errant Ice Man

DENVER (AP)—A truck driver, charged with careless driving, said he would have to serve time in jail because he couldn't pay his $20 fine.

Sullenly he snapped his fingers.

"Judge, I plumb forgot about my ice truck. It's setting down in the street with a half ton of ice loaded on it."

"There won't be much left of the ice, setting there in this hot sun, by the time you get out of jail," the judge observed. "Maybe you'd better go peddle it and raise money to pay the fine."

"Not a bad idea," said the ice man, already half way out of the courtroom.

'Interneship' Extended To Civil Service

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The interne system under which young doctors get practical experience has been applied to the Los Angeles county government.

College graduates are placed in positions offering training in administrative research work and are paid $65 monthly during their first year of "internship." At its conclusion they are expected to qualify for permanent positions through civil service examinations.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!
When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.
Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.
If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such a one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Cause of Plane Crash Is Unknown

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 12 (AP) — The theory that lightning might have caused the crash of a Pennsylvania-Central airliner with loss of 25 lives near Lovettsville, Va., was advanced at a Loudoun county inquest but Coroner John A. Gibson ended the local inquiry with a verdict of "accident, cause unknown."

Persons living in the vicinity of Lovettsville, testified at a Civil Aeronautics Board inquiry at Washington last week-end that they saw a flash of lightning and heard a "terrible noise" caused by the motors immediately preceding the crash. Luther Harris, P. C. A. vice president, testified, however, that he found no evidence that lightning struck the plane.

Eighteen witnesses were heard here today at the inquest into the accident on August 31, which was the nation's worst commercial aviation accident.

Miss Lydia Jacobs said it seemed to her that the plane was on fire. Richard Thompson testified that the motors sounded different immediately before the plane struck the ground.

Witnesses agreed there was not enough wind to have caused the plane any trouble. Two pilots who passed the scene within a short time of the accident told the Civil Aeronautics Board Saturday that a bit of rough weather they encountered was not unusual.

One witness today was I. W. Baker, Loudoun county supervisor, who lives three-quarters of a mile from the place where the plane fell. He described the storm as "fearful."

He said the plane crashed "one minute and twenty second" after a blinding flash of lightning.

Judy Abbott Goes It Alone In Quest for Stardom

By CLAYTON J. IRWIN

ELLICOTT CITY, Md.—Note to ambitious youngsters who think influence helps you get ahead in show business:

You'll have to prove it to Judy Abbott.

The blond, 18-year-old daughter of Producer George Abbott isn't cashing in on her Grade-A connections in the theater.

Insted, she began at the bottom as a trouper in a summer theater here, and she has no illusions about getting to the top other than the hard way.

She hopes to star some day in one of Papa George's shows, but she knows him well enough to realize that, all sentiment aside, she'll have to earn the part.

Contrary to the best theatrical-family traditions, Judy's childhood never was steeped in the lore of show business.

Judy Abbott
"A Hard Worker With Ability"

While Abbott climbed steadily to the top as an actor, then as a producer of boisterous, rollicking comedies, Judy lived with an aunt in Rochester, N. Y. Her only contact with the theater came in her visits to Manhattan.

Little more than a year ago she New York and enrolled in a dramatic school.

"Father didn't try to give me any advice about the hardships and disappointments in the theater," she says. "I guess he just sort of expected I'd want to try and be an actress."

Then followed her first professional role. It was a walk-on bit in one of Abbott's farces, "What A Life."

"But that wasn't any proof I can act," says Judy, "anybody could have done it."

The experience was just enough to prove to Judy that she needed good, solid work in the theater. So she caught on with the Hilltoppers, a semi-pro theatrical group operating in a rambling building deep in the Maryland Hills near here.

She hit the peak of her activity this summer, incidentally in one of the best roles of an old George Abbott bell-ringer, "Three Men On A Horse."

Career and Marriage, Too

The Hilltoppers' director, Eddie Phillips, an assistant to Abbott in the regular season, calls her "promising; a hard worker with a lot of ability." Fellow troupers have found her "serious, a bit naive, but a regular."

She thinks movies are strictly to look at. "I only want to act on the stage," she asserts, "and then, only until I get married."

"Married?" someone echoed.

"Sure. Why, don't you know, ALL girls want to get married?"

Workers Are Finding More Jobs in Private Industries This Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP) — Workers in Virginia and West Virginia are finding more jobs in private industry.

The Federal Security Agency reported today that increases in the number of placements by state public employment services during the first seven months of 1940 amounted to thirty-one per cent in Virginia and four per cent in West Virginia over the corresponding period of last year.

January—July, 1940, placements in Virginia totaled 27,466 and 15,588 in West Virginia.

Due to seasonal slacks in some industries, however, out-of-work benefits also increased in Virginia. The total paid was $3,928,969, an increase of twenty-eight per cent over the first seven months of 1939.

Benefits in West Virginia declined thirteen per cent to $2,483,082.

The Federal Security Agency reported today that increases in the number of placements by state public employment services during the first seven months of 1940 amounted to thirty-one per cent in Virginia and four per cent in West Virginia over the corresponding period of last year.

January—July, 1940, placements in Virginia totaled 27,466 and 15,588 in West Virginia.

Due to seasonal slacks in some industries, however, out-of-work benefits also increased in Virginia. The total paid was $3,928,969, an increase of twenty-eight per cent over the first seven months of 1939.

Benefits in West Virginia declined thirteen per cent to $2,483,082.

Ferman, of Baltimore, the Ladies Auxiliary Canton Allegany No. 4, and Chevalier units from Hollidaysburg, Chambersburg and York, Pa.

Following the charge to Mr. Dyche by Gen. Prohs, Miss Catherine Ayers, Mrs. Catherine Kerns, Mrs. Lena Rockwell and Mrs. Esther Shannon of the Ladies Auxiliary of Cumberland, gave addresses in which they exhorted the candidate for the high honor to continue his exemplary work and they invested him with a sword and spurs symbolic of the days of chivalry.

Mrs. Lacy Welsh, of Cumberland, was lady of honor at the ceremonies and Ruth Lee Clayton was jewel bearer. Little Catherine Murray pinned the jewel upon Mr. Dyche at the end of the ceremony.

Former Governor Harry W. Nice, a charter member of one of the Odd Fellow lodges in Baltimore, dropped in to greet the assemblage. He was introduced by County Treasurer Frederick C. Dreyer. Mr. Nice's secretary, C. M. Thomas, of Baltimore, also was present.

A color guard and bugle and drum unit from Henry Hart Post V. F. W., participated in special work during the ceremonial. Steven's orchestra, of Frostburg played for the dance, which followed the ceremony and grand march.

IS HONORED—Lieut. Col. William H. Dyche, 513 Maryland avenue last night received the Grand Decoration of Chivalry, the highest honor of Canton branch, Independent Order of Odd Fellows at a colorful ceremony in the State armory here.

Cab Company Sued for $1,000

Driver Responsible for Accident in August, Claimant Declares

A $1,000 damage suit against Frederick W. Jenkins, manager of the Astor Cab Company, was filed yesterday in circuit court.

The suit was docketed by Marie Rice who claims injuries received by herself on or about August 17 were due to the negligence of one of the Astor Cab Company drivers.

According to the petition drawn up by Attorney Edward J. Ryan, the petitioner lost three teeth, received arm and leg injuries and suffered a wrenched back when a cab ploughed into the car in which she was riding on Thomas street.

Due to the negligence of the cab driver, the claimant was obliged to spend considerable money for medical and dental care, the petition declares.

No more rushing out to the kitchen to scrape and lick the pan when Mother's baking cake . . . It's too much.

And the sad part is that the dime store sold out of the gadgets by early afternoon.

Government Is Not Planning To Regulate Insurance Companies

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12 (AP) — Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), chairman of the Federal Monopoly Committee, told the American Bar Association there was no move for federal regulation of life insurance companies.

His statement was in reply to an assertion by J. Reuben Clark, Jr., a former assistant secretary of state and ambassador to Mexico, that any such regulation would be a "potential threat" to democracy.

Clark, first counsellor of the Church of Latter Day Saints, Salt Lake City, expressed concern at the bar association's sixty-third annual convention that the government might "take over life insurance as a federal activity."

Neither the Monopoly Committee nor any affiliated agency, Senator O'Mahoney declared, "has ever recommended or suggested any legislation providing for federal regulation of insurance."

Meanwhile, Edward C. Bailly of New York, co-sponsor of a resolution opposing a presidential third term, announced he would try to introduce the resolution at tomorrow's general convention session. The Resolutions Committee modified the proposal yesterday by approving only a section endorsing a single six-year term.

"This is no time to pussyfoot when a president is making a serious attempt for re-election a second time," Bailey said. "The revised resolution is for future use only. We're confronted with the present."

Wood Alcohol Proves Fatal to Three Men; Fourth Man Survives

CLIFTON FORGE, Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—A wood alcohol drinking party killed three Clifton Forge men, police reported.

A fourth man, George Johnson, machinist, lived because his stomach was pumped out at a Clifton Forge hospital. Police Chief J. F. Huffman of Clifton Forge said Johnson told him he drank more of the deadly fluid than any of the other three.

The dead were:

Noel Wilson Turner, 27, a painter.

Graham Parker, 20, laborer.

Earl Rapp, laborer.

Turner and Parker died here.

Rapp died last night at a Montgomery, W. Va., hospital.

Huffman said the men purchased the wood alcohol from a Clifton Forge hardware store in bulk form, supposedly for use in removing paint and varnish.

Citizens Committee Asks Removal of Allegany School Board

School Strike Front Quiet At Mt. Savage

Slight Increase in Attendance at Elementary-Junior High School

MT. SAVAGE, Sept. 12—A slight increase in the attendance at the elementary and junior high school and a decrease in the number of pupils going to Beall high at Frostburg marked the only change in the school situation here today.

Only twenty pupils rode one bus going to Frostburg, and these included children from the Barrellville area. The other bus left here empty.

In the local school, approximately fifty pupils reported for classes—the majority of these, as usual, transported from outlying areas.

Eighteen students were present in the seventh grade, the largest number to attend any one class since the "strike" was called. However, in some classes only one pupil reported.

A group of senior high school boys were on hand to meet the buses this morning, but no effort was made to form a blockade or to prevent students from boarding it. There was no congregation in front of the local school.

Private Detective Walter W. Clay again followed the buses here this morning and continued after them to the out-of-town school. The presence of the detective apparently sent here by the board of education, has aroused much resentment among the citizens, who deem it a slur on their respect of law and order, since no officers have been posted in any of the other affected communities.

Three More Counties Delay Schools as Polio Cases Pass 300 Mark

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP) — Wyoming county closed its schools today and two other counties set back the opening date because of an infantile paralysis epidemic that now exceeds 300 cases.

Nicholas and Lincoln counties further postponed the start of classes.

Six new cases in Wyoming county caused county Superintendent W. E. Bailey and President Jack Shipman of the board of education to order schools closed indefinitely. The county's 8,000 pupils had been attending classes since September 3.

In Nicholas county, four new cases were reported and Superintendent James L. Creasy of Summersville said schools will not open until September 23.

A new case reported in Harts Creek district was partily responsible for postponing Lincoln county classes until September 30, District Health officer H. Kirk said.

Lonaconing Council Votes $3,400 More for Street Improvements

Town To Borrow Money for Extension of Resurfacing Project

LONACONING, Sept. 12—Meeting in special session last night, the mayor and city council unanimously voted to spend an additional $3,400 to complete improvements on Douglas avenue and Jackson street. The total cost amounts to approximately $7,000.

Under the plan approved at the last council meeting, Douglas avenue was to be black-topped for a distance of 800 feet, starting at the intersection of Main street and extending to the properties on the Old Castle school grounds. About 700 feet of the street was to be left in brick, but because of numerous complaints from taxpayers on the brick-topped section, this 700 feet will now be covered.

Jackson street, from the Cumberland and Pennsylvania railroad crossing to the Robin street intersection, near the Jackson street school, was the section approved by the council at the previous meeting, but last night the council voted to extend this black-topping job to the Marx property, of a distance of about 700 feet more.

In order to get the additional money, the city fathers will have to draw on next year's appropriation from the county commissioners. A plan has been reached to care for the payment of the six per cent interest on the borrowed money, but details were not disclosed by the mayor.

Advocate avenue has been completed. Work on the original program for Douglas avenue and Jackson street will be completed tomorrow, and then work will begin on the extensions of both streets the following day.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Sept 12 (AP)—Vernon Turner, 54, service station operator near here, was held without formal charge in the county jail today after his wife was found dead last night, prosecuting Attorney John C. Skinner said.

Jefferson County Coroner G. P. Morison reported Mrs. Turner was killed by a blow from a sharp-edged weapon at the base of the skull.

Skinner said a hatchet found in the cellar of the Turner home was examined as a possible death instrument.

Skinner said a neighbor, Anna Violet Johnson, told him she saw Turner strike his wife with a hatchet in the combination store-lunch room which Mrs. Turner operated. Turner denied this, Skinner said, claiming he found his wife had been attacked when he returned home from making a report that he himself had been assaulted by a stranger.

Skinner said the couple had been having domestic troubles for some time and the husband was under a peace bond at the time of his arrest.

U. S. Must Give South America More Than Democracy Ideal, Says Steagall

Gold and Dollar Exchange Better than Barter, Coffee Men Told

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—Rep. Henry B. Steagall (D-Ala) told the National Coffee Association today the United States "must tender something more valuable than the totalitarian power can offer" if it wants to promote closer cooperation among the Americas.

"The evident advantage of gold and dollar exchange over strict barter is our inducement," declared Steagall, author of the recently-passed bill setting up an import-export loan fund for South American trade.

Representatives of the coffee industry are attending the meeting from the United States, Brazil, Colombia, El Salvador, Venezuela, Nicaragua, Cuba and Costa Rica.

He said in his address, dealing with methods of combatting incursion of totalitarian economic theories in the Americas:

"The United States cannot expect financial and economic sacrifices from our neighbors in return for the mere ideal of democracy. We of the United States must tender something more valuable than the totalitarian powers can offer."

Admitting the European war has disorganized commerce in the Western Hemisphere, Steagall said that fact itself presents to the United States an opportunity to bring about closer union among the nations of the two Americas, and allow collective trade activity which could not be undertaken singly.

Violation of Law Charged in Wire To Gov. O'Conor

Board Failed To 'Consult and Advise' with Citizens Is Claim

MIDLAND, Sept. 12 (Special)—Governor O'Conor was asked tonight to remove the Allegany county board of education from office as the dispute over the school consolidation program threatened to develop into a long, bitter fight.

Mayor Verl A. Ash, chairman of a citizens committee opposing the consolidation program, made public a telegram sent the governor charging that the county board had violated the public school laws of Maryland by failing to "consult and advise at any time with district trustees and interested citizens of Midland, Gilmore, Ocean, Carlos, Mt. Savage, Lord and Midlothian."

The communities listed are objecting strongly against abolition of their elementary schools or transfer of their higher grades, with hundreds of parents keeping their children out of the consolidated schools as a protest gesture.

The telegram, drafted tonight by a special committee named at a mass meeting here last night, charges the board specifically with violation of Section 44 of the public school laws, which provides that the board of education "shall consult and advise, through its executive officers and professional assistants, with the boards of district trustees, principals, teachers and interested citizens and shall seek in every way to promote the interests of the schools under their jurisdiction."

The committee also sent a letter to Dr. Albert S. Cook, state superintendent of schools, protesting against the consolidation program, asserting its advantages were outweighed by its disadvantages. The letter protested, too, it was said, against violation by the board of Section 137 of the school laws. Provisions of this section were not immediately learned, however.

At its meeting tonight at Red Men's hall here, the committee also formally organized and elected officers, who are, besides Mayor Ash as chairman, Thomas Taylor, Midland, secretary; and Floyd Winebrenner, Carlos, treasurer. Other members are Lester B. Reed, Mt. Savage; Benjamin Filer, Midlothian; James Jenkins, Gilmore; Walter Patterson, Lord; and Walter E. Ross, Midland.

Meanwhile, in Frostburg, figures were made public showing that less than one-third of students from Midland and Mt. Savage were attending Beall high, as scheduled. Out of fifty eighth and ninth grade students supposedly enrolled from Midland, only three were present at Beall today.

Thirty-six out of ninety-three tenth, eleventh and twelfth grade students transferred from Mt. Savage high school reported at Beall, according to Principal Taylor.

(At Mt. Savage, it was reported that only twenty high school pupils, including those from Barrellville, took the school bus this morning.)

The following figures were made public at the elementary school in Frostburg:

Grades 1-7, Carlos and Midlothian, forty-six present out of 115; Grade 7, Midland and Ocean, five present out of twenty-one; Grade 7, Lord, seven present out of ten; Borden Mines and Zihlman, eighty-five out of 100; Borden Shaft and Wright's Crossing, 100 per cent attendance.

In addition to these schools, only a small percentage of the elementary pupils are attending at Mt. Savage, and Gilmore pupils have refused to be transported to Midland.

W. Va. Draft Set-Up Will Be Ready When Conscription Bill Takes Effect

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP) — Approximately ninety draft boards, already being tentatively selected, will be ready to call West Virginians for military training as soon as the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill becomes operative, various sources indicated today.

Members of the five-man board—three voting members, an examining physician and a government appeal agent—have not yet been named and will not be until the bill is signed by the President, but preliminary consideration of the personnel has been started, it was learned.

There will be one board for each county, and more for the larger units.

The Governor will recommend members to President Roosevelt for appointment after a formal call is issued by the federal government.

Designation by the President of a national registration day will start the machinery moving. On that day all men between the specified ages (the House-Senate conference committee report now calls for 21 to 35 years) will go to their regular precinct voting places and register on special cards.

These cards will be turned over to the fifty-five county clerks, who in turn will distribute them to the draft boards of the respective districts.

These boards then will take units of 3,000 cards, shuffle them thoroughly, and number them automatically from 1 to 3,000. Lists of the numbers will be posted at election precincts and copies sent to the Governor and the federal government.

From the number of registrants in each state, the government will assign state quotas, and in a lottery drawing will determine which numbers are to be called first.

Three More Counties Delay Schools as Polio Cases Pass 300 Mark

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP) — Wyoming county closed its schools today and two other counties set back the opening date because of an infantile paralysis epidemic that now exceeds 300 cases.

Nicholas and Lincoln counties further postponed the start of classes.

Six new cases in Wyoming county caused county Superintendent W. E. Bailey and President Jack Shipman of the board of education to order schools closed indefinitely. The county's 8,000 pupils had been attending classes since September 3.

In Nicholas county, four new cases were reported and Superintendent James L. Creasy of Summersville said schools will not open until September 23.

A new case reported in Harts Creek district was partly responsible for postponing Lincoln county classes until September 30, District Health officer H. Kirk said.

Lonaconing Council Votes $3,400 More for Street Improvements

Town To Borrow Money for Extension of Resurfacing Project

LONACONING, Sept. 12—Meeting in special session last night, the mayor and city council unanimously voted to spend an additional $3,400 to complete improvements on Douglas avenue and Jackson street. The total cost amounts to approximately $7,000.

Under the plan approved at the last council meeting, Douglas avenue was to be black-topped for a distance of 800 feet, starting at the intersection of Main street and extending to the properties on the Old Castle school grounds. About 700 feet of the street was to be left in brick, but because of numerous complaints from taxpayers on the brick-topped section, this 700 feet will now be covered.

Jackson street, from the Cumberland and Pennsylvania railroad crossing to the Robin street intersection, near the Jackson street school, was the section approved by the council at the previous meeting, but last night the council voted to extend this black-topping job to the Marx property, of a distance of about 700 feet more.

In order to get the additional money, the city fathers will have to draw on next year's appropriation from the county commissioners. A plan has been reached to care for the payment of the six per cent interest on the borrowed money, but details were not disclosed by the mayor.

Advocate avenue has been completed. Work on the original program for Douglas avenue and Jackson street will be completed tomorrow, and then work will begin on the extensions of both streets the following day.

Skinner said a neighbor, Anna Violet Johnson, told him she saw Turner strike his wife with a hatchet in the combination store-lunch room which Mrs. Turner operated. Turner denied this, Skinner said, claiming he found his wife had been attacked when he returned home from making a report that he himself had been assaulted by a stranger.

U. S. Must Give South America More Than Democracy Ideal, Says Steagall

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—Rep. Henry B. Steagall (D-Ala) told the National Coffee Association today the United States "must tender something more valuable than the totalitarian power can offer" if it wants to promote closer cooperation among the Americas.

"The evident advantage of gold and dollar exchange over strict barter is our inducement," declared Steagall, author of the recently-passed bill setting up an import-export loan fund for South American trade.

Representatives of the coffee industry are attending the meeting from the United States, Brazil, Colombia, El Salvador, Venezuela, Nicaragua, Cuba and Costa Rica.

He said in his address, dealing with methods of combatting incursion of totalitarian economic theories in the Americas:

"The United States cannot expect financial and economic sacrifices from our neighbors in return for the mere ideal of democracy. We of the United States must tender something more valuable than the totalitarian powers can offer."

Admitting the European war has disorganized commerce in the Western Hemisphere, Steagall said that fact itself presents to the United States an opportunity to bring about closer union among the nations of the two Americas, and allow collective trade activity which could not be undertaken singly.

Violation of Law Charged in Wire To Gov. O'Conor

Board Failed To 'Consult and Advise' with Citizens Is Claim

MIDLAND, Sept. 12 (Special)—Governor O'Conor was asked tonight to remove the Allegany county board of education from office as the dispute over the school consolidation program threatened to develop into a long, bitter fight.

Mayor Verl A. Ash, chairman of a citizens committee opposing the consolidation program, made public a telegram sent the governor charging that the county board had violated the public school laws of Maryland by failing to "consult and advise at any time with district trustees and interested citizens of Midland, Gilmore, Ocean, Carlos, Mt. Savage, Lord and Midlothian."

The communities listed are objecting strongly against abolition of their elementary schools or transfer of their higher grades, with hundreds of parents keeping their children out of the consolidated schools as a protest gesture.

The telegram, drafted tonight by a special committee named at a mass meeting here last night, charges the board specifically with violation of Section 44 of the public school laws, which provides that the board of education "shall consult and advise, through its executive officers and professional assistants, with the boards of district trustees, principals, teachers and interested citizens and shall seek in every way to promote the interests of the schools under their jurisdiction."

The committee also sent a letter to Dr. Albert S. Cook, state superintendent of schools, protesting against the consolidation program, asserting its advantages were outweighed by its disadvantages. The letter protested, too, it was said, against violation by the board of Section 137 of the school laws. Provisions of this section were not immediately learned, however.

At its meeting tonight at Red Men's hall here, the committee also formally organized and elected officers, who are, besides Mayor Ash as chairman, Thomas Taylor, Midland, secretary; and Floyd Winebrenner, Carlos, treasurer. Other members are Lester B. Reed, Mt. Savage; Benjamin Filer, Midlothian; James Jenkins, Gilmore; Walter Patterson, Lord; and Waller E. Ross, Midland.

Meanwhile, in Frostburg, figures were made public showing that less than one-third of students from Midland and Mt. Savage were attending Beall high, as scheduled. Out of fifty eighth and ninth grade students supposedly enrolled from Midland, only three were present at Beall today.

Thirty-six out of ninety-three tenth, eleventh and twelfth grade students transferred from Mt. Savage high school reported at Beall, according to Principal Taylor.

(At Mt. Savage, it was reported that only twenty high school pupils, including those from Barrellville, took the school bus this morning.)

The following figures were made public at the elementary school in Frostburg:

Grades 1-7, Carlos and Midlothian, forty-six present out of 115; Grade 7, Midland and Ocean, five present out of twenty-one; Grade 7, Lord, seven present out of ten; Borden Mines and Zihlman, eighty-five out of 100; Borden Shaft and Wright's Crossing, 100 per cent attendance.

In addition to these schools, only a small percentage of the elementary pupils are attending at Mt. Savage, and Gilmore pupils have refused to be transported to Midland.

W. Va. Draft Set-Up Will Be Ready When Conscription Bill Takes Effect

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP) — Approximately ninety draft boards, already being tentatively selected, will be ready to call West Virginians for military training as soon as the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill becomes operative, various sources indicated today.

Members of the five-man board—three voting members, an examining physician and a government appeal agent—have not yet been named and will not be until the bill is signed by the President, but preliminary consideration of the personnel has been started, it was learned.

There will be one board for each county, and more for the larger units.

The Governor will recommend members to President Roosevelt for appointment after a formal call is issued by the federal government.

Designation by the President of a national registration day will start the machinery moving. On that day all men between the specified ages (the House-Senate conference committee report now calls for 21 to 35 years) will go to their regular precinct voting places and register on special cards.

These cards will be turned over to the fifty-five county clerks, who in turn will distribute them to the draft boards of the respective districts.

These boards then will take units of 3,000 cards, shuffle them thoroughly, and number them automatically from 1 to 3,000. Lists of the numbers will be posted at election precincts and copies sent to the Governor and the federal government.

From the number of registrants in each state, the government will assign state quotas, and in a lottery drawing will determine which numbers are to be called first.

Milk Receiving Station Slated To Open at Oakland Monday

Carnation Firm Enthusiastic Over Prospects

Many Prizes To Be Awarded to Milk Producers on Opening Day

OAKLAND, Sept. 12 — The Carnation Company will open its milk receiving station here Monday, according to schedule, it was announced today by Glenn Hoffman, local manager of the station.

The plant has been under construction since July 23, and a large number of men has been kept busy in order to complete the building in time for the opening. Several more weeks will be required to put the finishing touches on the structure and the grounds surrounding it, it was stated, but everything necessary for the opening will have been done by Saturday evening.

Prizes Offered

A special day has been planned by officials of the Company. It will present to every patron starting milk delivery on that day one five-pound bag of washing powder, one dairy brush, and one box of strainer disks.

The ten patrons delivering the highest amount of milk on opening day will also receive prizes, the first prize being an eight-gallon seamless milk can. Other prizes include bags of calf manna, a milk stool, milk strainer and seamless milk pails.

The business men of Oakland are also offering prizes to haulers and to farmers. More than sixty prizes are to be given away, including gasoline, motor oil, clothing, cash, groceries, kettles, soft drinks, moving picture tickets and dairy feed.

All farmers who filled out dairy survey blanks several months ago are being notified by letter this week of the opening date, the list of prizes and are also being told when checks for their milk will be distributed. Milk prices are to be quoted on the first and sixteenth of each month.

Company Optimistic

The letter also expressed the enthusiasm of the company in opening up the new field.

"We are convinced you people have excellent fundamental conditions for the production of dairy products," said Vern P. Melhuish, company representative from Oconomowoc, Wis., "and it will be a pleasure for our organization to be a part of this growing dairy industry."

Eleven haulers had a conference meeting with company officials when their routes were announced. Routes cover Garrett county, Md., Preston county, W. Va., and parts of Somerset county, Pa. The haulers include Guy Feathers, Bliss Wotring, Charles Junior Martin, John Beachy, Jonas Beachy, Clarence Richter, I. J. Morrison, Ivan P. Herman, S. T. Dodge, John Auvil and Carrol C. Martin.

Officials expressed confidence that the opening day would result in farmers bringing more milk than was hoped for several weeks ago. About 900 farmers filled out survey blanks several months ago.

Condensed at Clarksburg

The Oakland plant has been so constructed that a condensing station can be added to the present building should the increase in business warrant such a move. At present, the milk will be received here, weighed, sampled and tested, cooled and then shipped to the condensery sixty-nine miles west of here. The Clarksburg unit opened several weeks ago, and just recently the receiving station at Cameron, W. Va., opened its doors. Both places have had increases in amount of milk received from farmers.

It was predicted that between 10,000 and 15,000 pounds of milk would be received here on first day.

Charles Sharpless, Clarksburg, W. Va., is superintendent of this as well as the Clarksburg and Cameron plants, with Mr. Hoffman as local manager.

World Series Meeting Will Be Held Today

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP)—The American League, now in the midst of the closest flag race in its 40-year history, will hold a big "majority" over the National circuit at the annual World Series meeting tomorrow before Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball.

No fewer than five American League teams will be represented at the session—Detroit, Cleveland, New York, Boston and Chicago. Only two National League clubs were invited—the Cincinnati Reds, now leading the senior circuit race by a wide margin, and the second place Brooklyn Dodgers.

With the Major League season closing Sept. 29, the 1940 diamond classic likely will open Wednesday, Oct. 2. Last year's series opened at Yankee Stadium, home field of the World Championship New York Yankees, so this fall's spectacle will start on the home grounds of the National League pennant winner.

Should the Reds come through as expected, the first two games would be played at the Crosley Field, Cincinnati, if custom is followed. The third, fourth and, if necessary, fifth games would be played at the park of the American League champion, with the sixth and seventh games, if necessary, swinging back to the National League park.

Yankees Buy Nine Farm Club Stars

New York, Sept. 12. (AP)—The New York Yankees today announced the purchase for spring delivery of nine of their farm club stars, including Kansas City's highly touted keystone combination of Phil Rizzuto and Jerry Priddy.

From Kansas City the Yanks also obtained two of the Blues' leading pitchers—John Lindell and Don Hendrickson. Both are right-handers.

The Newark acquisitions are Outfielder Tommy Holmes, and right-handed Pitchers Norman Branch, George Barley, Allan Gettel and Steve Peek.

The Yanks gave cash and Outfielder Buster Mills and Pitcher Tommy Reis to Kansas City, and money and two players to be named to Newark. Both Mills and Reis are with Kansas City now.

Detroit's Pitchers Chorus 'Tiger Rag' over Hitting

From time to time Detroit pitchers have had cause to complain that chances of victory were reduced by an inadequate attack. Tommy Bridges, in particular, has suffered from a lack of offensive support and, if he were the whining type (which he distinctly is not) he would be leading the clubhouse chorus: "They Never Get No Runs for Me."

On the other hand, there are pitchers whose turns frequently fall on days when the Tigers are in hitting form, writes Sam Greene in "The Detroit News." The load is lightened and success attained without strain. In this respect Lynwod Rowe has been recently fortunate, and one of the reasons in the batting punch contributed by the Schoolboy himself.

Casey Wins Both Games for Dodgers

BROOKLYN, Sept. 12 (AP)—A lot of pitchers have tried the "iron man" stunt of pitching both ends of a doubleheader, but Hugh Casey of the Dodgers did the trick today without so much work.

He pitched three-hit ball to shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates 7 to 0 in the first game and then returned as a relief pitcher in the seventh inning of the nightcap and got credit for Brooklyn's 7 to 4 victory, his 11th of the year.

Manager Frank Frisch of the Pirates was banished in the second game for protesting a ball called by plate Umpire George Ballanfant. When Frisch left he took all the Pittsburgh benchwarmers with him but they later filed back to the dugout. It was the tenth time Frisch has been ejected.

The Dodgers drove Max Butcher out in the sixth with a three-run flurry which Pittsburgh matched in the seventh to bring Casey to the relief of Luke Hamlin. When Brooklyn came to bat Joe Medwick tripled and scored on an infield out. The Dodgers also got two more tallies in the eighth and Casey reaped the credit.

Flaming Youth Prefers Music--Hot

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—What's the most popular high school study course?

In St. Louis high school officials were surprised to discover that it is music. Fifty-one per cent of all the students had a preference for it.

"But," added the report, with a note of disappointment, "a startling number of students prefer jazz and popular music."

A committee of instructors urged more emphasis on music appreciation classes.

No Airplane Complete Without a Clothespin

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Clothespins come in handy on swanky 1941 airplanes, at least in Oklahoma City.

The reason: A plane's antenna trails 15 to 50 feet behind the ship when in flight. The pilot is supposed to reel it in before he starts to land.

So the pilot sticks a clothespin on the throttle. When he starts to close the throttle to land, the clothespin reminds him about the antenna and he reels it in.

Nats Beat Browns

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Washington Senators are sure to leave St. Louis still in sixth place in the American League.

The Browns, needing a clean sweep of the 3-game series to overtake the Senators, missed their opportunity by dropping the opener, 7 to 2, bowing to Arnold Anderson's 6-hit pitching.

Jack Sanford was the big gun in Washington's 13-hit attack on Vernon Kennedy and Roxie Lawson. The first baseman contributed a triple, double and single, drove in three runs and scored two. Gee Walker banged a triple and a double.

Milk Receiving Station Slated To Open at Oakland Monday

Many Prizes To Be Awarded to Milk Producers on Opening Day

OAKLAND, Sept. 12 — The Carnation Company will open its milk receiving station here Monday, according to schedule, it was announced today by Glenn Hoffman, local manager of the station.

The plant has been under construction since July 23, and a large number of men has been kept busy in order to complete the building in time for the opening. Several more weeks will be required to put the finishing touches on the structure and the grounds surrounding it. It was stated, but everything necessary for the opening will have been done by Saturday evening.

Prizes Offered

A special day has been planned by officials of the Company. It will present to every patron starting milk delivery on that day one five-pound bag of washing powder, one dairy brush, and one box of strainer disks.

The ten patrons delivering the highest amount of milk on opening day will also receive prizes, the first prize being an eight-gallon seamless milk can. Other prizes include bags of calf manna, a milk stool, milk strainer and seamless milk pails.

The business men of Oakland are also offering prizes to haulers and to farmers. More than sixty prizes are to be given away, including gasoline, motor oil, clothing, cash, groceries, kettles, soft drinks, moving picture tickets and dairy feed.

All farmers who filled out dairy survey blanks several months ago are being notified by letter this week of the opening date, the list of prizes and are also being told when checks for their milk will be distributed. Milk prices are to be quoted on the first and sixteenth of each month.

Company Optimistic

The letter also expressed the enthusiasm of the company in opening up the new field.

"We are convinced you people have excellent fundamental conditions for the production of dairy products," said Vern P. Melhuish, company representative from Oconomowoc, Wis., "and it will be a pleasure for our organization to be a part of this growing dairy industry."

Eleven haulers had a conference meeting with company officials when their routes were announced. Routes cover Garrett county, Md., Preston county, W. Va., and parts of Somerset county, Pa. The haulers include Guy Feathers, Bliss Wotring, Charles Junior Martin, John Beachy, Jonas Beachy, Clarence Richter, I. J. Morrison, Ivan P. Herman, S. T. Dodge, John Auvil and Carrol C. Martin.

Officials expressed confidence that the opening day would result in farmers bringing more milk than was hoped for several weeks ago. About 900 farmers filled out survey blanks several months ago.

Condensed at Clarksburg

The Oakland plant has been so constructed that a condensing station can be added to the present building should the increase in business warrant such a move. At present, the milk will be received here, weighed, sampled and tested, cooled and then shipped to the condensery sixty-nine miles west of here. The Clarksburg unit opened several weeks ago, and just recently the receiving station at Cameron, W. Va., opened its doors. Both places have had increases in amount of milk received from farmers.

It was predicted that between 10,000 and 15,000 pounds of milk would be received here on first day.

Charles Sharpless, Clarksburg, W. Va., is superintendent of this as well as the Clarksburg and Cameron plants, with Mr. Hoffman as local manager.

World Series Meeting Will Be Held Today

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP)—The American League, now in the midst of the closest flag race in its 40-year history, will hold a big "majority" over the National circuit at the annual World Series meeting tomorrow before Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball.

No fewer than five American League teams will be represented at the session—Detroit, Cleveland, New York, Boston and Chicago. Only two National League clubs were invited—the Cincinnati Reds, now leading the senior circuit race by a wide margin, and the second place Brooklyn Dodgers.

With the Major League season closing Sept. 29, the 1940 diamond classic likely will open Wednesday, Oct. 2. Last year's series opened at Yankee Stadium, home field of the World Championship New York Yankees, so this fall's spectacle will start on the home grounds of the National League pennant winner.

Should the Reds come through as expected, the first two games would be played at Crosley Field, Cincinnati, if custom is followed. The third, fourth and, if necessary, fifth games would be played at the park of the American League champion, with the sixth and seventh games, if necessary, swinging back to the National League park.

Yankees Buy Nine Farm Club Stars

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—The New York Yankees today announced the purchase for spring delivery of nine of their farm club stars, including Kansas City's highly touted keystone combination of Phil Rizzuto and Jerry Priddy.

From Kansas City the Yanks also obtained two of the Blues' leading pitchers—John Lindell and Don Hendrickson. Both are right-handers.

The Newark acquisitions are Outfielder Tommy Holmes, and right-handed Pitchers Norman Branch, George Barley, Allan Gettel and Steve Peek.

The Yanks gave cash and Outfielder Buster Mills and Pitcher Tommy Reis to Kansas City, and money and two players to be named to Newark. Both Mills and Reis are with Kansas City now.

Detroit's Pitchers Chorus 'Tiger Rag' over Hitting

From time to time Detroit pitchers have had cause to complain that chances of victory were reduced by an inadequate attack. Tommy Bridges, in particular, has suffered from a lack of offensive support and, if he were the whining type(which he distinctly is not) he would be leading the clubhouse chorus: "They Never Get No Runs for Me."

On the other hand, there are pitchers whose turns frequently fall on days when the Tigers are in hitting form, writes Sam Greene in "The Detroit News." The load is lightened and success attained without strain. In this respect Lynwod Rowe has been recently fortunate, and one of the reasons in the batting punch contributed by the Schoolboy himself.

Casey Wins Both Games for Dodgers

BROOKLYN, Sept. 12 (AP)—A lot of pitchers have tried the "iron man" stunt of pitching both ends of a doubleheader, but Hugh Casey of the Dodgers did the trick today without so much work.

He pitched three-hit ball to shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates 7 to 0 in the first game and then returned as a relief pitcher in the seventh inning of the nightcap and got credit for Brooklyn's 7 to 4 victory, his 11th of the year.

Manager Frank Frisch of the Pirates was banished in the second game for protesting a ball called by plate Umpire George Ballanfant. When Frisch left he took all the Pittsburgh benchwarmers with him but they later filed back to the dugout. It was the tenth time Frisch has been ejected.

The Dodgers drove Max Butcher out in the sixth with a three-run flurry which Pittsburgh matched in the seventh to bring Casey to the relief of Luke Hamlin. When Brooklyn came to bat Joe Medwick tripled and scored on an infield out. The Dodgers also got two more tallies in the eighth and Casey reaped the credit.

Flaming Youth Prefers Music--Hot

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—What's the most popular high school study course?

In St. Louis high school officials were surprised to discover that it is music. Fifty-one per cent of all the students had a preference for it.

"But," added the report, with a note of disappointment, "a startling number of students prefer jazz and popular music."

A committee of instructors urged more emphasis on music appreciation classes.

No Airplane Complete Without a Clothespin

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Clothespins come in handy on swanky 1941 airplanes, at least in Oklahoma City.

The reason: A plane's antenna trails 15 to 50 feet behind the ship when in flight. The pilot is supposed to reel it in before he starts to land.

So the pilot sticks a clothespin on the throttle. When he starts to close the throttle to land, the clothespin reminds him about the antenna and he reels it in.

Shadow Boxing Scares Wife

Shadow boxing by James E. Compton, twenty-seven years old, of San Jose, Cal., was too much for his wife. She told a court that, first, it frightened her to death, and, secondly, she feared she might be beaten or injured by it. Furthermore, she alleged, her husband's "deep, ringside breathing" kept her awake.

Nats Beat Browns

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Washington Senators are sure to leave St. Louis still in sixth place in the American League.

The Browns, needing a clean sweep of the 3-game series to overtake the Senators, missed their opportunity by dropping the opener, 7 to 2, bowing to Arnold Anderson's 6-hit pitching.

Jack Sanford was the big gun in Washington's 13-hit attack on Vernon Kennedy and Roxie Lawson. The first baseman contributed a triple, double and single, drove in three runs and scored two. Gee Walker banged a triple and a double.

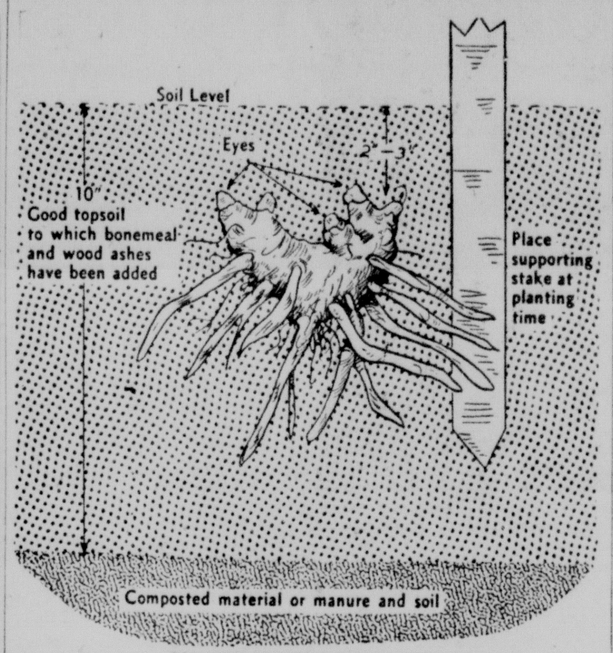
Think of Blue Squills and Daffodils---then Plant 'Em



Give your peonies a proper start.

By CLAIRE NORTON

Author of "Spring Flowers From Bulbs"

This is a story of bright blue squills, of daffodils, of peonies and the reasons why you should plant them right now.

The squills are shade lovers. They will grow in places that less attractive plants disdain.

They grow naturally on the forest floor and they'll like just such a spot, on one with just as shady conditions, in your garden.

Both the tiny, early ones and the later, taller varieties are suited for rock gardens, for naturalizing in thin grass, for edging, for mixed borders. They self-sow industriously. Their bulbs multiply.

Scilia bifolia blooms earliest of all the varieties, grows but three inches high, and forms bright blue masses. Next comes Siberian squill, blooming in March. It's from three to four inches tall. Taller and more vigorous are Spanish wood hyacinths, scilla campanulata and English bluebell.

All scillas should be planted in September.

The bulbs of small species should be covered with three to four inches of earth, others with five to six inches.

They thrive in ordinary garden soil but make sturdier growth if leafmold or peat moss is added. They should be mulched each fall with decayed leaves or pine needles

Good News About Daffodils

Good news for daffodil fans is this: The finest varieties are within reach of even the modest garden budgets.

It likewise is good news that American growers are producing better bulbs than were formerly imported and their products have the additional advantage of being especially adapted to American conditions.

If you've forgotten daffodils, glance again through your bulb catalog and you'll fall in love once more with their butter-coldness, their puckered, velvet mouths.

Plant daffodils early, preferably in September, four to six inches deep in well drained garden loam.

Incomparabilis and pieticus types and larger bulbs of trumpet class need deepest planting .

In measuring depth, measure from shoulder of bulb, not tip.

Space three to eight inches apart, depending upon bulb size.

Two to three inches of mulch after ground freezes is desirable. Remove mulch when shoots appear in spring.

As for peonies. Select a permanent location, where soil is well drained, and in the sun most of the day.

Good garden loam, well drained, produces best results.

Plant from early September until second or third week of October.

A standard three-to-five-eye division of root, or a division grown for a year in a nursery is considered best.

Set the crowns so that the eyes, or buds, will not be more than three inches nor less than two inches below surface. In light soil greater depth and in heavy soil lesser depth, is the rule. After the ground freezes, mulch newly set plants with straw, hay, or leaves. Mulch is not required after the first winter.

Found in Their Own Backyard

LACHAUX DE FONDS, Switzerland (AP)—Three years after the Communist Party and its propaganda was banned in Neuchatel Canton, the sleuths of La Chaux de Fonds located the source of the propaganda they thought came from the nearby French frontier.

Main distributor was the chief librarian of the municipal library. He got twenty days in jail and lost his job.

Carol and Lupescu Arrive in Barcelona

BARCELONA, Spain, Sept. 12 (AP)—Former King Carol, in flight from Rumania with red-headed Magda Lupescu, reached Barcelona tonight and reserved the same suite in a Barcelona hotel which was occupied by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor after they left France last summer.

The dethroned monarch's special train left the French-Spanish frontier this morning.

Madame Lupescu was traveling under the name of Helene Lourouz and had fifteen or twenty dogs with her. Two cars attached to Carol's carriage were piled high with five tons of luggage, three automobiles, and several wooden boxes for Madame Lupescu's dogs.

The couple probably will live either in Spain or Portugal. It was said in Lisbon today by Rumanian sources, however, that they might go to the United States.

Stocks Sell Off in Market of Only 403,130 Shares for Day

Opening Is Strong, but Gains are Quickly Wiped Away

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—Stocks moved to lower levels today in a market straitjacketed by the war.

Only 403,130 shares were exchanged compared with 453,090 yesterday.

Overnight orders, apparently based on belief Wednesday's decline marked overselling, gave today's earliest dealings an uplift. In the absence of supporting volume, however, the rises were quickly eradicated. At the last, the Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks was off .5 of a point at 43.

Losses of around a point or so were posted at the final bell for Bethlehem, U. S. Steel, Caterpillar, Douglas, United Aircraft, Sperry, Eastman, Johns-Manville, Allied Chemical, International Nickle, American Telephone, Texas Corp., Standard Oil of N. J., and Hercules Powder.

One of the day's few sales in Hercules Powder was made, off 1⅞ points, a few minutes after news of the Kenvil, N. J., plant catastrophe reached Wall street.

In the Curb, where transactions totaled 70,000 shares compared with 60,000 yesterday, the chief losers included Aluminum Ltd., Aluminum of America, American Manufacturing, Casco Products, Heyden Chemical, Hammermill Paper and N. J. Zinc.

Bonds paralleled the downward course of stocks. Commodities followed mixed trends. Cotton closed five cents a bale higher to five cents lower.

Oil Field Story Is Booked at Liberty

"Flowing Gold", starring John Garfield, Frances Farmer and Pat O'Brien, will be offered tomorrow at the New Liberty Theatre. It is a screen transcription of a Rex Beach novel.

The locale of the drama is Texas' great oil fields, the sprawling strip of land where men ruthlessly fight to capture flowing gold—the rich black oil that has lain in waiting since prehistoric time to gush geyser-like into the air.

Against this vivid background is painted a story of love, greed, and adventure. John Garfield and Pat O'Brien are seen as itinerant oil workers who meet and fall in love with Frances Farmer, beautiful daughter of their eccentric prospecting employer. In a series of scenes the pair saves the girl's wells from conniving rivals, and again come to her rescue when the wells are set aflame.

The cast includes Raymond Walburn, Cliff Edwards, the late Granville Bates, Jody Gilbert, Tom Kennedy, and William Marshall.

Jane Austen Novel Is Screened at Maryland

Jane Austen's romantic novel "Pride and Prejudice," made into a comedy starring Greer Garson as the lovely but prejudiced Elizabeth Bennet and Lawrence Olivier as the proud and wealthy Darcy, and it is showing at the Maryland theater.

The story deals with five unwedded but willing Bennet daughters and two handsome bachelors who come to town. One of the bachelors and the catch of the season is Darcy. His pride in family perjudices Elizabeth against him from their first meeting and although he falls in love with her, he can't stand her provincial family. In the end, of course, his love for Elizabeth overcomes his pride but only after an exciting and quarrelsome love affair.

Included in the cast are Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver and Edmund Gwenn. Elizabeth's sisters are played by Maureen O'Sullivan, Ann Rutherford, Marsha Hunt and Heather Angel. Also seen are Bruce Lester, Frieda Inescort, Edward Ashley and Karen Morley.

Laughter Is Promised In Strand Booking

Laughter is promised in Elsa Maxwell's "Public Deb. No. 1," Twentieth Century-Fox film due tomorrow at the Strand theater. The cast of this comedy is headed by George Murphy and Brenda Joyce.

Brenda, a spoiled but beautiful heiress turns "Leftist" under the influence of her "Rooshian" butler (from Brooklyn), played by Mischa Auer. Things go from bad to worse, when Brenda's penniless boy friend, George Murphy spanks her in public in an effort to bring her to her senses and the fun gets hilarious when she tries to get even.

Others in the cast are Elsa Maxwell, Mischa Auer, Charlie Ruggles, Ralph Bellamy, Maxie Rosenbloom, Berton Churchill and Franklin Pangborn.

The added feautres include a comedy cartoon in color entitled "The Lucky Duck," a novelty called "The Land of Flowers" and the combined Paramount and Fox news Flashes.

Charlie Barnet and his orchestra comes to the Strand Wednesday for one day only. The screen show will be "Yesterday's Heroes" a football story.

Little Mary Lee Is In Embassy Film

Besides her work on her Republic contract, Mary appeared in several of Bonita Granville's pictures as a "brat," and was Charlie McCarthy's girl friend, "Priscilla Ramshackle," in one of his broadcasts.

The second feature is Sabu in the technicolor picture, "Drums."

Two Features Are On Garden Program

How a young rancher brings six-gun justice to a western range that is being terrorized by a ruthless swindler and his crooked hirelings, provides outdoor action in George O'Brien's "Prairie Law," now at the Garden Theater.

O'Brien is cast as the battling cattleman who uncovers the sinister plot of an unscrupulous promoter victimizing settlers by selling them worthless tracts of land on the promise of unlimited water from the wells he will dig. In cahoots with the sharper is a burly butcher who organizes a ring of rustlers to steal cattle and deliver the beef to him.

Virginia Vale has the romantic lead in this RKO Radio film, while Dick Hogan, J. Farrell MacDonald, Slim Whitaker and Cyrus W. Kendall have other prominent roles.

"Blondie Brings Up Baby," one of the Columbia comedies based upon Chic Young's cartoon strip characters, is also at the Garden.

The picture deals with Baby Dumplings entering school and is enacted by Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms.

AN UNDERSTANDING

Claire Trevor and Walter Pidgeon reach an understanding in "Dark Command," story of Will Cantrell, vicious killer of Civil war days, which will appear at the Maryland theater Monday.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Distributed by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Lost interest

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We were such devoted friends for a long time, and all of a sudden has stopped coming When we meet anywhere, he acts as if he doesn't know me anymore, and passes me on the street with only the slightest nod. I have pondered over it, but can't think of a single thing I did or might have said to offend him. I don't drink, smoke or pet. Do you suppose that is the reason he's acting so distant? I don't care for any of these things.

PEG.

Too great an interest in a young man is almost as fatal as being sarcastic or domineering. It's hard to earn enough money to maintain a home and a wife nowadays, and a good many young men feel that it isn't fair to waste a girl's time as long as they will be unable to marry for years to come.

Judging from letters I receive from young men, a great many of them do not care for the drinking and petting kind, and they ask what has happened to all "the decent girls."

Undesirable Suitor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My daughter is very much in love with a very undesirable young man. She is of legal age, and, and so she has the law on her side, but if she marries this man, it would mean great unhappiness for her and would only reflect on the entire family. I prefer not to go into details.

I am ready to do anything to break up this affair, and wonder if sending a girl away would help her to forget him, or is it true that absence makes the heart grow fonder? Is it wise to go to any length in this matter, as I am willing to borrow money to be able to send her on a long trip. FATHER.

It would depend entirely on where the girl went, and how much diversion she found. If you were to send her somewhere with nothing but a lovely landscape to look at all day, she'd probably find herself more in love than ever.

If, however, she would go to an interesting and amusing place where she will meet attractive people, dance, motor and have a thoroughly good time, perhaps the attraction of the "undesirable" is likely to diminish.

If you can arrange to send her where she'll make new acquaintances, it would be a good idea to persuade her to go. But please don't send her to a place where she'll have nothing to do but think of the absent one.

Unjustifiable Jealousy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When my boy friend and I spend an evening together at home, everything goes along all right. But if we go out anywhere, he acts like a madman. At a dance he'll demand who I'm looking at; and if anyone dances with me he'll watch me all the time and accuses me of things which couldn't possibly happen.

And the last straw was one night when, while bus-riding, he accused me of flirting with almost every man passenger. I was so disgusted with him that I bid him goodbye at the door and told him that I was through, that he didn't even know enough to give me credit for good breeding. Can you imagine a girl in my class being so common that she'd flirt when out with another man?

Ever since that night he's been trying to make up. Don't you think he's slightly crazy?

JANETTA

It's a question whether jealousy such as you describe isn't a form of mania. But no one can deny that it's very unpleasant. Very often it does drive its victims to violence, and invariably puts them beyond the pale of normal friendship.

Whether you make up or not depends on his ability to reform. I shouldn't think you'd get much companionship out of such a friendship.

Since Childhood

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm going to graduate from high school next year, and have been palling around with a certain girl since I was old enough to walk. In fact, our parents knew each other before they were married. We play tennis, go swimming together, to dances, roller skating, ice-skating, and almost anything you can think of that two people can play together.

For the past six months we've been going "steady" to the exclusion of all others, and our parents approve very much of this friendship. But what's worrying me is, am I doing right in take up so much of her time? Perhaps I ought to let her go out with other boys too, so she can be sure I'm the one for her. What do you think of this?

C. B.

If you read my column regularly you will know I approve thoroughly of boys and girls being good pals. It gets them through the "awkward age" and helps to overcome the shyness and self-consciousness that makes so many young people miserable until they get adjusted in life.

If I advised you not to fall in love, I suppose it would be like telling water not to run down hill. But I sincerely hope you are not going to fall in love and get behind in your school work. The important thing just now is for you both to get through your school work creditably.

Almost all labor in Colombia road building must be done by hand, as landslides are frequent, and even the construction of a narrow mule trail involves a tremendous amount of work.

Stocks Sell Off in Market of Only 403,130 Shares for Day

Opening Is Strong, but Gains are Quickly Wiped Away

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—Stocks moved to lower levels today in a market straitjacketed by the war.

Only 403,130 shares were exchanged compared with 453,090 yesterday.

Overnight orders, apparently based on belief Wednesday's decline marked overselling, gave today's earliest dealings an uplift. In the absence of supporting volume, however, the rises were quickly eradicated. At the last, the Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks was off .5 of a point at 43.

Losses of around a point or so were posted at the final bell for Bethlehem, U. S. Steel, Caterpillar, Douglas, United Aircraft, Sperry, Eastman, Johns-Manville, Allied Chemical, International Nickle, American Telephone, Texas Corp., Standard Oil of N. J., and Hercules Powder.

One of the day's few sales in Hercules Powder was made, off 1¾ points, a few minutes after news of the Kenvil, N. J., plant catastrophe reached Wall street.

In the Curb, where transactions totaled 70,000 shares compared with 69,000 yesterday, the chief losers included Aluminum Ltd., Aluminum of America, American Manufacturing, Casco Products, Heyden Chemical, Hammermill Paper and N. J. Zinc.

Bonds paralleled the downward course of stocks. Commodities followed mixed trends. Cotton closed five cents a bale higher to five cents lower.

Jane Austen Novel Is Screened at Maryland

Jane Austen's romantic novel "Pride and Prejudice," made into a comedy starring Greer Garson as the lovely but prejudiced Elizabeth Bennet and Lawrence Olivier as the proud and wealthy Darcy, and it is showing at the Maryland theater.

The story deals with five unwedded but willing Bennet daughters and two handsome bachelors who come to town. One of the bachelors and the catch of the season is Darcy. His pride in family perjudices Elizabeth against him from their first meeting and although he falls in love with her, he can't stand her provincial family. In the end, of course, his love for Elizabeth overcomes his pride but only after an exciting and quarrelsome love affair.

Included in the cast are Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver and Edmund Gwenn. Elizabeth's sisters are played by Maureen O'Sullivan, Ann Rutherford, Marsha Hunt and Heather Angel. Also seen are Bruce Lester, Frieda Inescort, Edward Ashley and Karen Morley.

Laughter Is Promised In Strand Booking

Laughter is promised in Elsa Maxwell's "Public Deb. No. 1," Twentieth Century-Fox film due tomorrow at the Strand theater. The cast of this comedy is headed by George Murphy and Brenda Joyce.

Brenda, a spoiled but beautiful heiress turns "Leftist" under the influence of her "Rooshian" butler (from Brooklyn), played by Mischa Auer. Things go from bad to worse, when Brenda's penniless boy friend, George Murphy spanks her in public in an effort to bring her to her senses and the fun gets hilarious when she tries to get even.

Others in the cast are Elsa Maxwell, Mischa Auer, Charlie Ruggles, Ralph Bellamy, Maxie Rosenbloom, Berton Churchill and Franklin Pangborn.

The added feautres include a comedy cartoon in color entitled "The Lucky Duck," a novelty called "The Land of Flowers" and the combined Paramount and Fox news Flashes.

Charlie Barnet and his orchestra comes to the Strand Wednesday for one day only. The screen show will be "Yesterday's Heroes" a football story.

Little Mary Lee Is In Embassy Film

Besides her work on her Republic contract, Mary appeared in several of Bonita Granville's pictures as a "brat," and was Charlie McCarthy's girl friend, "Priscilla Ramshackle," in one of his broadcasts.

Two Features Are On Garden Program

How a young rancher brings six-gun justice to a western range that is being terrorized by a ruthless swindler and his crooked hirelings, provides outdoor action in George O'Brien's "Prairie Law," now at the Garden Theater.

O'Brien is cast as the battling cattleman who uncovers the sinister plot of an unscrupulous promoter victimizing settlers by selling them worthless tracts of land on the promise of unlimited water from the wells he will dig. In cahoots with the sharper is a burly butcher who organizes a ring of rustlers to steal cattle and deliver the beef to him.

Virginia Vale has the romantic lead in this RKO Radio film, while Dick Hogan, J. Farrell MacDonald, Slim Whitaker and Cyrus W. Kendall have other prominent roles.

"Blondie Brings Up Baby," one of the Columbia comedies based upon Chic Young's cartoon strip characters, is also at the Garden.

The picture deals with Baby Dumplings entering school and is enacted by Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms.

AN UNDERSTANDING

Claire Trevor and Walter Pidgeon reach an understanding in "Dark Command," story of Will Cantrell, vicious killer of Civil war days, which will appear at the Maryland theater Monday.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Distributed by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Lost interest

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We were such devoted friends for a long time, and all of a sudden has stopped coming. When we meet anywhere, he acts as if he doesn't know me anymore, and passes me on the street with only the slightest nod. I have pondered over it, but can't think of a single thing I did or might have said to offend him. I don't drink, smoke or pet. Do you suppose that is the reason he's acting so distant? I don't care for any of these things.

PEG.

Too great an interest in a young man is almost as fatal as being sarcastic or domineering. It's hard to earn enough money to maintain a home and a wife nowadays, and a good many young men feel that it isn't fair to waste a girl's time as long as they will be unable to marry for years to come.

Judging from letters I receive from young men, a great many of them do not care for the drinking and petting kind, and they ask what has happened to all "the decent girls."

Undesirable Suitor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My daughter is very much in love with a very undesirable young man. She is of legal age, and, and so she has the law on her side, but if she marries this man, it would mean great unhappiness for her and would only reflect on the entire family. I prefer not to go into details.

I am ready to do anything to break up this affair, and wonder if sending a girl away would help her to forget him, or is it true that absence makes the heart grow fonder? Is it wise to go to any length in this matter, as I am willing to borrow money to be able to send her on a long trip. FATHER.

It would depend entirely on where the girl went, and how much diversion she found. If you were to send her somewhere with nothing but a lovely landscape to look at all day, she'd probably find herself more in love than ever.

If, however, she would go to an interesting and amusing place where she will meet attractive people, dance, motor and have a thoroughly good time, perhaps the attraction of the "undesirable" is likely to diminish.

If you can arrange to send her where she'll make new acquaintances, it would be a good idea to persuade her to go. But please don't send her to a place where she'll have nothing to do but think of the absent one.

Unjustifiable Jealousy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When my boy friend and I spend an evening together at home, everything goes along all right. But if we go out anywhere, he acts like a madman. At a dance he'll demand who I'm looking at; and if anyone dances with me he'll watch me all the time and accuses me of things which couldn't possibly happen.

And the last straw was one night when, while bus-riding, he accused me of flirting with almost every man passenger. I was so disgusted with him that I bid him goodbye at the door and told him that I was through, that he didn't even know enough to give me credit for good breeding. Can you imagine a girl in my class being so common that she'd flirt when out with another man?

Ever since that night he's been trying to make up. Don't you think he's slightly crazy?

JANETTA

It's a question whether jealousy such as you describe isn't a form of mania. But no one can deny that it's very unpleasant. Very often it does drive its victims to violence, and invariably puts them beyond the pale of normal friendship.

Whether you make up or not depends on his ability to reform. I shouldn't think you'd get much companionship out of such a friendship.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm going to graduate from high school next year, and have been palling around with a certain girl since I was old enough to walk. In fact, our parents knew each other before they were married. We play tennis, go swimming together, to dances, roller skating, ice-skating, and almost anything you can think of that two people can play together.

For the past six months we've been going "steady" to the exclusion of all others, and our parents approve very much of this friendship. But what's worrying me is, am I doing right in take up so much of her time? Perhaps I ought to let her go out with other boys too, so she can be sure I'm the one for her. What do you think of this?

C. B.

If you read my column regularly you will know I approve thoroughly of boys and girls being good pals. It gets them through the "awkward age" and helps to overcome the shyness and self-consciousness that makes so many young people miserable until they get adjusted in life.

If I advised you not to fall in love, I suppose it would be like telling water not to run down hill. But I sincerely hope you are not going to fall in love and get behind in your school work. The important thing just now is for you both to get through your school work creditably.

My Time Isn't Your Time

SOMERSET, Ky. (AP)—Somerset residents set their watches by the town clock, and thereby hangs the failure of daylight saving time here.

"Fast time" was ordered by the city council. But the fiscal court, county governing body, refused to set ahead the clock atop the court house. So the rest of Somerset clung to standard time.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

GUN AND Tommy went into the bedroom, got out of their flying suits, then into the bathroom and had a shower. In the sitting room Trent awaited them with a tray of cocktails.

"I'll just take a drink with you," he observed, "and then, if you don't mind, I'll leave you to it. I've a good deal to do, and I stand in need of a bath and a meal!"

He poured three cocktails from the shaker, and they each took one.

"Well, here's to success!" smiled Trent.

"I'll drink to that!" agreed Gun. "But I doubt if it'll mean quite the same thing to all of us!"

The dry Martini tasted good, and Tommy showed signs of reviving. Trent said:

"Well, good night, gentlemen! I shall hope to see you in the morning!"

He went out by the inner door, and a moment later Sambo, showing a double row of white teeth in a magnificent grin, hurried in with the soup.

"Thank you, Sambo!" said Gun, genially.

The black, who was looking at him, grinned and nodded. Gun thought that he could probably lip-read.

Neither he nor Tommy spoke until they had cleared the soup. Sambo remained in the background. The moment they had finished, he whisked away the plates and hurried out. Tommy heaved a sigh, and looked at Gun.

"Well!" he remarked, with a rather dubious grin. "So far so good, eh?"

"S-s-sh!" Gun made a warning gesture, and then said, in a low voice: "Give nothing away—walls have microphones, and I don't trust all this courtesy!" Then, in a louder tone: "Well, Tommy, this is all very nice—but what the hell does it mean? What's it leading up to?"

"You're asking me!" retorted Tommy, playing up to him. "It looks to me as though we've been ruddy well kidnaped! I wish we could get in touch with headquarters."

"Oh, we'll see what we can do tomorrow!" Gun answered, with a yawn which was not entirely simulated. "It's wonderful how the needs of the moment obtrude themselves before all other things. Just now this meal, with a bath and a bed to come, leaves me not worrying about anything much!"

Sambo came in with fried sole and French fried potatoes, and again stood like a black statue by the door while they devoured it. Saddle of mutton followed, with cheese and biscuits to complete the meal.

Sam produced a small slate, with the legend: "Coffee, please?" written on it in a round, schoolboy hand.

Gun nodded, and taking the pencil, wrote "Black" on the slate. As Sambo turned to go, Gun followed him with his eyes. At the same time he rose, and deliberately knocked his chair over on the polished boards. He saw Sambo start, hesitate, and then go on, without turning his head.

"Deaf my foot!" commented Gun, in a low voice. "He can hear as well as an, of us. I wonder if the dumbness is a fake, too?"

"Shouldn't wonder!" grunted Tommy, who, after his meal, was almost asleep. "I wonder where the hell we are?"

"So do I. Have you any idea at all?"

Tommy shook his head.

"Very vague! That damned plane led us all over the shop to baffle me—not difficult, seeing I'd no compass! We're on an island, all right!"

Gun nodded.

"Yes—WHAT island?"

"Ask me another! It's pretty warm, though—and that rather suggests somewhere off the coast of Africa, doesn't it?"

"Maybe!" Gun shrugged. "Anyway, the sharp point is that they've got us!"

"Damned cheek!" grunted Tommy. "But what are they going to do with us?"

"Give us pencil and paper, by the looks of that little drawing office."

"Huh! They'll be damned unlucky. . . . Come on, what about that bath and bed?"

Twenty minutes later they were in their respective beds, and sleeping as only men who have been flying for nearly 24 hours at a stretch can.

In Whitehall, both War Office and Air Force staffs had returned. X was white and jaded.

"It's two hours since that last message came through," remarked War Office. "Whatever's happened, it's plain they won't get another chance to communicate tonight, I should say."

Air Force nodded, grimly.

"They've got them, all right," he said, unconsciously echoing Gun's remark made just about the same time. "I should think we might as well pack up—no good sitting here and looking at each other!"

X nodded, and rose wearily. He almost staggered as he walked across to the mantelpiece.

"Yes, you're right," he agreed. "An operator will be standing by all the time, of course, and I'll arrange to be called if anything important comes through. But, personally, I don't expect to hear anything for some time. Days, probably. If at all," he added, gloomily. He cursed the pessimism and depression that seemed to have gripped him—probably due to the long hours of strain, he imagined.

The other two said good night, and went. X gave his final directions and followed suit.

Outside the night was starry, and he stood on the pavement for a moment or two, staring up at the sky in silent contemplation.

The sea has hitherto held all the mysteries, he thought, but now that star-spangled waste is beginning to rival it! Lost flyers! An airplane in that waste is a very small and helpless thing, really. And some of them never come back, and nothing is ever heard of them!

As though in answer to his thoughts he heard the distant roar of an engine, and presently could just make out the shape of a plane, faint against the stars.

X hailed a belated taxi.

Gun was awakened at an early hour by a beam of bright, warm sunshine on his face. It felt good, and he heaved a long sigh, yawned, and stretched luxuriously. But in the middle of it he remembered where he was, and the stretch collapsed rather ignominiously.

He sat up and looked around the room. Noticed again what he had already seen last night—that, while they were eating, their flying kits and the service revolvers had been quietly removed.

But Gun still had his inseparable companions—a small, flat pocket torch, and a .38 automatic. There was some comfort in that—especially in the latter.

He reached out for cigaret and lighter, and puffed luxuriously, trying to think of a safe place to hide his treasures in case they were "frisked." Decided that was hardly likely to happen so long as their captors did not realize that they were there by their own intent, and not owing to their captors' cunning. So far they seemed to have no suspicion of this.

Gun finished his cigaret, then got up and dressed—having no pajamas, he had slept naked.

Then he lit another cigaret, and went quietly into the sitting room. There was no one about, and he presumed that Sambo was still asleep in his "annex."

Gun opened the door, without noise, and stepped out into the sunlight. His watch registered seven-thirty, but the sun was already hot. The garden, which surrounded the bungalow, was well laid out, and was about a half-acre in extent. It was surrounded in its turn by the wire fence Gun had noticed the previous night. This was composed of stout, narrow-meshed wire netting, with barbed wire strung through it at intervals in such a way that it was obviously unclimbable, and was about 12 feet in height.

"They don't mean for us to get out of this bird cage, that's a certainty," was Gun's inward comment. This idea became confirmed when he observed that there was a guard at the gate, and two others each watching two sides of the square fence.

Gun became interested, and strolled down to the fence. The man patrolling that section was plainly not a regular soldier. He wore a suit of mechanic's overalls of khaki, and a wide-brimmed felt hat. Tennis shoes on his feet, and a cartridge belt loosely slung around his waist. The rifle he carried slung was a fairly up-to-date Mauser.

He turned his attention to the man patrolling the other section. He wore dungarees and a battered straw hat—otherwise his appearance was much the same as the other.

But the man at the gate was different. He was a big, blond man, in an open-necked shirt and plus-fours, with golf shoes on his feet.

Gun noticed also that the men patrolling had a slouching, careless walk, which could never be found in even the most carelessly trained soldier, while the man at the gate stood precisely as he had seen sentries standing outside official places in Berlin.

Gun walked as far as the fence and waited until the man in dungarees came along.

"Good morning," said Gun in English.

The man passed on without even looking at him.

Gun waited until he came back and, just as he drew level, held his gold cigaret case close to the netting:

"Cigarro?"

The man took not the slightest notice. Gun strolled after him, a little to the rear. He fell to whistling. He whistled a bar or two of the "Red Flag"—then the "Carmagnole." Then, breaking off, Gun substituted, on a slightly louder note, "Santa Lucia."

Gun, who had been watching the patrol's back very closely, was satisfied for the moment, and turned his attention to the landscape. The view, after a hundred yards, was obstructed by a high wooden fence. Beyond that could be seen the roofs of buildings, and from faint clinking and hammerings that came to him from that direction, Gun deduced workshops. This, as Gun saw from the sun, was the southern side of the bungalow.

On the western side was a wide, flat stretch of ground, rising slowly upward for about half a mile, with nothing but some tree tops to be seen beyond the top of the rise. This was where they had made their landing the previous night, though there was no sign of an airplane to be seen there now.

The whole of the northern side was occupied, within fifty yards of the fence, by a slope so steep as to be practically perpendicular, which rose some 70 feet almost sheer. The face of it was rocky, with sparse, coarse grass growing, and stunted bushes growing here and there. Gun could not identify the bushes, and this fact gave him the idea of studying the flowers in the garden. But they were all English varieties—pansies, primulas, daffodils, lilies and so on. Evidently imported. Gun cursed softly, and turned his attention to the eastern side.

There was nothing to be seen here—only the backs of a row of hutments, similar to the British army huts used in the Great War. Smoke was coming from the tin chimney pots, and Gun guessed that the garrison, or whatever it called itself, of the place lived there, and were just attending to their breakfasts.

On an afterthought he strolled down to the fence again, and took careful stock of the hands of all the sentries.

As he turned to the bungalow a clattering issued from the kitchen, and from the bathroom there came the sound of Tommy Hazeldeane singing unmelodiously.

"I don't know what the hell you think you've got to sing about," grunted Gun from the doorway.

"Well, I got a nibble or two, anyway."

"Good lad! And as for singing, why not? We're alive, and the sun's shining. What more d'you want?"

This Story Has a Happy Ending

MANHATTAN, Kas. (AP)—You'll guess the end of this story before you come to it.

H. E. Reisner was fishing and a big bass came up and took his pet hook and leader.

Just then a boy approached and said, "Mister, can I borrow one of your minnows?"

Reisner let him have one. The boy baited his hook and cast it into the water.

Out came the bass that had Reisner's hook in its mouth.

Spanish Gentlemen Preferred Blondes, Too

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP)—Even the Conquistadores, who sought the Seven Cities of Cibola 400 years ago, preferred blondes.

That's the conclusion of Miss Dorothy Miller, president of the New Mexico Board of Cosmetology, who has been studying the subject.

The gals the Spaniards left behind them, when they set out to explore what now is the southwestern United States, "took great pains to achieve the blonde type and all sorts of bleaches were invented for that purpose," says Miss Miller.

In addition the ladies used switches, snoods and eyebrow pencils.

The Midnight Ride Of Russell Hart

HELENA, Mont., (AP) — Russell Hart is Helena's Paul Revere.

Awakened by the gurgle of water he discovered a sewer was overflowing, from a broken main, had backed up through the basement drain, and had extinguished the gas in the furnace. The gas was escaping.

Realizing the same situation might exist in other homes, Hart began ringing doorbells. Sure enough some sleeping families were in danger of asphyxiation.

My Time Isn't Your Time

SOMERSET, Ky. (AP)—Somerset residents set their watches by the town clock, and thereby hangs the failure of daylight saving time here.

"Fast time" was ordered by the city council. But the fiscal court, county governing body, refused to set ahead the clock atop the court house. So the rest of Somerset clung to standard time.

Because of its great wing spread the bat can fly much better than most birds, being especially proficient at turning.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

GUN AND Tommy went into the bedroom, got out of their flying suits, then into the bathroom and had a shower. In the sitting room Trent awaited them with a tray of cocktails.

"I'll just take a drink with you," he observed, "and then, if you don't mind, I'll leave you to it. I've a good deal to do, and I stand in need of a bath and a meal!"

He poured three cocktails from the shaker, and they each took one.

"Well, here's to success!" smiled Trent.

"I'll drink to that!" agreed Gun. "But I doubt if it'll mean quite the same thing to all of us!"

The dry Martini tasted good, and Tommy showed signs of reviving. Trent said:

"Well, good night, gentlemen! I shall hope to see you in the morning!"

He went out by the inner door, and a moment later Sambo, showing a double row of white teeth in a magnificent grin, hurried in with the soup.

"Thank you, Sambo!" said Gun, genially.

The black, who was looking at him, grinned and nodded. Gun thought that he could probably lip-read.

Neither he nor Tommy spoke until they had cleared the soup. Sambo remained in the background. The moment they had finished, he whisked away the plates and hurried out. Tommy heaved a sigh, and looked at Gun.

"Well!" he remarked, with a rather dubious grin. "So far so good, eh?"

"S-s-sh!" Gun made a warning gesture, and then said, in a low voice: "Give nothing away—walls have microphones, and I don't trust all this courtesy!" Then, in a louder tone: "Well, Tommy, this is all very nice—but what the hell does it mean? What's it leading up to?"

"You're asking me!" retorted Tommy, playing up to him. "It looks to me as though we've been ruddy well kidnaped! I wish we could get in touch with headquarters."

"Oh, we'll see what we can do tomorrow!" Gun answered, with a yawn which was not entirely simulated. "It's wonderful how the needs of the moment obtrude themselves before all other things. Just now this meal, with a bath and a bed to come, leaves me not worrying about anything much!"

Sambo came in with fried sole and French fried potatoes, and again stood like a black statue by the door while they devoured it. Saddle of mutton followed, with cheese and biscuits to complete the meal.

Sam produced a small slate, with the legend: "Coffee, please?" written on it in a round, schoolboy hand.

Gun nodded, and taking the pencil, wrote "Black" on the slate. As Sambo turned to go, Gun followed him with his eyes. At the same time he rose, and deliberately knocked his chair over on the polished boards. He saw Sambo start, hesitate, and then go on, without turning his head.

"Deaf my foot!" commented Gun, in a low voice. "He can hear as well as an, of us. I wonder if the dumbness is a fake, too?"

"Shouldn't wonder!" grunted Tommy, who, after his meal, was almost asleep. "I wonder where the hell we are?"

"So do I. Have you any idea at all?"

Tommy shook his head.

"Very vague! That damned plane led us all over the shop to baffle me—not difficult, seeing I'd no compass! We're on an island, all right!"

Gun nodded.

"Yes—WHAT island?"

"Ask me another! It's pretty warm, though—and that rather suggests somewhere off the coast of Africa, doesn't it?"

"Maybe!" Gun shrugged. "Anyway, the sharp point is that they've got us!"

"Damned cheek!" grunted Tommy. "But what are they going to do with us?"

"Give us pencil and paper, by the looks of that little drawing office."

"Huh! They'll be damned unlucky. . . . Come on, what about that bath and bed?"

Twenty minutes later they were in their respective beds, and sleeping as only men who have been flying for nearly 24 hours at a stretch can.

In Whitehall, both War Office and Air Force staffs had returned. X was white and jaded.

"It's two hours since that last message came through," remarked War Office. "Whatever's happened, it's plain they won't get another chance to communicate tonight, I should say."

Air Force nodded, grimly.

"They've got them, all right," he said, unconsciously echoing Gun's remark made just about the same time. "I should think we might as well pack up—no good sitting here and looking at each other!"

X nodded, and rose wearily. He almost staggered as he walked across to the mantelpiece.

"Yes, you're right," he agreed. "An operator will be standing by all the time, of course, and I'll arrange to be called if anything important comes through. But, personally, I don't expect to hear anything for some time. Days, probably. If at all," he added, gloomily. He cursed the pessimism and depression that seemed to have gripped him—probably due to the long hours of strain, he imagined.

The other two said good night, and went. X gave his final directions and followed suit.

Outside the night was starry, and he stood on the pavement for a moment or two, staring up at the sky in silent contemplation.

The sea has hitherto held all the mysteries, he thought, but now that star-spangled waste is beginning to rival it! Lost flyers! An airplane in that waste is a very small and helpless thing, really. And some of them never come back, and nothing is ever heard of them!

As though in answer to his thoughts he heard the distant roar of an engine, and presently could just make out the shape of a plane, faint against the stars.

X hailed a belated taxi.

Gun was awakened at an early hour by a beam of bright, warm sunshine on his face. It felt good, and he heaved a long sigh, yawned, and stretched luxuriously. But in the middle of it he remembered where he was, and the stretch collapsed rather ignominiously.

He sat up and looked around the room. Noticed again what he had already seen last night—that, while they were eating, their flying kits and the service revolvers had been quietly removed.

But Gun still had his inseparable companions—a small, flat pocket torch, and a .38 automatic. There was some comfort in that—especially in the latter.

He reached out for cigaret and lighter, and puffed luxuriously, trying to think of a safe place to hide his treasures in case they were "frisked." Decided that was hardly likely to happen so long as their captors did not realize that they were there by their own intent, and not owing to their captors' cunning. So far they seemed to have no suspicion of this.

Gun finished his cigaret, then got up and dressed—having no pajamas, he had slept naked.

Then he lit another cigaret, and went quietly into the sitting room. There was no one about, and he presumed that Sambo was still asleep in his "annex."

Gun opened the door, without noise, and stepped out into the sunlight. His watch registered seven-thirty, but the sun was already hot. The garden, which surrounded the bungalow, was well laid out, and was about a half-acre in extent. It was surrounded in its turn by the wire fence Gun had noticed the previous night. This was composed of stout, narrow-meshed wire netting, with barbed wire strung through it at intervals in such a way that it was obviously unclimbable, and was about 12 feet in height.

"They don't mean for us to get out of this bird cage, that's a certainty," was Gun's inward comment. This idea became confirmed when he observed that there was a guard at the gate, and two others each watching two sides of the square fence.

Gun became interested, and strolled down to the fence. The man patrolling that section was plainly not a regular soldier. He wore a suit of mechanic's overalls of khaki, and a wide-brimmed felt hat. Tennis shoes on his feet, and a cartridge belt loosely slung around his waist. The rifle he carried slung was a fairly up-to-date Mauser.

He turned his attention to the man patrolling the other section. He wore dungarees and a battered straw hat—otherwise his appearance was much the same as the other.

But the man at the gate was different. He was a big, blond man, in an open-necked shirt and plus-fours, with golf shoes on his feet.

Gun noticed also that the men patrolling had a slouching, careless walk, which could never be found in even the most carelessly trained soldier, while the man at the gate stood precisely as he had seen sentries standing outside official places in Berlin.

Gun walked as far as the fence and waited until the man in dungarees came along.

"Good morning," said Gun in English.

The man passed on without even looking at him.

Gun waited until he came back and, just as he drew level, held his gold cigaret case close to the netting:

"Cigarro?"

The man took not the slightest notice. Gun strolled after him, a little to the rear. He fell to whistling. He whistled a bar or two of the "Red Flag"—then the "Carmagnole." Then, breaking off, Gun substituted, on a slightly louder note, "Santa Lucia."

Gun, who had been watching the patrol's back very closely, was satisfied for the moment, and turned his attention to the landscape. The view, after a hundred yards, was obstructed by a high wooden fence. Beyond that could be seen the roofs of buildings, and from faint clinking and hammerings that came to him from that direction, Gun deduced workshops. This, as Gun saw from the sun, was the southern side of the bungalow.

On the western side was a wide, flat stretch of ground, rising slowly upward for about half a mile, with nothing but some tree tops to be seen beyond the top of the rise. This was where they had made their landing the previous night, though there was no sign of an airplane to be seen there now.

The whole of the northern side was occupied, within fifty yards of the fence, by a slope so steep as to be practically perpendicular, which rose some 70 feet almost sheer. The face of it was rocky, with sparse, coarse grass growing, and stunted bushes growing here and there. Gun could not identify the bushes, and this fact gave him the idea of studying the flowers in the garden. But they were all English varieties—pansies, primulas, daffodils, lilies and so on. Evidently imported. Gun cursed softly, and turned his attention to the eastern side.

There was nothing to be seen here—only the backs of a row of hutments, similar to the British army huts used in the Great War. Smoke was coming from the tin chimney pots, and Gun guessed that the garrison, or whatever it called itself, of the place lived there, and were just attending to their breakfasts.

On an afterthought he strolled down to the fence again, and took careful stock of the hands of all the sentries.

As he turned to the bungalow a clattering issued from the kitchen, and from the bathroom there came the sound of Tommy Hazeldeane singing unmelodiously.

"I don't know what the hell you think you've got to sing about," grunted Gun from the doorway.

"Well, I got a nibble or two, anyway."

"Good lad! And as for singing, why not? We're alive, and the sun's shining. What more d'you want?"

Spanish Gentlemen Preferred Blondes, Too

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP)—Even the Conquistadores, who sought the Seven Cities of Cibola 400 years ago, preferred blondes.

That's the conclusion of Miss Dorothy Miller, president of the New Mexico Board of Cosmetology, who has been studying the subject.

The gals the Spaniards left behind them, when they set out to explore what now is the southwestern United States, "took great pains to achieve the blonde type and all sorts of bleaches were invented for that purpose," says Miss Miller.

In addition the ladies used switches, snoods and eyebrow pencils.

HELENA, Mont., (AP)—Russell Hart is Helena's Paul Revere.

Awakened by the gurgle of water, he discovered a sewer was overflowing, from a broken main, had backed up through the basement drain, and had extinguished the gas in the furnace. The gas was escaping.

Realizing the same situation might exist in other homes, Hart began ringing doorbells. Sure enough some sleeping families were in danger of asphyxiation.

This Story Has a Happy Ending

MANHATTAN, Kas. (AP)—You'll guess the end of this story before you come to it.

H. E. Reisner was fishing and a big bass came up and took his pet hook and leader.

Just then a boy approached and said, "Mister, can I borrow one of your minnows?"

Reisner let him have one. The boy baited his hook and cast it into the water.

Out came the bass that had Reisner's hook in its mouth.

Listed around 1800 were about 3,600 species of salt water fish and about 2,300 species of fresh water fishes. Since then the number listed has increased to several times these numbers.

Parents Should Teach Children Value of Money

Early Training Suggested with Budget Plan Later On

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D

Education of the child in the care and use of money is strictly a home problem. This problem can't be avoided. It comes as the child grows.

Begin when the tot has a cent or nickel to spend. Give him the cent or nickel at regular intervals, say on a certain day each week. So far as reasonably possible, let him use this money as he likes. If you succeed in prevailing on the child to save the nickel of this week till he gets the nickel of next week in order to buy some cherished thing costing a dime he has made remarkable progress. He has learned to give up something now for greater pleasure later—a basic trait of character.

If this child should be able to keep the nickel to the third week his victory would still be more glorious. Also he would have demonstrated that he could be entrusted safely each week with more than a nickel.

Building Responsibility

Very, very gradually extend the amount he regularly will receive each week to include a few necessities. But be sure not to extend this responsibility too fast. As soon as necessities like school supplies, car fare, Sunday school money, and the like are covered in the allowance let a certain amount, say nickel or dime, also be included which he can spend practically as he pleases. Some suggestions about its use might be wise, but coercion, except where he spends for positively harmful things, would be bad.

At the age of six, seven, eight, nine or later, depending on how far he has cultivated responsibility, have him keep careful account of his necessary expenditures at school and elsewhere.

From the record of his necessary expenditures for a week he and his parents should make up a definite budget itemizing each group of necessities. Then this total amount plus the small definite "free" item should make up his regular weekly allowance to be received on a regular day. If some unexpected legitimate need should rise during this or later weeks not accounted for in the budget his parents would supply it, of course. The child should know that he may be free to discuss the allowance with his parents at any time and that they would willingly revise it upward as the need of doing so becomes obvious.

A Budget Plan

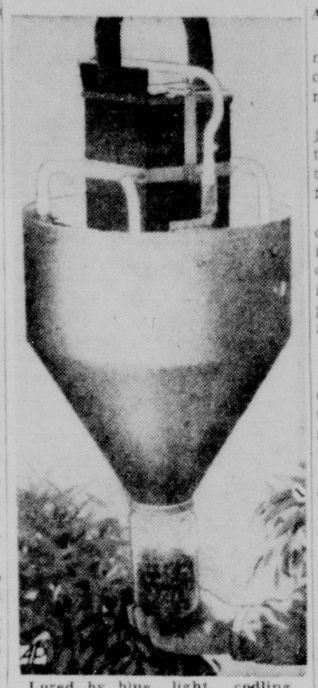
As the child begins this extensive plan of allowance he should, on receiving it place the necessary amounts in separate envelopes labeled "car fare," "lunch," and so on. Or he might prefer to build a bin for each item in a cardboard box.

As this child grows older and gains more success at responsibility with money his budgeted allowance might gradually take on a few items of clothing so that by the time he entered high school his allowance might cover all such items and be given in a check for a month instead of once a week.

Don't tamper with the allowance as a means of punishment. For an allowance to work well, it must be definite and regular, not possible if there were deductions for disciplinary purposes.

A list of books for parents on subjects including the use of money, and scores of other everyday problems, may be had by writing me at 235 E. 45th St., New York City, N. Y., enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Death Ray Passes Test in Orchards With Nightly Bag of Insect Pests



Lured by blue light, codling moths and other insect pests preying on central Washington orchards enter this "electrocution chamber and are killed by ultra-violet radiation. The partly-filled quart jar being removed represents one night's catch.

AP Feature Service

Seattle—Death rays may soon save money for central Washington orcardists. The victims are codling moths and other insect pests.

A good night's catch is a quart jar of between 4,000 and 5,000 of the insects, which prey on apple trees, mainstay of Washington's fruit industry.

The death ray machine is another invention of Prof. Frederick K. Kirsten of the University of Washington. He's better known in this region for his new-style pipe, his cycloidal propeller, and recently-announced new-style bed.

Lured By Blue Light

The Kirsten trap, electrically operated, lures the insects with a tube of blue light. Then, in a metal container, another tube kills the insects with ultra-violet radiation. They fall into a jar below. Similarly, prolonged exposure to X-rays would kill human beings, says Professor Kirscten.

All sorts of insects, possibly a tenth of them codling moths and the rest tomato moths, June bugs, lice and other night-flying pests, are caught. Bees, of the greatest value in pollenizing trees, are not endangered. They stay home nights.

One Trap To Forty Trees

One trap an acre, on which forty or more trees are set out, should be enough. The initial cost per trap would be about $75, he figures, and the operation cost about $10 a season.

Elmer Kinyon, Naches orchardist, has had a trap in operation for two years and says his orchard is the "cleanest" in the vicinity.

Professor Kirsten says his work is simply that of an engineer in building the trap, and that he has little knowledge of orcharding or insect life.

"Possibly some helpful insects may be harmed or other problems arise, which only a period of years of experiments can determine," he says. "But at least the trap has possibilities.

"For one thing, other similar devices require about four times as much power to operate."

Nature Has Her Own Death Ray

Flies on this elm leaf were brought down by nature's own anti-aircraft battery. Empusa musicae, a gluey fungus that propels spores into the air. Flies hit by the spores adhere to the leaves that provide food for the fungus, which shoots more spores into the air to repeat the process. The fungus is being studied by the Virginia Tech biology department.

Japan Gets Manchoukuo, Manchoukuo Gets Yen

HSINKING, Manchoukuo (AP) — After nine years of intensive development, Japan is still pouring money into Manchoukuo, which used to be called "Japan's lifeline."

During 1940 Japan will advance yen 1,200,000,000 ($283,000,000) for continued development here, official reports said. Japan will provide further yen 100,000,000 ($24,000,000) in foreign exchange credits for purchases to be made abroad (outside the Japanese empire) during the year.

Chinese Think Whales Are Mine-Sweepers

HONGKONG, (AP)—Chinese residents of the British colony of Hongkong have their own theory why mines have been washed ashore there. Whales, they think, must have fouled the mooring cables and set the mines loose.

Several mine explosions have occurred on the shore. In one instance a whale was killed. Villagers in the district were quick to cut it up for food and oil, but the handful of Britons complained of the smell.

Fifteen Face Trial In Strike Riot

KENOVA, W. Va., Sept. 11 (AP) — Fifteen persons were arraigned today before Magistrate J. L. Malcolm on charges of conspiracy to assault in connection with a riot growing out of a strike at the Jeffery-Dewitt Insular Company's plant.

State police continued to patrol the picketed plant. An outbreak, which was attributed to friction between opposing unions, occurred last week, and three men were injured.

Parents Should Teach Children Value of Money

Early Training Suggested with Budget Plan Later On

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D

Education of the child in the care and use of money is strictly a home problem. This problem can't be avoided. It comes as the child grows.

Begin when the tot has a cent or nickel to spend. Give him the cent or nickel at regular intervals, say on a certain day each week. So far as reasonably possible, let him use this money as he likes. If you succeed in prevailing on the child to save the nickel of this week till he gets the nickel of next week in order to buy some cherished thing costing a dime he has made remarkable progress. He has learned to give up something now for greater pleasure later—a basic trait of character.

If this child should be able to keep the nickel to the third week his victory would still be more glorious. Also he would have demonstrated that he could be entrusted safely each week with more than a nickel.

Building Responsibility

Very, very gradually extend the amount he regularly will receive each week to include a few necessities. But be sure not to extend this responsibility too fast. As soon as necessities like school supplies, car fare, Sunday school money, and the like are covered in the allowance let a certain amount, say nickel or dime, also be included which he can spend practically as he pleases. Some suggestions about its use might be wise, but coercion, except where he spends for positively harmful things, would be bad.

At the age of six, seven, eight, nine or later, depending on how far he has cultivated responsibility, have him keep careful account of his necessary expenditures at school and elsewhere.

From the record of his necessary expenditures for a week he and his parents should make up a definite budget itemizing each group of necessities. Then this total amount plus the small definite "free" item should make up his regular weekly allowance to be received on a regular day. If some unexpected legitimate need should rise during this or later weeks not accounted for in the budget his parents would supply it, of course. The child should know that he may be free to discuss the allowance with his parents at any time and that they would willingly revise it upward as the need of doing so becomes obvious.

A Budget Plan

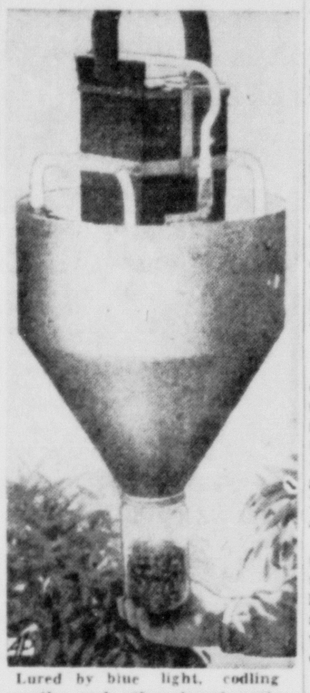
As the child begins this extensive plan of allowance he should, on receiving it place the necessary amounts in separate envelopes labeled "car fare," "lunch," and so on. Or he might prefer to build a bin for each item in a cardboard box.

As this child grows older and gains more success at responsibility with money his budgeted allowance might gradually take on a few items of clothing so that by the time he entered high school his allowance might cover all such items and be given in a check for a month instead of once a week.

Don't tamper with the allowance as a means of punishment. For an allowance to work well, it must be definite and regular; not possible if there were deductions for disciplinary purposes.

A list of books for parents on subjects including the use of money, and scores of other everyday problems, may be had by writing me at 235 E. 45th St., New York City, N. Y., enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Death Ray Passes Test in Orchards With Nightly Bag of Insect Pests



Lured by blue light, codling moths and other insect pests preying on central Washington orchards enter this "electrocution chamber and are killed by ultra-violet radiation. The partly-filled quart jar being removed represents one night's catch.

AP Feature Service

Seattle—Death rays may soon save money for central Washington orcardists. The victims are codling moths and other insect pests.

A good night's catch is a quart jar of between 4,000 and 5,000 of the insects, which prey on apple trees, mainstay of Washington's fruit industry.

The death ray machine is another invention of Prof. Frederick K. Kirsten of the University of Washington. He's better known in this region for his new-style pipe, his cycloidal propeller, and recently-announced new-style bed.

Lured By Blue Light

The Kirsten trap, electrically operated, lures the insects with a tube of blue light. Then, in a metal container, another tube kills the insects with ultra-violet radiation. They fall into a jar below. Similarly, prolonged exposure to X-rays would kill human beings, says Professor Kirscten.

All sorts of insects, possibly a tenth of them codling moths and the rest tomato moths, June bugs, lice and other night-flying pests, are caught. Bees, of the greatest value in pollenizing trees, are not endangered. They stay home nights.

One Trap To Forty Trees

One trap an acre, on which forty or more trees are set out, should be enough. The initial cost per trap would be about $75, he figures, and the operation cost about $10 a season.

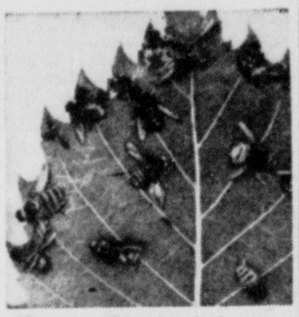
Elmer Kinyon, Naches orchardist, has had a trap in operation for two years and says his orchard is the "cleanest" in the vicinity.

Professor Kirsten says his work is simply that of an engineer in building the trap, and that he has little knowledge of orcharding or insect life.

"Possibly some helpful insects may be harmed or other problems arise, which only a period of years of experiments can determine," he says. "But at least the trap has possibilities.

"For one thing, other similar devices require about four times as much power to operate."

Nature Has Her Own Death Ray



Flies on this elm leaf were brought down by nature's own anti-aircraft battery, Empusa musicae, a gluey fungus that propels spores into the air. Flies hit by the spores adhere to the leaves that provide food for the fungus, which shoots more spores into the air to repeat the process. The fungus is being studied by the Virginia Tech biology department.

Japan Gets Manchoukuo, Manchoukuo Gets Yen

HSINKING, Manchoukuo (AP) — After nine years of intensive development, Japan is still pouring money into Manchoukuo, which used to be called "Japan's lifeline."

During 1940 Japan will advance yen 1,200,000,000 ($283,000,000) for continued development here, official reports said. Japan will provide further yen 100,000,000 ($24,000,000) in foreign exchange credits for purchases to be made abroad (outside the Japanese empire) during the year.

All Things To All People

"So you don't like our ideas? Well, write your own. Here's plenty of white space."

The first Republic of Spain existed from 1873 to 1875.

Chinese Think Whales Are Mine-Sweepers

HONGKONG, (AP)—Chinese residents of the British colony of Hongkong have their own theory why mines have been washed ashore there. Whales, they think, must have fouled the mooring cables and set the mines loose.

Several mine explosions have occurred on the shore. In one instance a whale was killed. Villagers in the district were quick to cut it up for food and oil, but the handful of Britons complained of the smell.

Fifteen Face Trial In Strike Riot

KENOVA, W. Va., Sept. 11 (AP) — Fifteen persons were arraigned today before Magistrate J. L. Malcolm on charges of conspiracy to assault in connection with a riot growing out of a strike at the Jeffery-Dewitt Insular Company's plant.

State police continued to patrol the picketed plant. An outbreak, which was attributed to friction between opposing unions, occurred last week, and three men were injured.

The Audit Bureau of Circulation was organized in 1914 to secure information concerning the circulation and distribution of publications.

"Women of the world will have to be part and parcel of the governments in which they live. I'd like to see them in defense-planning jobs of the government.

An 'Idea Woman'

Mrs. Sternberger says that since the beginning of the war World Peaceways "has intensified its campaign on every front."

An increasing number of letters has been sent to senators and congressmen and an Information Service, covering national and world issues, is sent to most of World Peaceways' membership (about 75,000). Members chip in from 25 cents to $500 apiece.

Mrs. Sternberger, born and educated in Cincinnati, has been executive director since 1932. She works like a dynamo—sings for a secretary, sends for a messenger boy, gives three different (but not contradictory) orders almost at once. She pops ideas as a cornpopper pops grains. When she gets one that stimulates her enough, she rushes to Washington to talk it over with a senator.

She attended the International Conference of American States at Lima, Peru, in 1938, and urged action on a resolution calling for an Inter-American Commission on Defense Planning. She attended the Havana Conference of American Foreign Ministers in July, 1940. Besides her work for World Peaceways, she writes monthly articles for South American papers and is Woman Editor of the Air (Station (WQXR) in a program touching political, economical and international subjects.

Mayor LaGuardia Out for Roosevelt

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—Mayor F. H. La Guardia announced his support of President Roosevelt tonight and said Senator George W. Norris (Ind-Neb) would serve as honorary chairman of "an independent committee for Roosevelt."

The mayor disclosed his position in a broadcast over NBC-WEAF, (6:15-6:30, EST) the time for which was paid for by the Democratic National Committee. A consistent supporter of New Deal policies, La Guardia recently was appointed by the president as chairman of the U. S. section of the joint American-Canadian defense board.

"I belong to no party," said Mayor La Guardia, who was elected to Congress in the past as both a Republican and a Socialist. "I do not like politicians. I want nothing from either party. I do love my country. I am concerned and worried over world conditions and our relations to them. I know that President Roosevelt's foreign policy and his preparedness plan are the only hope of keeping our country out of war. I enthusiastically approve of the social welfare program of the New Deal. I prefer Roosevelt with his known faults to Mr. Willkie with his unknown virtues."

How To Live on Seventeen Cents a Meal

The cost: 17 cents per person.

Lana Turner Wins Divorce from Shaw

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12 (AP)—Actress Lana Turner was granted a divorce from Band Leader Artie Shaw today after she testified he "literally flew into rages and left the house several times" without telling her when he would be back.

Miss Turner stated that because it was necessary for her to appear at her studio for work at 6 or 7 a. m., and frequently had to retire early, the band leader became enraged and upset.

"He accused me of being rude to his friends when I would have to retire early while they were at the house," she testified.

Shaw and Miss Turner, who at the time was reported engaged to another man, suddenly eloped to Las Vegas, Nev., Feb. 13. Previously they had worked in a picture together where her associates reported there frequently was discord between the couple.

Sat on History, Didn't Know It

SAXON, Switzerland (AP) — The owner of an old country manor house near the village of Saxon noticed that one corner of his home was settling slightly. Workmen called to strengthen the foundation, discovered that the corner rested on an ancient Gallo-Roman lead sarcophagus. It contained an ancient Gallo-Roman. The find delighted Swiss archaeouogists.

YOUR BEER and
OUR BREWERY

More and more, people are coming to look upon the NATIONAL BREWERY, as their brewery, because in more and more homes our beer is filling a definite place.

After all, there is nothing strange about this. Until very recent times, brewing and baking were done right within almost every well-ordered household. There was usually one among the womenfolk who was expert in both bread baking and beer brewing. In many ways, the two household arts touched on a common ground. The yeast developed in the beer was used in the making of the bread dough. The grains were often the same. Both called for immaculate cleanliness. Both responded to skill and care. The lord of the manor whose board boasted good bread and good beer was indeed a man of standing in the community. While to-day, the business of baking the good bread and brewing the sound beer has been largely removed from the home, still folks watch with care and pride over the quality of the bread and the beer which make the foundation for so many wholesome meals.

It does not take a family long to recognize honest brewing and sound worth in its table beer. Realizing this, we have been brewing our beer in such a way—of such ingredients—that more and more homes are enjoying NATIONAL BEER.

Women Will Be among Leaders In Finding Way Back to Peace

By ADELAIDE KERR
Ap Feature Service Writer

New York—Estelle Sternberger, executive director of World Peaceways, who is putting up a stiff battle for peace undaunted by war, believes that women are going to be leaders in bringing peace back to the world.

In the New York City office of the peace organization, Mrs. Sternberger—an energetic, brown-haired grandmother — leaned across her desk, and, in a crackling fire of words, told me why.

"First, peace means more to women. They are the ones who suffer from war.

Next, they have more time to think about things longer.

"Last, when they are stirred up about a thing, they do something about it — and there's plenty for them to do.

"It will depend on the women of the world to restore peace and sanity. Through their own initiative, daring and good sense, they are going to discover a way to bring it about.

Letters From Homes

But Mrs. Sternberger is quick to point out that the women must work with men. She has no feminist idea that women are going to bring about peace alone.

As executive director, Mrs. Sternberger guides World Peaceways' campaign through newspapers, magazines, radio and advertisements.

Because of her belief in the importance of women's work for peace, she spends a lot of her time hammering home what the woman with her hands in the sink can do.

"I get thousands of letters from women," she says. "Some of them read like this: 'I was sitting rocking my baby and I saw one of your ads. Do you think it presumptious of me to tell you what I think about peace?'

"I write back and tell those women to get to work—attend lecture courses, familiarize themselves and the people of their community with the issues of the day, study the laws and make up their minds what they think about them and why. Then I tell them to write the President and their congressmen.

Rowe Hurls Detroit to Win Over Yankees

Scatters Eleven Hits To Score 6-3 In Series Opener

Schoolboy Continues His Mound Comeback To Hold Lead

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (AP)—Baseball's grandest pitching comeback of the year continued today when big Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe hurled the first-place Detroit Tigers to a 6 to 3 victory over the New York Yankees.

The win, fourteenth of the season for Rowe, enabled the Tigers to stay three percentage points and a half-game upon the second-place Cleveland Indians, who trimmed the Boston Red Sox.

A Yankee nemesis in his hey-dey, Rowe lacked the speed of the Tigers' pennant winning years of 1934 and 1935, but he used what stuff he did have to remarkable advantage. The Yanks combed him for 11 hits, two more than Detroit obtained, but left 11 runners stranded on the bases.

In winning the seventh game in their last eight straights, the Tigers benefited from four unearned runs scored in the eighth inning after second baseman Joe Gordon threw a double play ball into the New York dugout. Four singles and an intentional walk followed, sewing up the game and dropping the Yankees two full games behind Detroit.

Nine Lettermen on Terrapins First String

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 12 (AP)—Nine lettermen, a 1939 reserve and one sophomore compose the tentative first-string of the University of Maryland's 1940 football team.

The tentative second team lines up as follows:

Dwyer, Ulman, Lumsden and Widener are lettermen. J. Mueller and Max Hunt are Juniors. Vincent, Conrad, Dunlap, Gilmore and Hoopengardner are sophomores. Jarmoska is a junior college graduate from Dickinson Seminary and is eligible for varsity football.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Sept. 12—Late last year the board of governors of the Winged Foot Golf Club, having been duly notified the club had been awarded the 1940 national amateur tournament, met in solemn session. After the glances had ceased roving from face to face they settled on the rugged, honest mug of Arthur F. Lynch. President John H. Forsman broke the silence.

"Lynchie," he said, "this is your baby."

Just like that Lynchie had been named tournament chairman, a thankless and payless job that calls for the executive ability of a business tycoon, the diplomacy of a man caught with four aces, and the faculty for keeping more details on his mind than an information clerk.

It also meant that the stocky 40-year-old wouldn't have a chance to play himself. He qualified for the amateur in 1935 and 1938, and several times has had sub-par scores on the west course at Winged Foot.

Nevertheless, he rolled up his sleeves, cleared his brow for a new crop of worry wrinkles, and went to it.

"Frankly," he says, "I didn't look forward to it with much enthusiasm, but as I got into it I liked it better and better, and it's been more fun than playing in the tournament.

"You know, the U. S. G. A. has the most remarkable book you ever saw on the way to conduct a tournament. Every detail, from the size of the press tables and scoreboards to the size of the caddies' shoes is included. I'd keep calling up Joe Dey, the executive secretary to ask him something, and he'd always sing: 'It's in the book,' and sure enough it was."

He's done a great job of a great job, a job which can better be appreciated when it is considered the indirect control of about 700 employes is just another detail. These include about 30 cops, but that seems to be an error. Every time you turn around you scratch your nose on a shield. There are 120 marshalls, who also must be twins.

Lynch admits the advance ticket sale was a bust chiefly because a metropolitan district doesn't dig in to support such an event as a smaller community would.

With all its trials, it's been a great experience he agrees. And if anybody wants another such 110-acre job done so that everyone will be satisfied he can call on little Arthur. He can do everything but get the pars for the boys, and in a pinch he can do that.

Cuts Navy Squad

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 12 (AP)—Head Coach Emery (Swede) Larson cut his Navy varsity squad today and ordered the first scrimmage of the season.

The "A" squad of 80 players was reduced to three teams and an extra backfield. All of last year's regulars remained on the varsity squad. Those failing to make the grade—including 4 to 14 players up from the 1939 plebe team—joined the "B" squad.

Frostburg Wins Way to Finals of Tournament 11-2

Stetz Fans 12--Play Winners of Pittsburgh and Birmingham Tilt

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 12 (AP)—The Frostburg, Md., Legionnaires eliminated Barberton, O., from the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament today in a weird 11-2 contest which saw the winners score six runs in the opening inning on a single hit.

The victory narrowed the tourney field to Frostburg, Pittsburgh, and Birmingham, with the latter pair playing tonight.

Pete Joyce started for Barberton and was wild as a March hare. Johnny Pavkov, one of the tournament heroes before today, replaced him and had equal trouble locating the plate. Mimi Delauro came in and finally halted the scoring, but not until six runners had tallied on a lone scratch hit.

Danny Drew hammered one of Delauro's fast balls into the right field bleachers in the second for his team's seventh run.

The rest of the game was anticlimax, but Single gave Rarberton followers a moment of hope with a triple against the 407-foot centerfield in the fourth to score Watters, who had walked.

Stanley Stetz went the route for the winners working easily behind his big lead, and set 12 Barberton batters down on strike outs.

Fleming will pitch for Frostburg in the finals.

White Sox Climb Into Fourth Place

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP)—Chicago's White Sox climbed into a fourth place tie with Boston today by sweeping a double header from the Philadelphia Athletics 1 to 0 and 4 to 3, while the Red Sox lost to Cleveland.

Bill Dietrich's four hit pitching gave Chicago the opener while Ken Silvestri's pinch home run with one on in the ninth inning snared the second.

Ed Smith and Johnny Babich hooked up in a pitching duel in the nightcap with Babich holding a 3-2 lead until Silvestri, batting for Bob Kennedy, drove out his homer. Mike Kreevich, who had doubled, scored ahead of Silvestri. It was the 13th victory against nine defeats for Smith, who gave up five hits.

Softball Champions Are First To Repeat

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (AP)—For the first time in the history of the Amateur Softball Association of America, the world's softball championship has gone back into the hands of a former winner in the men's division.

The two-time champions are the Rochester (N. Y.) Kodak Parks, victors by a 1-0 count over the South Bend (Ind.) Bendix Brakes Tuesday night. The Kodak Parks previously won the title in 1936 at Chicago.

Harold (Shifty) Gears, Rochester hurler who had pitched three of the five other Kodak victories during the tournament, held South Bend to three hits and scored the winning run himself on Joe Farrell's sixth-inning single.

The game-winning single was the only hit off Sam Corgan, Bendix pitcher, but it came with Gears and Leo Gallagher on base as a result of walks.

In the women's division, the Phoenix (Ariz.) Ramblers had easy work of it as they routed the Koch Furnitures of Cleveland, 10 to 3, for their world title. The Cleveland team committed eight errors.

Harder's Pitching Keeps Indians in Pennant Fight 8-1

Veteran Allows Boston Only Three Hits in Masterpiece

CLEVELAND, Sept. 12 (AP)—Veteran Mel Harder flung a three-hit pitching masterpiece at the failing Boston Red Sox today for a top-heavy 8 to 1 triumph which kept the Cleveland Indians a half-game behind league-leading Detroit.

The hit-hungry Indians found the Red Sox pitching posse to their liking, teeing off on Fritz Ostermueller and Emerson Dickman for a fourth inning outburst which produced seven runs.

The Indians picked up a run in the second on Beau Bell's single and Dominic DiMaggio's muff of Ray Mack's liner to center, but reserved the fireworks for the fourth.

Lou Boudreau opened by drawing a walk from Ostermueller. Bell grounded out, advancing Boudreau to second. Cleveland followed with six straight hits, Ken Keltner singled Boudreau home and Mack singled Keltner to third. Frankie Pytlak also singled, Keltner scoring and Mack reaching third.

Harder lined a double, Mack scoring.

Ben Chapman singled the first pitch, scoring Pytlak, and Roy Weatherly singled to plate Harder. Jeff Heath struck out but with Boudreau up for the second time Chapman and Weatherly worked a double steal, Chapman scoring and Weatherly landing at second. Boudreau singled and Weatherly tallied the seventh run of the inning. Bell ended it by forcing Boudreau.

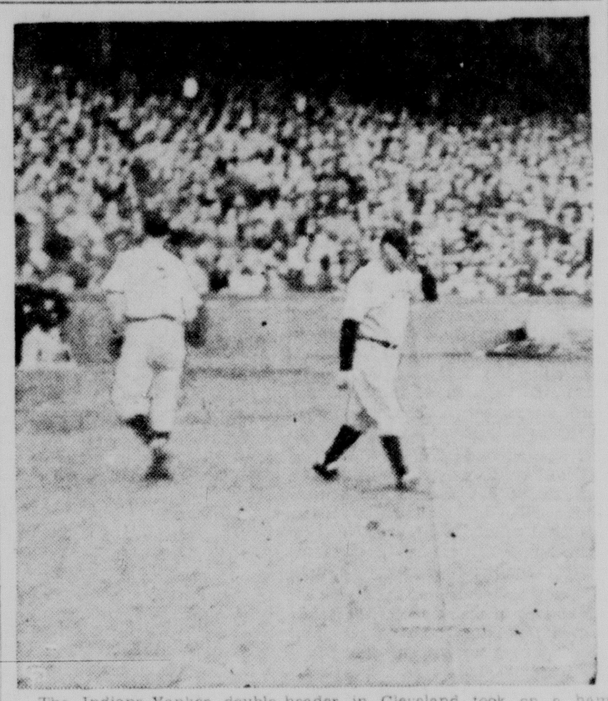
YANKS GET RIPE FRUIT PELTING



The Indians-Yankee double-header in Cleveland took on a ham vaudeville air when Cleveland fans repeatedly hurled overripe fruit and vegetables at the New York players. Baseball observers said it was a retaliatory measure for the abuse the Indians received recently in New York. Coach Art Fletcher of the Yanks is seen sidestepping as a couple of very ripe tomatoes wing over his head. Note lemons and vegetables scattered on ground about him.

RAY BILLOWS ELIMINATES WARD IN AMATEUR TOURNEY

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Sept. 12 (AP)—Ray Billows, a year ago little more than a punching bag for the National Amateur golf champions, uncorked a knockout blow of his own today.

Matched with titleholder Marvin (Bud) Ward in the quarter final round of the 44th annual championship at the Winged Foot club today, the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) printer had his man four down in the first six holes and clung to that margin to ship the Spokane ace to the sidelines, 4 and 3.

It was ample revenge for Ray's 7 and 5 trouncing by Ward in the 1939 final at Chicago and sent the deliberate New Yorker into tomorrow's 36-hole semi-finals against William B. (Duff) McCullough, Jr., of Philadelphia.

It was a tough day for ex-champions, and Billows and McCullough were the ones to make it so. While Ray was scoring what he labelled a victory for the low of averages, McCullough, 32-year old darkhorse who is a tough match player if no sensational medal scorer, was turning in a 5 and 4 triumph over lean, lanky Johnny Fischer, the lawyer from Cincinnati who won at Garden City in 1936.

In the morning's third round, McCullough disposed of another ex-champ, Willie Turnesa by 3 and 2. This was, if possible, even more of a surprise, since Turnesa knows the Winged Foot course well and plays it accordingly.

In the upper half of the draw, Wilford Wehrle of Chicago and medalist Dick Chapman of Winged Foot were turning in the low-scoring rounds. Chapman was six under par for 29 holes and Wehrle two under for the same distance as they won their matches by the same scores: 5 and 4 for Wehrle over Tom Sheehan, and Chapman over Maurice McCarthy, Jr., in the morning; 6 and 5 for Wehrle over 39-year old George Dawson, and Chapman over Metropolitan champion Johnny Burke in the afternoon.

But the day's big one was Ward's defeat. The champion, a good enough golfer to miss winning the 1939 National Open by only two strokes, got one bay round out of his system today and had the misfortune to do it in an 18-hole match, where such things generally are disastrous. His drives were going off line, and his irons weren't finding the greens. The backbreaker finally came on the 14th, where Billows laid him a stymie and Ward, trying to jump it, knocked Ray's ball into the hole.

Cincinnati Downs Giants 9-4 To End N. Y. Flag Chances

Gene Thompson Hangs Up 15th Win--Radcliffe Leads Attack

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, cruising smoothly toward another National League pennant, overpowered the New York Giants 9 to 4 today and eliminated them mathematically from the championship contention.

Gene Thompson pitched against ball for the first eight innings and managed to outlast a New York rally in the ninth when the Giants scored all their runs on five hits, one of them Mel Ott's 15th home run of the year. It was Thompson's 15th triumph and fifth over the Giants.

Jim Ripple, former Terryman, led the Reds' 13-hit assault on Bill Lohrman and Rookie Bob Carpenter, getting two doubles and a single for a perfect day at bat. He also walked twice and drove in three runs.

The outcome left the Giants 21 games behind the Reds with 19 contests to play.

Scatters Eleven Hits To Score 6-3 In Series Opener

Schoolboy Continues His Mound Comeback To Hold Lead

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (AP)—Baseball's grandest pitching comeback of the year continued today when big Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe hurled the first-place Detroit Tigers to a 6 to 3 victory over the New York Yankees.

The win, fourteenth of the season for Rowe, enabled the Tigers to stay three percentage points and a half-game upon the second-place Cleveland Indians, who trimmed the Boston Red Sox.

A Yankee nemesis in his hey-dey, Rowe lacked the speed of the Tigers' pennant winning years of 1934 and 1935, but he used what stuff he did have to remarkable advantage. The Yanks combed him for 11 hits, two more than Detroit obtained, but left 11 runners stranded on the bases.

In winning the seventh game in their last eight straights, the Tigers benefited from four unearned runs scored in the eighth inning after second baseman Joe Gordon threw a double play ball into the New York dugout. Four singles and an intentional walk followed, sewing up the game and dropping the Yankees two full games behind Detroit.

Before the big eighth the Tigers fought an uphill battle against Atley Donald, who yielded only five hits before the winning splurge.

Nine Lettermen on Terrapins First String

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 12 (AP)—Nine lettermen, a 1939 reserve and one sophomore compose the tentative first-string of the University of Maryland's 1940 football team.

Shockey, a 200-pounder, is the lone Sophomore. Blazek was a reserve last year, relieving Smith, who was converted into a back. The others all are lettermen.

The tentative second team lines up as follows:

Dwyer, Ulman, Lumsden and Widener are lettermen. J. Mueller and Max Hunt are Juniors. Vincent, Conrad, Dunlap, Gilmore and Hoopengardner are sophomores. Jarmoska is a junior college graduate from Dickinson Seminary and is eligible for varsity football.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Sept. 12—Late last year the board of governors of the Winged Foot Golf Club, having been duly notified the club had been awarded the 1940 national amateur tournament, met in solemn session. After the glances had ceased roving from face to face they settled on the rugged, honest mug of Arthur F. Lynch. President John H. Forsman broke the silence.

"Lynchie," he said, "this is your baby."

Just like that Lynchie had been named tournament chairman, a thankless and payless job that calls for the executive ability of a business tycoon, the diplomacy of a man caught with four aces, and the faculty for keeping more details on his mind than an information clerk.

It also meant that the stocky 40-year-old wouldn't have a chance to play himself. He qualified for the amateur in 1935 and 1938, and several times has had sub-par scores on the west course at Winged Foot.

Nevertheless, he rolled up his sleeves, cleared his brow for a new crop of worry wrinkles, and went to it.

"Frankly," he says, "I didn't look forward to it with much enthusiasm, but as I got into it I liked it better and better, and it's been more fun than playing in the tournament.

"You know, the U. S. G. A. has the most remarkable book you ever saw on the way to conduct a tournament. Every detail, from the size of the press tables and scoreboards to the size of the caddies' shoes is included. I'd keep calling up Joe Dey, the executive secretary to ask him something, and he'd always sing: 'It's in the book,' and sure enough it was."

He's done a great job of a great job, a job which can better be appreciated when it is considered the indirect control of about 700 employes is just another detail. These include about 30 cops, but that seems to be an error. Every time you turn around you scratch your nose on a shield. There are 120 marshalls, who also must be twins.

Lynch admits the advance ticket sale was a bust chiefly because a metropolitan district doesn't dig in to support such an event as a smaller community would.

The tournament is approaching the end now, and Lynch is even taking a little nourishment.

With all its trials, it's been a great experience he agrees. And if anybody wants another such 110-acre job done so that everyone will be satisfied he can call on little Arthur. He can do everything but get the pars for the boys, and in a pinch he can do that.

Cuts Navy Squad

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 12 (AP)—Head Coach Emery (Swede) Larson cut his Navy varsity squad today and ordered the first scrimmage of the season.

The "A" squad of 80 players was reduced to three teams and an extra backfield. All of last year's regulars remained on the varsity squad. Those failing to make the grade—including 4 to 14 players up from the 1939 plebe team—joined the "B" squad.

The scrimmage today as the first since practice began Sept. 7.

Frostburg Wins Way to Finals of Tournament 11-2

Stetz Fans 12--Play Winners of Pittsburgh and Birmingham Tilt

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 12 (AP)—The Frostburg, Md., Legionnaires eliminated Barberton, O., from the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament today in a weird 11-2 contest which saw the winners score six runs in the opening inning on a single hit.

The victory narrowed the tourney field to Frostburg, Pittsburgh, and Birmingham, with the latter pair playing tonight.

Pete Joyce started for Barberton and was wild as a March hare. Johnny Pavkov, one of the tournament heroes before today, replaced him and had equal trouble locating the plate. Mimi Delauro came in and finally halted the scoring, but not until six runners had tallied on a lone scratch hit.

Danny Drew hammered one of Delauro's fast balls into the right field bleachers in the second for his team's seventh run.

The rest of the game was anticlimax, but Single gave Rarberton followers a moment of hope with a triple against the 407-foot centerfield in the fourth to score Watters, who had walked.

Stanley Stetz went the route for the winners working easily behind his big lead, and set 12 Barberton batters down on strike outs.

Fleming will pitch for Frostburg in the finals.

Cleveland, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians have purchased First Baseman Elmer Sidlo from Wilkes-Barre, an Eastern League affiliate, Vice-President C. C. Slapnicka said today.

The infielder, who played with Flint of the Michigan State circuit during the season just ended, will finish out the year with the Tribe. His batting average is well above the .300 mark.

White Sox Climb Into Fourth Place

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP)—Chicago's White Sox climbed into a fourth place tie with Boston today by sweeping a double header from the Philadelphia Athletics 1 to 0 and 4 to 3, while the Red Sox lost to Cleveland.

Bill Dietrich's four hit pitching gave Chicago the opener while Ken Silvestri's pinch home run with one on in the ninth inning snared the second.

Ed Smith and Johnny Babich hooked up in a pitching duel in the nightcap with Babich holding a 3-2 lead until Silvestri, batting for Bob Kennedy, drove out his homer. Mike Kreevich, who had doubled, scored ahead of Silvestri. It was the 13th victory against nine defeats for Smith, who gave up five hits.

Softball Champions Are First To Repeat

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (AP)—For the first time in the history of the Amateur Softball Association of America, the world's softball championship has gone back into the hands of a former winner in the men's division.

The two-time champions are the Rochester (N. Y.) Kodak Parks, victors by a 1-0 count over the South Bend (Ind.) Bendix Brakes Tuesday night. The Kodak Parks previously won the title in 1936 at Chicago.

Harold (Shifty) Gears, Rochester hurler who had pitched three of the five other Kodak victories during the tournament, held South Bend to three hits and scored the winning run himself on Joe Farrell's sixth-inning single.

The game-winning single was the only hit off Sam Corgan, Bendix pitcher, but it came with Gears and Leo Gallagher on base as a result of walks.

In the women's division, the Phoenix (Ariz.) Ramblers had easy work of it as they routed the Koch Furnitures of Cleveland, 10 to 3, for their world title. The Cleveland team committed eight errors.

Bees Plan To Train At San Antonio, Tex.

Boston, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Boston Bees baseball club will train next spring at San Antonio, Tex.—a shift from Bradenton, Fla., where it practiced the past two seasons. Secretary John Quinn of the Bees said the club and the St. Louis Browns, who also will train at San Antonio, would play several exhibition games there and would travel east together after breaking camp.

Harder's Pitching Keeps Indians in Pennant Fight 8-1

Veteran Allows Boston Only Three Hits in Masterpiece

CLEVELAND, Sept. 12 (AP)—Veteran Mel Harder flung a three-hit pitching masterpiece at the failing Boston Red Sox today for a top-heavy 8 to 1 triumph which kept the Cleveland Indians a half-game behind league-leading Detroit.

The hit-hungry Indians found the Red Sox pitching posse to their liking, teeing off on Fritz Ostermueller and Emerson Dickman for a fourth inning outburst which produced seven runs.

The Indians picked up a run in the second on Beau Bell's single and Dominic DiMaggio's muff of Ray Mack's liner to center, but reserved the fireworks for the fourth.

Lou Boudreau opened by drawing a walk from Ostermueller. Bell grounded out, advancing Boudreau to second. Cleveland followed with six straight hits, Ken Keltner singled Boudreau home and Mack singled Keltner to third. Frankie Pytlak also singled, Keltner scoring and Mack reaching third.

Harder lined a double, Mack scoring.

Ben Chapman singled the first pitch, scoring Pytlak, and Roy Weatherly singled to plate Harder. Jeff Heath struck out but with Boudreau up for the second time Chapman and Weatherly worked a double steal, Chapman scoring and Weatherly landing at second. Boudreau singled and Weatherly tallied the seventh run of the inning. Bell ended it by forcing Boudreau.

YANKS GET RIPE FRUIT PELTING

The Indians-Yankee double-header in Cleveland took on a haiu vaudeville air when Cleveland fans repeatedly hurled overripe fruit and vegetables at the New York players. Baseball observers said it was a retaliatory measure for the abuse the Indians received recently in New York. Coach Art Fletcher of the Yanks is seen sidestepping as a couple of very ripe tomatoes wing over his head. Note lemons and vegetables scattered on ground about him.

RAY BILLOWS ELIMINATES WARD IN AMATEUR TOURNEY

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Sept. 12 (AP)—Ray Billows, a year ago little more than a punching bag for the National Amateur golf champions, uncorked a knockout blow of his own today.

Matched with titleholder Marvin (Bud) Ward in the quarter final round of the 44th annual championship at the Winged Foot club today, the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) printer had his man four down in the first six holes and clung to that margin to ship the Spokane ace to the sidelines, 4 and 3.

It was ample revenge for Ray's 7 and 5 trouncing by Ward in the 1939 final at Chicago and sent the deliberate New Yorker into tomorrow's 36-hole semi-finals against William B. (Duff) McCullough, Jr., of Philadelphia.

It was a tough day for ex-champions, and Billows and McCullough were the ones to make it so. While Ray was scoring what he labelled a victory for the low of averages, McCullough, 32-year old darkhorse who is a tough match player if no sensational medal scorer, was turning in a 5 and 4 triumph over lean, lanky Johnny Fischer, the lawyer from Cincinnati who won at Garden City in 1936.

In the morning's third round, McCullough disposed of another ex-champ, Willie Turnesa by 3 and 2. This was, if possible, even more of a surprise, since Turnesa knows the Winged Foot course well and plays it accordingly.

In the upper half of the draw, Wilford Wehrle of Chicago and medalist Dick Chapman of Winged Foot were turning in the low-scoring rounds. Chapman was six under par for 29 holes and Wehrle two under for the same distance as they won their matches by the same scores: 5 and 4 for Wehrle over Tom Sheehan, and Chapman over Maurice McCarthy, Jr., in the morning; 6 and 5 for Wehrle over 39-year old George Dawson, and Chapman over Metropolitan champion Johnny Burke in the afternoon.

But the day's big one was Ward's defeat. The champion, a good enough golfer to miss winning the 1939 National Open by only two strokes, got one bay round out of his system today and had the misfortune to do it in an 18-hole match, where such things generally are disastrous. His drives were going off line, and his irons weren't finding the greens. The backbreaker finally came on the 14th, where Billows laid him a stymie and Ward trying to jump it, knocked Ray's ball into the hole.

Cincinnati Downs Giants 9-4 To End N. Y. Flag Chances

Gene Thompson Hangs Up 15th Win--Radcliffe Leads Attack

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, cruising smoothly toward another National League pennant, overpowered the New York Giants 9 to 4 today and eliminated them mathematically from the championship contention.

Gene Thompson pitched against ball for the first eight innings and managed to outlast a New York rally in the ninth when the Giants scored all their runs on five hits, one of them Mel Ott's 15th home run of the year. It was Thompson's 15th triumph and fifth over the Giants.

Jim Ripple, former Terryman, led the Reds' 13-hit assault on Bill Lohrman and Rookie Bob Carpenter, getting two doubles and a single for a perfect day at bat. He also walked twice and drove in three runs.

The outcome left the Giants 21 games behind the Reds with 19 contests to play.

Allegany Host to Ridgeley Eleven Tonight

Play at Stadium In Opening Game Of Local Season

Fort Hill To Entertain Keyser High Here Tomorrow

With the schedules tougher than usual and with a grand total of 21 games to be played here, Cumberland's 1940 scholastic football whirl will get under way this evening.

Ringing up the curtain will be Allegany High's battle with Ridgeley High's eleven at the Fort Hill Stadium tonight. Tomorrow night the Fort Hill Sentinels will go into action on their home gridiron, tangling with the Keyser High Golden Tornado.

Coach Herman Ball and his West Siders face the task of defending both the Cumberland Valley Athletic League and city championships. The Campers have captured the C. V. A. L. bunting for the past two years and the city diadem for the last four.

Ball has had plenty of work to do these past few weeks. Although his line problem could be a lot worse, the backfield is a question mark due to the graduation of all the 1939 regular ball-toters last Spring.

Campers Will Miss Gaffney

Especially missed will be husky Jim Gaffney, who was a standout during all his three years as a regular. Ball also has to find replacements for Tommy Mont, Joe Gulbronson, Lou Bell and Roland Hamilton, all first-string backs last fall.

Bill Yoder, a guard in 1939, has been switched to the backfield where he will fill the fullbacks' shoes. Tommy Rudd, halfback; Bill Chandlee, quarterback, and Bill James, halfback, will probably be Allegany's regular backfield starters. Rudd and Chandlee, both seniors, earned letters last year while James, a junior, was on the jayvee squad last season.

Donald Hillock, regular tackle, and Vernon Miller, regular end last year, are standouts on the line. Fred Sullivan, an end, earned a letter last fall. The other line posts will be filled by boys with some varsity or jayvee experience.

Last year, Allegany won eight of ten battles and piled up 202 points to 33 for teams played. The Campers' setbacks were to Westmont High of Johnstown 7-6 and to Charles Town 7-0. Victories were registered over the West Virginia Deaf School of Romney, Boswell, Hagerstown, Handley, LaSalle, Martinsburg, Keyser and Fort Hill.

Things have also been humming at Fort Hill with the Sentinels hard at work under the direction of Coach Johnny Long, who expects to place a team on the field just as good if not better than last year's combination which won eight of ten tussles, dropping only to Charles Town and Allegany. The Scarlet and White badly outplayed Charles Town but went down 21-20.

Long announced today that the game would be refereed by John Blough with John McDonald as umpire and Mel Henry as head linesman. The Sentinels, who have both red and white jerseys at their disposal, will probably wear white.

Ridgeley, according to Coach Bill Hahn, will be out to shoot the works against Allegany. The tutor at the nearby school said today that several hot battles are raging for starting positions.

Carr, Bennett and Hardman are outstanding ends while Carter, Lindsay and Spriggs are leading in the fight for tackle jobs. At center will be Thomas or Kinsman while guards are Kinsman, Titchnell and J. Bean.

The backfield lineup has proven a puzzler for Hahn with Lookabaugh, Payne, Zimmerman, Washabaugh, Robinson and Adams all trying hard for starting berths.

Casey Starting Third Season as Piedmont Coach

Keyser, Ridgeley and Elk Garden Have New Grid Mentors

Keyser, W. Va., Sept. 12.—Mineral county high schools, many of which are concentrating on preparations to open the 1940 football season, can well be proud of the men who will direct their athletic programs.

In John Casey of Piedmont High, John Shelton of Keyser High, Bill Hahn of Ridgeley High, Homer Brooks of Elk Garden High and John Foley of Fort Ashby High, Mineral county has a group of the finest and best-trained coaches in West Virginia.

Casey is starting his third year at Piedmont where he succeeded Hahn when the latter went to Spencer. He has been turning out good football and basketball teams consistently. A former Keyser High, Marshall College and Shepherd College athlete, Casey starred in football, basketball and baseball.

Shelton, former Davis and Elkins College star and basketball coach at Elk Garden High last year—his first out of college—will make his debut as a football mentor when his Keyser High Golden Tornado eleven opposes the Fort Hill High Sentinels here Saturday night. While at D. and E., he stood out on the court and gridiron.

Bill Hahn, taking over at Ridgeley this fall after two years at Spencer High, will direct the Ridgeleyites in their grid opener against Allegany High here tomorrow night. A former Parsons High and Shepherd College athlete, Hahn spent an earlier term at Piedmont High.

Brooks, ex-Allegany High, Potomac State and West Virginia University basketball luminary, is expected to produce a strong court squad at Elk Garden this winter. Elk Garden won't be represented in the district football picture.

Foley, who hails from Luke, Md., graduated last June from Davis and Elkins where he was an outstanding football lineman. He is expected to start an interscholastic sports program at Fort Ashby High, which will offer a full high school schedule this year for the first time. No plans have been announced for football but Fort Ashby probably will have basketball and baseball outfits.

Rowlesburg Gridmen Facing Seven Games

ROWLESBURG, W. Va., Sept. 12—Rowlesburg High School has scheduled seven opponents for its grid team during the coming season, according to an announcement by Athletic Director Don W. Eicher, who is continuing efforts to book a Pennsylvania high school eleven for Friday or Saturday, October 4 or 5.

Two Pennsylvania schools have already been scheduled by the West Virginians. Rowlesburg opens the season September 13 under the lights at German Township and ends its campaign with another Pennsylvania school, Boswell, November 1.

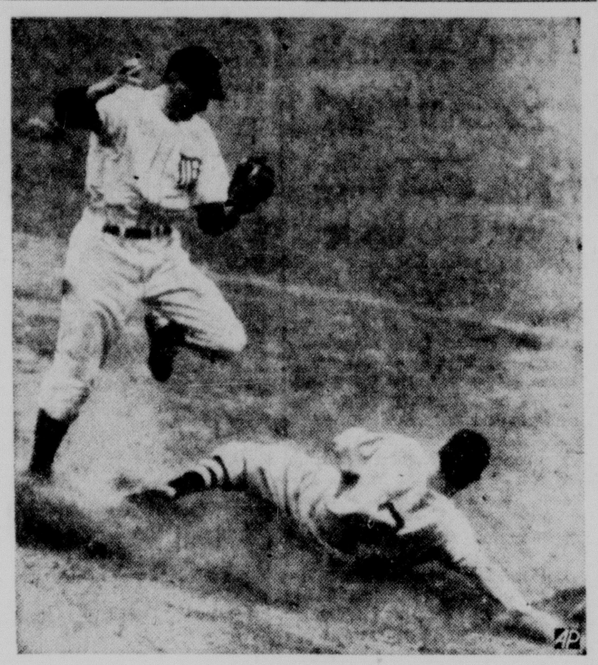
In addition to serving as athletic director Eicher is also head grid mentor at Rowlesburg and is starting his fourth year.

Twenty-two candidates reported to Coach Eicher and received equipment and were assigned lockers.

The 1940 schedule follows:

Sept. 13—German Twp., (Pa.), away.
Sept. 20—Prunytown, home.
Sept. 27—Terra Alta, home.
Oct. 4—Open date.
Oct. 11—Masontown (W. Va.), away.
Oct. 18—Thomas, home.
Oct. 25—Kingwood, home.
Nov. 1—Boswell (Pa.), away.

TIGERS BEAT BOSTON, LEAD LEAGUE



Dominic DiMaggio (7) beat Tiger Catcher Billy Sullivan's high throw when he stole second in the Detroit-Boston fourth inning at Detroit but the Red Sox outfielder overslid the bag, giving Charlie Gehringer (in air) time to bring the ball down for the out. The Tigers defeated the Bean City boys 11 to 7 and vaulted back into first place a half-game and four percentage points up on Cleveland and a full game and seven percentage points on the champion Yankees.

Boston Bees Put on Double Slugfests

BOSTON, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Boston Bees unleashed their heaviest batting punch of the season today and broke a four-game losing streak by sweeping a doubleheader from the St. Louis Cardinals, 17-7 and 6-1.

The Bees slugged five Cardinals' pitchers for a total of 36 hits and 42 bases during the double bill, and in the opening slugfest they batted around in four innings.

Clinching the opener by belting Bob Bowman, Hulbert Lanier and Carl Doyle for nine runs with their second and third inning barrages, the Bees wound up with a total of 21 safe hits.

The nightcap, which provided Bill Posedel with his 12th win of the season, was a tight affair until the eighth, when the Bees pulled it out by combing Mort Cooper for five hits and four runs.

Rookies Clash in Giants-Steelers Grid Tilt Sunday

Outcome of Game at Forbes Field May Depend on Their Play

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 12 — The outcome of Sunday's football game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the New York Giants at Forbes Field here may depend on three of the National Football League's outstanding rookies. Two of the neophytes are enrolled with the local professional aggregation; the other performs under the banner of Tim Mara's Giants.

Coach Walter A. Kiesling, of the Steelers, is practically set on starting freshmen Merlyn Condit and George Klick at the left halfback spots, respectively. Condit, ex-Carnegie Tech halfback who little more than a week ago dashed 94 brilliant yards against the Giants while playing with the Eastern College All-Stars in the annual charity meeting of the two groups, has flashed unusual promise in practice drills this week, and if he can display the same calibre of gridwork in his second entanglement with the Giants, the Steelers can count themselves as practically returned the winner.

Was on All-Star Squad

Klick, lately of Bucknell University, reported to the locals as a fullback, but was moved to the right halfback position when he gave an exhibition of forward passing in pre-season drills that was almost the equal of the Steelers' famed Billy Patterson. He is a runner of extraordinary power, and has been compared to the immortal Bronko Nagurski by no less an authority than Steeler Mentor Kiesling. Like Condit he was a member of the 1940 Eastern College All-Star squad.

"Bounding Boyd" Brumbaugh at fullback and "Hammering Hank" Bruder, the most devastating blocker in the league, in the quarterback slot round out the starting backfield. The kicking duties while this quartet is in the line-up will be handled coincidentally enough by Bucknell's George Klick.

The Giants' recruit, who is expected to play a large part in Sunday's game is Kay Eakin, graduated last June from the University of Arkansas. Eakin was the leading passer in the Southwest Conference last year, and is counted on by the Giant coaching staff to fill the hole left by the retirement of the great Ed Danowski who topped the National League's passers last season.

Eakin orginally belonged to the Steelers by virtue of the 1939 draft, but was traded to the Giants.

WINGED FOOT G. C., MAMARONECK, N. Y. — Old-timers at Winged Foot still believe Jesse Guilford, the Boston Siege Gun, was about as long a hitter as golf has ever known. They are thinking of the big, raw kid who came down from Manchester, N. H., 26 years ago, back in 1914.

Guilford had a full swing in those days, from heel to heel, a complete circle. The galleries always made a rush for the tee when the Siege Gun was in action. On one occasion they say he carried the ditch on the first hole at Ekwanok, measured at 308 yards from the tee.

"Jesse was about as long then as anyone could be," Francis Ouimet says. "He was terrific until he cut down his swing."

Walter Travis said to me one day at Ekwanok, "Guilford has the only perfect complete swing I've ever seen."

The struggle to qualify for match play is always loaded with jitters, especially for those above 75 in the first round. They know they can't afford to do any more skidding. Even such stars as Ouimet, Evans, Guilford, Sweetser, Tolley, Wethered, Bob Gardner—all champions in their prime—have known the thud of dropping out.

Back at Baltusrol around 1927, Gardner had the ghastly experience of taking a 12 on the first hole. He was practically out of the tournament before he reached the second tee.

At Merion I saw Chick Evans blow a one-foot putt in the semi-darkness, to prevent him slipping in under wire.

Few champions have been able to defend their titles a year later. In the last twenty-five years only Bobby Jones and Lawson Little have been able to make it two in a row. This shows the heavy odds that confront Bud Ward, the present toga wearer.

These Winged Foot bunkers are full of nightmares. Many of them are cut well into the green's edge, and many of them are quite deep. Also, there is often only a fairly small green to hit on an explosion shot.

I still recall the eighth hole. Up to this point Bobby Jones was running away from the field in the 1929 National Open. After a fine drive here his second shot, a 4 iron, kicked off to the right into a guarding trap. His niblick recovery struck the green and then slipped over into another trap. His second niblick returned the ball to the trap he had just left. Here he was playing 5 and still trapped.

He had a tough time getting his 7. If it can happen to the Jones of 1929 it can happen to anyone.

There are practically no breathing spots at Winged Foot. Almost any hole on the course can throw you into sudden panic. The short holes are long and closely guarded. They will wreck more than a few deserving young men hoping to qualify and scramble into match play.

Middle Atlantic Pro Golf Tourney Carded

RICHMOND, Sept. 12 (AP) — The annual golf tournament of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association will be held at the Glenwood Golf Club here on Saturday and Sunday October 4 and 5.

Announcement of plans to hold the tournament called off last spring during a squabble was made jointly by Clyde Pearsall, manager of the Glenwood Club, and Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, president of the Mid-Atlantic association.

The tournament here will be open to all pros and amateurs but the association plans to hold a closed tourney within the Open to pick its annual champion in this manner.

The event will be a 72-hole medal play affair with 36 holes Saturday and the final 36 on Sunday.

Allegany Host to Ridgeley Eleven Tonight

Play at Stadium In Opening Game Of Local Season

Fort Hill To Entertain Keyser High Here Tomorrow

With the schedules tougher than usual and with a grand total of 21 games to be played here, Cumberland's 1940 scholastic football whirl will get under way this evening.

Ringing up the curtain will be Allegany High's battle with Ridgeley High's eleven at the Fort Hill Stadium tonight. Tomorrow night the Fort Hill Sentinels will go into action on their home gridiron, tangling with the Keyser High Golden Tornado.

Coach Herman Ball and his West Siders face the task of defending both the Cumberland Valley Athletic League and city championships. The Campers have captured the C. V. A. L. bunting for the past two years and the city diadem for the last four.

Ball has had plenty of work to do these past few weeks. Although his line problem could be a lot worse, the backfield is a question mark due to the graduation of all the 1939 regular ball-toters last Spring.

Campers Will Miss Gaffney

Especially missed will be husky Jim Gaffney, who was a standout during all his three years as a regular. Ball also has to find replacements for Tommy Mont, Joe Gulbronson, Lou Bell and Roland Hamilton, all first-string backs last fall.

Bill Yoder, a guard in 1939, has been switched to the backfield where he will fill the fullbacks' shoes. Tommy Rudd, halfback; Bill Chandlee, quarterback, and Bill James, halfback, will probably be Allegany's regular backfield starters. Rudd and Chandlee, both seniors, earned letters last year while James, a junior, was on the jayvee squad last season.

Donald Hillock, regular tackle, and Vernon Miller, regular end last year, are standouts on the line. Fred Sullivan, an end, earned a letter last fall. The other line posts will be filled by boys with some varsity or jayvee experience.

Last year, Allegany won eight of ten battles and piled up 202 points to 35 for teams played. The Campers' setbacks were to Westmont High of Johnstown 7-6 and to Charles Town 7-0. Victories were registered over the West Virginia Deaf School of Romney, Boswell, Hagerstown, Handley, LaSalle, Martinsburg, Keyser and Fort Hill.

Things have also been humming at Fort Hill with the Sentinels hard at work under the direction of Coach Johnny Long, who expects to place a team on the field just as good if not better than last year's combination which won eight of ten tussles, dropping only to Charles Town and Allegany. The Scarlet and White badly outplayed Charles Town but went down 21-20.

Long announced today that the game would be refereed by John Blough with John McDonald as umpire and Mel Henry as head linesman. The Sentinels, who have both red and white jerseys at their disposal, will probably wear white.

Ridgeley, according to Coach Bill Hahn, will be out to shoot the works against Allegany. The tutor at the nearby school said today that several hot battles are raging for starting positions.

Carr, Bennett and Hardman are outstanding ends while Carter, Lindsay and Spriggs are leading in the fight for tackle jobs. At center will be Thomas or Kinsman while guards are Kinsman, Titchnell and J. Bean.

The backfield lineup has proven a puzzler for Hahn with Lookabaugh, Payne, Zimmerman, Washabaugh, Robinson and Adams all trying hard for starting berths.

These Winged Foot bunkers are full of nightmares. Many of them are cut well into the green's edge, and many of them are quite deep. Also, there is often only a fairly small green to hit on an explosion shot.

I still recall the eighth hole. Up to this point Bobby Jones was running away from the field in the 1929 National Open. After a fine drive here his second shot, a 4 iron, kicked off to the right into a guarding trap. His niblick recovery struck the green and then slipped over into another trap. His second niblick returned the ball to the trap he had just left. Here he was playing 5 and still trapped.

He had a tough time getting his 7. If it can happen to the Jones of 1929 it can happen to anyone.

There are practically no breathing spots at Winged Foot. Almost any hole on the course can throw you into sudden panic. The short holes are long and closely guarded. They will wreck more than a few deserving young men hoping to qualify and scramble into match play.

Middle Atlantic Pro Golf Tourney Carded

RICHMOND, Sept. 12 (AP) — The annual golf tournament of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association will be held at the Glenwood Golf Club here on Saturday and Sunday October 4 and 5.

Announcement of plans to hold the tournament called off last spring during a squabble was made jointly by Clyde Pearsall, manager of the Glenwood Club, and Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, president of the Mid-Atlantic association.

The tournament here will be open to all pros and amateurs but the association plans to hold a closed tourney within the Open to pick its annual champion in this manner.

The event will be a 72-hole medal play affair with 36 holes Saturday and the final 36 on Sunday.

Mountaineers To Go Razzle-Dazzle Under Bill Kern

Necessity To Make Coach Abandon Precepts of Sutherland

KINGWOOD, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—Win, lose or draw, the West Virginia Mountaineers are going in for razzle-dazzle this football season.

As a disciple of Dr. John Bain Sutherland, this is foreign to the pigskin precepts learned by Head Coach Bill Kern at the University of Pittsburgh, but necessity is making Kern an opportunist.

All of which should be entertaining from the standpoint of the fans, who are in for some gridiron dipsydo from this first university football team produced by the former Carnegie Tech mentor.

As the Mountaineer squad prepares to wind up its two-weeks training camp this week-end, the reason for the change of strategy by a West Virginia team whose predecessors have taken their football "straight" is obvious:

Lacking power, the old gold and blue must develop deception.

And among the more hopeful notes struck during the pre-season practice have been the showing of some light, fast backs who fit in with this scheme.

Dick McElwee, who lagged in Spring training, is suddenly making a fight for it in the backfield and now appears as a probable starter with Ike Martin, another light, shifty back, at half. Both are triple threatmen.

This would leave the reliable Charlie Seabright free for his quarterback duties, along with plunging Johnny Carliss, who also passes and kicks, at full.

But Kern has suffered some disappointments as well. Walt Pike, upon whom he depended to fill one tackle spot, had not appeared when this was written, and Frank Kimble, a sure starter at the other tackle, wrenched a knee and has not participated in scrimmage to date.

With only five tackles in the squad of two score working out here, and none who might be termned "experienced," Kern is attempting to convert Vic A'Hearn a center, for tackle work.

John Shonk and Bob Mellace appear set at the ends, Johnny Rockis and Vic Peelish, still seem strongest at guards, and Sam Mandich is in the pivot slot.

But Kern, who has among other problems a big replacement worry, is moderately optimistic:

"We'll take some beatings, but we'll win some, too. We're not going out there for the fun of it," he said.

And on this, the faithful are pinning their hopes for a better season than in 1939, when West Virginia won two, lost six and tied one.

Kern does not, however, concede his eleven much chance to win any of the four major games—against Fordham, Kentucky, Penn State or Michigan State.

Others on the schedule are Westminster, the opening game, on Sept. 28, West Virginia Wesleyan, Cincinnati, George Washington and Washington and Lee.

Mountaineers To Go Razzle-Dazzle Under Bill Kern

Necessity To Make Coach Abandon Precepts of Sutherland

KINGWOOD, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP)—Win, lose or draw, the West Virginia Mountaineers are going in for razzle-dazzle this football season.

As a disciple of Dr. John Bain Sutherland, this is foreign to the pigskin precepts learned by Head Coach Bill Kern at the University of Pittsburgh, but necessity is making Kern an opportunist.

All of which should be entertaining from the standpoint of the fans, who are in for some gridiron dipsydo from this first university football team produced by the former Carnegie Tech mentor.

As the Mountaineer squad prepares to wind up its two-weeks training camp this week-end, the reason for the change of strategy by a West Virginia team whose predecessors have taken their football "straight" is obvious:

Lacking power, the old gold and blue must develop deception.

And among the more hopeful notes struck during the pre-season practice have been the showing of some light, fast backs who fit in with this scheme.

Dick McElwee, who lagged in Spring training, is suddenly making a fight for it in the backfield and now appears as a probable starter with Ike Martin, another light, shifty back, at half. Both are triple threatmen.

This would leave the reliable Charlie Seabright free for his quarterback duties, along with plunging Johnny Carliss, who also passes and kicks, at full.

But Kern has suffered some disappointments as well. Walt Pike, upon whom he depended to fill one tackle spot, had not appeared when this was written, and Frank Kimble, a sure starter at the other tackle, wrenched a knee and has not participated in scrimmage to date.

With only five tackles in the squad of two score working out here, and none who might be termned "experienced," Kern is attempting to convert Vic A'Hearn a center, for tackle work.

John Shonk and Bob Mellace appear set at the ends, Johnny Rockis and Vic Peelish, still seem strongest at guards, and Sam Mandich is in the pivot slot.

But Kern, who has among other problems a big replacement worry, is moderately optimistic:

"We'll take some beatings, but we'll win some, too. We're not going out there for the fun of it," he said.

And on this, the faithful are pinning their hopes for a better season than in 1939, when West Virginia won two, lost six and tied one.

Kern does not, however, concede his eleven much chance to win any of the four major games—against Fordham, Kentucky, Penn State or Michigan State.

Others on the schedule are Westminster, the opening game, on Sept 28, West Virginia Wesleyan, Cincinnati, George Washington and Washington and Lee.

Plan Devised To Unsnarl Heavy Downtown Traffic

Chamber's Traffic Committee Suggests Detailed Program for City

A plan devised for the purpose of unraveling downtown Cumberland's snarled traffic conditions was proposed last night by the traffic committee of the chamber of commerce.

Holding their first meeting of the chamber's fiscal year, committee members yesterday examined surveys submitted by the Bureau of Public Roads, the Public Safety Council and the State Roads Commission, then decided to have a preliminary survey made relative to the situation in Cumberland.

The survey contemplated is merely for the purpose of making an inventory of the situation here or in other words to obtain data necessary if a broad program is to be devised and carried out.

Long Session Held

Chairman C. A. Piper and Members William Douglas, W. Donald Smith, John Rodman, John D. Liebau and Police Commissioner James Orr then put their heads together and after a long session came up with the following scheme.

Well aware that the long-contemplated overhead bridge will cost a whale of a lot of money, members decided that if the job is ever accomplished it may be a good idea to let the people who will benefit most help foot the bill.

Approximately 8,000 persons own and drive cars in Cumberland. The committee proposes that each car owner in the city be assessed an automobile tax of $3 per year to pay for the bridge.

This would provide approximately $24,000 per year, a sum considered sufficient to pay the interest and to amortize the city's share of the project over a twenty-year period.

Would Be Saving

Committee members are convinced that once the overhead bridge is constructed, drivers would actually save more than the $3 yearly fee, for the improvement would allow drivers to skip around congested downtown areas thereby saving gas and also, what is often more important, time.

Next suggestion pulled out of the bag by the committee was to take Canal street through to Wineow street over the bed of the C. & O. Canal thereby providing a direct route to South Cumberland tying up with the B. & O. viaduct.

This, the committee points out, would permit turning Mechanic street into a two way thoroughfare and would relieve traffic density on George and Centre streets.

Three-Lane Street

Another proposal advanced for clearing up cramped traffic conditions downtown was making South Centre street, from Pershing to Union, a three-lane street with a left hand turn into Pershing.

In otherwords, the committee proposes to reverse the flow of traffic and instead of going east it will go west. This, members point out, would eliminate the necessity of that ring-around-the rosy timewaster now in effect whereby a driver has to go all the way around to Baltimore street.

Commentnig on the proposed $3 automobile tax, members stated that this levy would take care of any traffic program necessary to relieve pressure in the downtown area.

Frostburg Will Play Birmingham Tonight

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 12 (AP)—Birmingham broke Pittsburgh's streak of five consecutive victories here tonight to take an 18-5 game and remain in the running for the National Amateur Baseball Federation Championship.

Pittsburgh, however, drew a bye for tomorrow's round and thus entered the finals with the winner of the Birmingham-Frostburg, Md., contest.

Tonight's victory was the fifth in succession for the local entry, after a defeat in the opening round. Two defeats eliminates contestants.

The visitors scored twice in the first after Atkins walked three of the first four men to face him, but Jelly Stansberry came to the rescue and had the situation well in hand for the remainder of the game.

Frostburg took the afternoon game from Barberton, O., 11 to 2, in a wild game which saw them score six times in the first on one hit. The defeat eliminated Barberton.

Republican Club To Assist Voters Who Want To Register

Plans to assist voters in registering and arrangements for cars to take them to polling places were made last night at the regular meeting of the Sixth District Republican Club held in the Knights of Malta Hall.

A chairman for each precinct in the district was appointed to handle registration of the voters.

The meeting which was devoted entirely to business was presided over by Fred C. Driscoll, president. Capt. J. Phillip Roman was elected first vice president. Forty members were present.

The club will hold its next regular meeting Tuesday evening, September 26.

Alien Office Here Closes Saturday

Saturday is the last day the alien registration office in the post office will be open, according to Frank L. Storm, who is in charge of the work.

After Saturday any unregistered alien will have to come to the post office and make arrangements for registering.

A total of 243 aliens have been indexed since the work started. Of the total 171 are from Cumberland.

The Italian and English groups led all others in numbers registered with seventy-four and seventy-two respectively.

An Austrian woman came in yesterday and when asked which country she was from jokingly remarked that she wasn't sure, as every time a letter came from home, it told of a new political regime or upheaval.

Chairman Issues Appeal for Popular Contributions to Campaign Fund

Says Dollar Donation May Be Effectual in Saving Democracy

An appeal for general participation in the drive that is being conducted for funds for the Republican campaign in this county was issued yesterday by Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Allegany County.

"It may even be that a dollar contribution will be effectual in saving the cause of democracy," Lewis stated. Those who feel unable to make the usual contributions can help greatly, Lewis feels, if they will only send in a dollar each to the finance committee.

"In the few days that the Fniance committee has been working to raise funds for the campaign," Wilson stated, "much encouragement has been met with in the form of both contributions in money and the many offers of personal services. This is very encouraging but, in order for the campaign to be entirely successful, a large sum of money is needed and it must come from the public.

"Among some of the larger items of expense which I might mention, are those of radio broadcasting, theater hire for meetings, headquarters expenses, clerk hire for registration, stenographic services, rent for headquarters, automobile hire and advertising and also many other important and well known expenses.

"I sincerely hope that the rank and file of the citizenry who are anxious to see Wendell L. Willkie elected president, along with the other members on the Republican party ticket, whose election is essential to a true Willkie success, will see fit, all of them, to make some contribution in money to help finance the campaign. The committee itself will personally interview those who it is thought will gladly make substantial contributions but the committee will not have time to personally interview everyone.

"Therefore, it is my wish as well as the wish of the individual members of the committee that all per-

Gateway Chatter does not intend to become a column for "Advice to the Lovelorn", but is ever ready to render any service possible to its readers and writers of the column will be happy anytime they can help in straightening out a misunderstanding.

A reader of the column writes that his wife left him last Thursday after an argument which he says "can have in Shakesperian style an ending, perhaps tragic, perhaps comic".

This reader says his wife is somewhere in Cumberland but that he does not know where and has asked Gateway to help locate her. So here's his message to her:

"Mom: "I am sorry, my love remains ever faithful to you and you alone. I cannot, at this time, believe that years of genuine love can go asunder in this fashion without so much as words to clarify a disagreement. I have practically an arsenal full of words right now, but I can sum all of them up thusly 'I love you Mom—always'

Many Cumberland and Allegany young men have enlisted in the Army and Navy in recent weeks while others have made inquiries about the possibility of enlisting in the United States Marine Corps.

The Marine Corps does not keep a recruiting officer in Cumberland, regularly at least, so Gateway Chatter is glad to pass on some information just received from the United States Marine Corps Recrutiing Station located in Rooms 323-25 Post Office building, Baltimore.

Applicants must be between the ages of 18 and 25 years. However, applicants will be accepted who are between the ages of 25 and 30 years if they possess special qualifications. They must be single, from 64 to 74 inches in height, have an average education, and be in good physical condition. Those who have ever been convicted by a judge or jury cannot be considered.

In view of the current expansion of the Marine Corps promotions have practically doubled since last year. The Marine Corps, to meet the demands of the new men enlisted, has doubled its educational facilities. Practical instruction can be obtained in automobile mechanics, for armorer, radio, telephones, sound motion picture machines, etc.

In addition to these practical schools, there are offered free correspondence courses to all Marines who desire to better themselves. These courses are the same as those offered by the International Correspondence School. The Marine Corps Institute is directly affiliated with this school, in fact.

There are two recruiting sergeants present at all times in the Post Office Building, Baltimore, Maryland, to interview applicants and impart to them detailed information regarding this popular branch of the service. Mail applications will be promptly answered.

Col. George Henderson Speaks at Legion Meeting Honoring Pershing

Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, with the help of Lieut. Col. George Henderson and former Governor Harry W. Nice, last night paid tribute to General John J. Pershing, who is celebrating his eightieth birthday today.

Col. Henderson was the principal speaker at the meeting honoring the former commander of the American Expeditionary Forces in the World war. He spoke on the war maneuvers, staged recently in New York state by National Guardsmen, in which Company G of Cumberland participated. Inadeaquate equipment and weapons of the United States Army and the conscription act were also discussed by Col. Henderson.

Stresses Preparedness

Despite the deficiency of the army at the present, the time put in on the war games was not wasted, he said. It helped the people to realize the seriousness of the matter.

"We are not in a position to feel safe", he said. "If we want to be safe, we must prepare in advance; the threat is before us".

Col. Henderson touched on the conscription act by saying that it is not fair to expect young men to volunteer their services and that no favoritism should be shown in a selective draft.

A highlight of the evening was the appearance of former-Governor Harry W. Nice, of Baltimore. He said he "just dropped in to pay his respects" and described General Pershing as an outstanding military genius."

Post Commander Claude L. Deal started out the affair by introducing toastmaster Robert C. Bowers, who in turn presented officers of the post and others.

Band Gives Concert

Prior to the ox roast banquet, the thirty-five piece Legion band, under the direction of Joseph M. Fradiska, presented a concert on the porch of the legion home. The concert was scheduled for Constitution park, but it was held at the home because of cool weather.

Other favorites played were "My Country, 'Tis of Thee", "God Bless America", "For Peace and Freedom", "United We Strand", "America Exultant", "Dixie", "Yankee Doodle", "Tramp, Tramp", "Hail Columbia", "My Maryland", "Dixie", "America", "Red, White and Blue", "Marching through Georgia", and many more. "Semper Paratus", the official United States coast guard march song, was also played.

Plan Devised To Unsnarl Heavy Downtown Traffic

Chamber's Traffic Committee Suggests Detailed Program for City

A plan devised for the purpose of unraveling downtown Cumberland's snarled traffic conditions was proposed last night by the traffic committee of the chamber of commerce.

Holding their first meeting of the chamber's fiscal year, committee members yesterday examined surveys submitted by the Bureau of Public Roads, the Public Safety Council and the State Roads Commission, then decided to have a preliminary survey made relative to the situation in Cumberland.

The survey contemplated is merely for the purpose of making an inventory of the situation here or in other words to obtain data necessary if a broad program is to be devised and carried out.

Long Session Held

Chairman C. A. Piper and Members William Douglas, W. Donald Smith, John Rodman, John D. Liebau and Police Commissioner James Orr then put their heads together and after a long session came up with the following scheme.

Well aware that the long-contemplated overhead bridge will cost a whale of a lot of money, members decided that if the job is ever accomplished it may be a good idea to let the people who will benefit most help foot the bill.

Approximately 8,000 persons own and drive cars in Cumberland. The committee proposes that each car owner in the city be assessed an automobile tax of $3 per year to pay for the bridge.

This would provide approximately $24,000 per year, a sum considered sufficient to pay the interest and to amortize the city's share of the project over a twenty-year period.

Would Be Saving

Committee members are convinced that once the overhead bridge is constructed, drivers would actually save more than the $3 yearly fee, for the improvement would allow drivers to skip around congested downtown areas thereby saving gas and also, what is often more important, time.

Next suggestion pulled out of the bag by the committee was to take Canal street through to Wineow street over the bed of the C. & O. Canal thereby providing a direct route to South Cumberland tying up with the B. & O. viaduct.

This, the committee points out, would permit turning Mechanic street into a two way thoroughfare and would relieve traffic density on George and Centre streets.

Three-Lane Street

Another proposal advanced for clearing up cramped traffic conditions downtown was making South Centre street, from Pershing to Union, a three-lane street with a left hand turn into Pershing.

In otherwords, the committee proposes to reverse the flow of traffic and instead of going east it will go west. This, members point out, would eliminate the necessity of that ring-around-the rosy time-waster now in effect whereby a driver has to go all the way around to Baltimore street.

Commentnig on the proposed $3 automobile tax, members stated that this levy would take care of any traffic program necessary to relieve pressure in the downtown area.

Chairman Issues Appeal for Popular Contributions to Campaign Fund

Says Dollar Donation May Be Effectual in Saving Democracy

An appeal for general participation in the drive that is being conducted for funds for the Republican campaign in this county was issued yesterday by Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Allegany County.

"It may even be that a dollar contribution will be effectual in saving the cause of democracy," Lewis stated. Those who feel unable to make the usual contributions can help greatly, Lewis feels, if they will only send in a dollar each to the finance committee.

"In the few days that the Fniance committee has been working to raise funds for the campaign," Wilson stated, "much encouragement has been met with in the form of both contributions in money and the many offers of personal services. This is very encouraging but, in order for the campaign to be entirely successful, a large sum of money is needed and it must come from the public.

"Among some of the larger items of expense which I might mention, are those of radio broadcasting, theater hire for meetings, headquarters expenses, clerk hire for registration, stenographic services, rent for headquarters, automobile hire and advertising and also many other important and well known expenses.

"I sincerely hope that the rank and file of the citizenry who are anxious to see Wendell L. Willkie elected president, along with the other members on the Republican party ticket, whose election is essential to a true Willkie success, will see fit, all of them, to make some contribution in money to help finance the campaign. The committee itself will personally interview those who it is thought will gladly make substantial contributions but the committee will not have time to personally interview everyone.

"Therefore, it is my wish as well as the wish of the individual members of the committee that all per-
